APPLAUD TAFT DURING RALLY FOR ROOSEVELT

President Shares Honors With Rival at Opening of Progressives' Campaign.

VACANT SEATS IN TEMPLE

Gov. Stubbs and Ex-Gov. Fort Speakers; Col. Roosevelt Sends Greetings.

THE first big public meeting to be held in the United States in the interest of Colonel Theodore Roosevelt, who wants a third term as President, and who is fighting President Taft for the next Republican nomination, was held last night at Tremont Temple under the auspices of the Massachusetts Progressives.

The rally was disappointing to the Roosevelt cohorts. In several different ways it looked like a frost.

The hall holds something like 3,000. There were not more than 2,200 there. The applause was not spirited, and what there was of it when the name of Roosevelt was mentioned came mainly from a squad of men stationed in the front of the main hall.

President Taft was as loudly applauded as Roosevelt. Governor Stubbs, who is a good speaker, was in the midst of his address when a man in the gallery arose and shouted:

What's the Matter With Stubbs?

"What's the matter with you fellers? Three cheers for Governor Stubbs of Kansas."

Three cheers for Governor Stubbs of good, hearty cheers. Then the gallery man proposed three cheers for Theodore Roosevelt. They were offered but many people did not believe they were as enthusiastic as the cheers that went up for Governor Stubbs.

The crowd began to file into the hall at 7:30. By 8 o'clock the hall was pretty well filled up. In the first balcony there were many women. But the audience was restless. There were frequent whistles and catcalls—something that appeared out of place at Tremont Temple, where religious services are held regularly.

The speakers walked on the platform at 8:05. They were Colonel Thomas P. Doherty of Boston, who presided; Moses H. Clapp, United States Senator of Minnesota; Governor Stubbs of Kansas and former Governor Fort of New Jersey.

Colonel Doherty was welcomed and applauded. He spoke of the railroad monopoly of New England.

Gave Away the B. & A.

"Some years ago," he said, "the Boston & Albany Railroad was wrested from us. I could mention the name of the man who gave it away."

Voice from the centre of the hall—"Senator Crane gave it away."

"Yes," he continued, "I consider it one of the greatest crimes that was ever enacted in Massachusetts. If we had had a progressive Governor at the time it would never have happened."

A letter was read from Colonel Roosevelt. In this letter the Colonel used that old phrase, "practical men," that he used in his talk with Harriman.

"We hold, also," wrote Colonel Roosevelt, "that because of the very fact that we are idealists, we are in the truest sense of the word practical men, for we intend in good faith to try to realize our ideals."

The National Roosevelt Committee of Chicago also sent a letter which was read. In this letter the committee said:

"The nation appears five to one for Roosevelt and the only question confronting the people is to convert this sentiment into delegates to the Chicago convention."

Former Governor Fort of New Jersey said that the fights against the trusts under Taft amounted to nothing.

"Take the tobacco trust," he said. "Who doubts that it is stronger today than it ever was and that about all that has been done has been to give it an immunity bath."

Gov. Stubbs' Tribute.

In the course of his speech, Governor Stubbs said:

"There is imperative need at this time of a great leader who possesses genuine constructive ability and statesmanship, with a world grasp of industrial, commercial and financial conditions. The crisis that we are confronting will not lead to bloodshed, for the program of the Progressives is based wholly upon the principles of patriotism and reason—but it is nevertheless a crisis that calls for the

And Plymouth, 291 Years After Everything's in the Books. Votes For License.

If the town of Plymouth had done 291 years ago what was done yesterday, Myles Standish would never have bothered John Alden about it, Alden wouldn't have gone snooping around old man Mullin's house, Priscilla wouldn't have made that celebrated remark about speaking for yourself, old top, Longfellow wouldn't have had a monument in Portland, Maine, and T. R. wouldn't have had a precedent for going back on W. H. Taft.

Plymouth voted "Yes" on the liquor license yesterday, 922 to 810.

Charles W. Eaton and Thomas Swan were hilled off in the Board of Selectmen. Ephraim D. Bartlett and James W. Hazen got their yellow jackets.

MAYOR BLOWS TIN HORN.

His Honor Makes Merry at a Ball in Palm Beach Hotel.

For once in his life Fitz was a Hi-horn sport.

It was at the grand ball at the Breakers Hotel, Palm Beach, yesterday morning. It was early in the morning, about 1 o'clock, in fact.

Dispatches last night from Palm Beach relate that the ball lovers included tin horns, paper opera hats and such decorations for the men and butterfly hats, sunbonnets, parasols and other acceptable gifts for the ladies. Very pretty and durable, too, were some of the parasols and head-gear.

The Mayor, heading a large and enthusiastic party from the largest city in Suffolk County, Massachusetts, grabbed a tin horn and blew lustily upon it. So did the other men. Being a "tin-horn" was such a novelty to His Honor that he made the most of it.

GIRLS FEAR THE RULER.

Walk Softly Before Principal Who Threatened to Use It.

GREAT BARRINGTON, March 2.—Miss Leslie Purdon, who came here last Fall from Harvard to be principal of the Searles High School, has, at this end of the first half-year, effected wholesome changes in the discipline.

Miss Purdon gave warning when he came that he would punish with the ruler girls as well as boys. The girls took that to heart, apparently, for no girl has been "smacked" yet. But the girls were bothered at first by the rule against talking too much with boys on Main street after school.

One girl chatting with a boy on the street after being warned spied the principal, dashed into a store and hid behind a counter. The principal followed her, pulled her out and lectured her before clerks and customers.

Counsel Rejects Corrected Grand Jury Transcript.

LOS ANGELES, March 2.—Earl Rogers, one of the lawyers representing the defence in the trial of Clarence S. Darrow, the Chicago attorney, charged with bribery in the McNamara dynamiting case, announced to correspondents just before entering court today that the corrected grand jury transcript would not be accepted. He said the defence would move to quash the indictments. According to a ruling already handed down by Judge Hutton the transcript is incorrect. This means that the indictments may be quashed and Darrow dismissed. The court is now in session.

PRESIDENT PUTS MEXICAN DANGER UP TO CONGRESS

Informs Powers U. S. Cannot Be Responsible For Lives in State of Anarchy.

AMERICANS ARE WARNED

Monroe Doctrine at Stake; Others Ready to Act if We Do Not Intervene.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Admitting it is not able to protect the lives of American citizens in Mexico, or to guarantee the safety of their property under the state of anarchy that now exists, without physical intervention, the United States Government today cabled to Ambassador Wilson at Mexico City, instructing him to warn all Americans to leave the danger zones without delay.

A dispatch later from Mexico City from Ambassador Wilson says he issued a bulletin to all Americans in the republic today, saying that "owing to the disturbed conditions in Mexico and the lawlessness prevailing in many sections, with which the government, with the best intentions, cannot at all times cope, the Department of State at Washington deems it its duty to advise all Americans at present residing in localities known to be dangerous, or in isolated spots where protection cannot be afforded, to remove without delay therefrom, bearing in all cases where possible their property or abandoned effects in charge of the nearest American consular officer."

Following the cablegram the President summoned the ambassadors of France, Germany, Great Britain and Spain to the State Department, where they were informed by Huntington Wilson, acting Secretary of State, of the action taken by the American government.

Cannot Protect Lives.

By this act the administration specifically admits that not only is it unable to protect the lives of its own citizens, but that it will not be responsible for the safety of the lives and property of other citizens of nations now in Mexico.

The President thus puts the issue directly up to Congress. Either he must be authorized to send troops over the Mexican border and restore order by force of arms, or the Monroe doctrine must be abandoned as an active force and other nations be permitted to step in and protect their own citizens.

On leaving the State Department, the four ambassadors called complete details of the situation in Mexico as related to the United States to their own governments. At least three of the four governments whose citizens are thus left without protection by the United States are undoubtedly, even now, considering the necessity of intervention on their own behalf.

Condition of Anarchy.

It was pointed out here today that the situation in Mexico is not one of a single force rebelling against a government, but a condition of complete anarchy in which no one is responsible to anybody else.

That the United States is not able to meet the situation and restore order in Mexico, if Congress will give authority, is illustrated by the fact that not only is the entire mobile army in readiness to move, but that a plan of campaign has been completed by the Army War College, in Washington.

Coincident with his instructions to Ambassador Wilson, President Taft issued a proclamation to all citizens of the United States now in Mexico or contemplating a visit to that country, warning them against participation in the disturbances there.

Proclamation a Warning.

"It will be observed," said Acting Secretary Huntington Wilson, "that the proclamation is not a declaration of neutrality, nor is it in any way a recognition of a state of belligerency in Mexico. It is merely an admonition and warning to all persons within the jurisdiction of the United States and to American citizens generally, to obey carefully and strictly the laws of the United States and to hold themselves wholly aloof from all participation of whatever kind in the present disturbances in Mexico."

DUKE GOES SKATING.

Connaught, Though Ill, Poses for Moving Pictures at Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Ont., March 2.—Leaving a sick bed, the Duke of Connaught, Governor-General of Canada, went skating with the Duchess and Princess Patricia today at the Royal Skating rink in order to allow moving picture operators to snap motion pictures of "Royalty on the Ice." The Ducal family was accompanied by the entire royal household.

"Really, I Never Saw Such a Sight. It Would Do Anyone's Heart Good to See Those Famished Children Scramble for Pea Soup and Two Slices of Bread. Some Ate One Slice and Took the Other Home to Family."
—Mrs. J. C. Barr on Lawrence Soup Kitchens.

Mrs. James C. Barr of Beacon street, Boston, and two of the strikers' children.

Mrs. James C. Barr, a well-known society and club woman of Beacon street, went to Lawrence the past week and helped to feed more than 700 children one day at dinner in the soup kitchen on Common street.

She put on an apron, poured out soup and handed out bread to the children.

Never before in all her life, says Mrs. Barr, has she had such an experience. The touching stories of many children moved her greatly, and she was glad that she could be of help in this good cause.

Next week she is to return to Lawrence with a few Back Bay women, that they may also engage in the work of feeding the hungry children of the strikers. Here is Mrs. Barr's own story, written by her for the Sunday AMERICAN, of her experiences in Lawrence:

By MRS. JAMES C. BARR.

IN company with a clergyman—a student of social science—I went to Lawrence to see what I could do to help the hungry children of the strikers.

One has heard so much about these children of late that I thought it was my duty to see if I could do anything to them.

I was perfectly delighted with my experience. As soon as I arrived at the place on Common street where they are feeding these children three times a day, I found nearly a hundred children of all sizes waiting outside. I could not resist talking with some of them. Many are so attractive and so small. It seems a pity that they have to stand out so long in the cold waiting for the doors to be opened, but the accommodations are limited, no doubt.

They should have a room to wait in out of the cold.

When I climbed the stairs leading to the kitchen, I found three women arranging the tables. There were four tables on this floor and two on the floor underneath. Pea soup was being cooked on four stoves. I tasted it to see if the children would like it. It was very good. On the table near the stove were many loaves of bread. I never saw such quantities of bread.

"Sunny Jim" Privileged.

But what took my eye on this floor was a privileged character, a little fellow not more than four years old, sitting on a soap box, that they called "Sunny Jim." He was a real funny character.

There he was sitting with his feet tangling over the box eating dry bread. I had such a nice talk with this little fellow. He was so interesting. His hair had not been combed for some time. His face beamed all over with smiles behind the dirt streaks that you could not help seeing. You could easily overlook these as I listened to his chattering. He was so amusing. You could not help growing fond of him. He had no breakfast except what he got here and was perfectly happy with his bread, holding in his hand a top and string that he tried in vain to spin.

I thought that this would be good work for the clergyman to do, so he began spinning the top for this youngsters. This amused the little fellow immensely.

While all this was going on preparations were well under way for serving the pea soup.

I must help here, I thought. In five minutes the doors would be open and the children would be inside. Some of them were already on the floor beneath.

Rush of Tiny Feet.

So I put on a long apron. There they were coming. I could hear the rushing of their feet on the floor beneath.

Well, believe me, I never saw such a sight. It would do any one's heart good to see those famished children scramble for their pea soup and two slices of bread. I do not know how many pieces of bread I handed over to the children as they came up the stairs to take their places at the tables. Some of them have such beautiful faces. You could not help noticing them.

There was "Sunny Jim" over in his place, eating away at his bread. I could not lose sight of that little fellow. I do not believe that he took kindly to the soup. He told me that he liked cocoa better. He said this in such a way that it provoked a smile from all those who heard his chattering.

"Gimme more bread, please?" he said.

"Well, you shall have more bread," I said, and then in each hand he took a slice of bread and alternately took a bite.

With each bite he would look up, and it was worth coming all the way from Boston and giving up every engagement to see that child eat.

I do not believe that child gets much to eat, and

LAWRENCE MILL STRIKE CRISIS COMES TO-MORROW

Strike Leaders Refuse Offer of 5 Per Cent. Wage Increase and Demand Ettor's Freedom, but Will Meet Owners Again

Governor Foss Believed to Have Forced Concessions from the Operators by Threatening to Withdraw the State Troops

Wool Trust Heads Were Also Afraid of Federal Inquiry and Effect of Expose of How the Protective Tariff Works

THE crisis in the big Lawrence textile strike comes tomorrow. All the mills have offered concessions to the strikers. These offers have been flatly refused by the committees representing the two organized bodies of strikers—the members of the American Federation of Labor and of the Industrial Workers of the World.

Notices have been posted in all of the mills asking the strikers to come back with a raise of pay, beginning tomorrow. This increase in pay, it is promised, will not be less than 5 per cent. on the pay received under the 54-hour law. In some cases, mainly those who receive the smaller wages, the increase will reach 10 per cent.

But the leaders of the strike have advised the striking operatives not to accept this, on the ground that it is not enough. Every effort possible will be made by the strike leaders to prevent operatives from returning to work tomorrow morning.

On the other hand, Acting Marshal Sullivan will have his whole available police force, backed by the militia in reserve, on duty tomorrow morning to prevent interference by the strikers with those who wish to return.

GOVERNOR'S ULTIMATUM MADE MILL OWNERS ACT.

While there have been various stories told as to just what caused the mill owners to make their offer to the strikers, it became known yesterday that Governor Foss took a decisive hand in the matter.

The Governor became convinced that it was about time that the mill owners made some move toward settling the difficulty that was costing the State $4,000 a day, and said to them early last week, in substance:

"I'll give you until Saturday to make a move toward settling the strike or I'll withdraw the militia from Lawrence."

The mill owners were frightened. They consulted with one another. Then they appealed to the Governor to wait until Monday.

"No; you must do something by Saturday," he reiterated. And on Friday all of the mill owners had offered concessions to the strikers.

Representatives of the strikers are to confer again with the mill owners tomorrow, with the hope that the operatives may receive more favorable consideration.

The strikers have received many donations of money from the outside.

EXODUS OF CHILDREN EXCITED WHOLE COUNTRY.

The arrest of Ettor and the removal of the children from Lawrence to New York and later the stopping by force of the removal of the children attracted the attention of the whole country to the textile conditions in Lawrence. There is no great strike on in any other part of the country, and purses were opened in every section of the land.

Just how much money has been

ARRESTS TO DATE IN LAWRENCE

The number of people arrested in connection with the Lawrence strike up to Friday was 465. They are classified as follows:

Disturbing the peace	65
Assault on officers	36
Drunkenness	212
Violation of city ordinances	35
Assault with intent to murder	2
Rioting	30
Carrying a dangerous weapon	22
Intimidation	26
Conspiracy	7
Keeping dynamite without license	11
Accessory to murder	2
Molesting soldiers	14
Assault with a dangerous weapon	2
Resisting an officer	1
Total	465

The fines imposed by the court in cases where the defendants were found guilty amount to $2,275.00.

Cases appealed, 96.

Number committed to jails, 162.

CRISIS IN LAWRENCE STRIKE TOMORROW

poured into Lawrence for the strikers cannot be told, as no official figures have been given out, but it has been estimated that the sum will reach somewhere between $15,000 and $30,000.

The demands of the Industrial Workers of the World, it was stated yesterday, still stand. They want a raise of 15 per cent., double pay for overtime, the abolition of the premium system, all strikers taken back, and have added this:

"The freedom of Ettor."

The fact that Ettor being in the hand of the courts, and thus not a matter of compromise, seems to have been overlooked.

Protests were sent to Governor Foss yesterday against the alleged action of members of the State police, who were charged with having clubbed a woman striker, breaking some of her ribs. The charge that this was done was made at a meeting of the strike committee.

Fear Federal Inquiry.

It was suggested by those who recalled Neill's investigations of the Chicago packers some years ago when there was a strike that his appearance in Lawrence may have been an element in causing the mill men to formulate some concessions to the strikers.

It was recalled that when Neill went to Chicago and looked into the stock yards and let the big packers know some of the things he had found out, there was a speedy end to the strike. It is not believed that the Lawrence mill owners want a Federal inquiry into their business, and it is barely possible that President Taft has let them know that he does not care for an expose of the actual workings of the protective tariff in connection with the textile industry at this critical political time.

According to counts made by soldiers the number of operatives who are at work in various Lawrence mills is much less than has been reported. Here are some of the figures obtained yesterday:

Pacific mills, capacity 5,200. At work Friday, 2,601; yesterday, 2,453. Agent Parker yesterday claimed that 80 per cent. of the force was at work.

Washington mills, capacity 6,500. At work Thursday, 978; Friday, 978; yesterday, 950.

Women Tells of Clubbing.

Mrs. Bertha Carosso, the wife of a striker, twenty-three years of age, is in the hands of Drs. Howard and Moretti, as the result of an alleged clubbing by the police. She lives at No. 144 Common street. This is her story:

"I was on my way down Common street to meet my husband when a meeting held in Cabot Hall adjourned. There were nine or ten of us women together watching the crowd, when we saw a group of Metropolitan policemen running toward us.

"We were not frightened because we had said and done nothing to be afraid of. The first thing we knew those men jumped on us like mad dogs. Without a word of warning they began beating us with their clubs.

"I had no chance to run away, for I was jammed in between three or four big men.

Fell Unconscious.

"The first woman that was hit was an old woman, about sixty-five years old. Then a policeman pushed me over a low wire fence. I tried to rise when I was poked and he struck in the back.

"As I escaped from him another policeman got me by the neck and shoulders and pushed me until I thought he would never stop.

"I finally reached the steps, where my brother found me. Then I fell and knew nothing until I woke up in a drugstore, where I had been taken by a passing cab."

Miss Alice Franceschi, sister of Mrs. Carosso, was also struck and punched in the side several times.

The Industrial Workers of the World, for the first time since the strike began on January 12, opened their books to a reporter for the AMERICAN. It was stated that when the strike began they had $250 in the treasury. From that date up to February 12 they collected $5,600. The receipts from that time on were as follows:

I. W. W. Opens Books.

Feb. 12, $1,190; Feb. 13, $3,824.44; Feb. 14, $2,429.75; Feb. 15, $3,482.86; Feb. 16, $1,183.28; Feb. 17, $1,122.11; Feb. 19, $3,334.66; Feb. 20, $1,738.83; Feb. 21, $648.44; Feb. 22, $581.76; Feb. 23, $868.57; Feb. 24, $827.47; Feb. 26, $2,753.69. Feb. 27, $6,410.19; Feb. 28, $740.35. Total, $34,887.30.

The expenditures yesterday, as shown by the stubs of their check books, and which were said to be typical of their daily disbursements, were as follows:

Russian kitchen, $42.64; Lawrence Market, $88.50; coal for the week, $417.50; Greeks, $146.75; grocery, $484.25; Italians, $1,156.66; printing, $26; Poles (Polish people), $200; French, $44.50; Greeks, $70.96; total, $2,677.76.

Sixteen people are employed in the office of the strike committee. The bookkeepers receive a salary of $3 a week. This amount is paid them as expenses for their board.

The general committee of the strikers of the Arlington and Pacific Mills, connected with the C. L. U., agreed to accept the concessions of five per cent. This agreement will allow those affiliated with the C. L. U. to return to work tomorrow.

Reject Owners' Offer.

The stationery firemen held a meeting last night at No. 813 Common street, Lawrence. About 175 attended. They are affiliated with the A. F. of L. They passed a vote to the effect that the mill owners' concession of 5 per cent. increase was inadequate and should be rejected.

They threaten to go on strike. If they do it will complicate matters badly, as the firemen and their assistants all have personal licenses and it would be next to impossible to replace them.

Since the strike bega nseven weeks ago there have been 465 arrests in connection with it. About eighty of the arrests were women, nearly all of the women having been arrested within the past two weeks.

More than 20,000 meals have been served to needy children at the relief station opened Monday at No. 543 Common street by Walter Shepherd, the social worker of Fitchburg. In one case he has been furnishing food for a widow with ten children who is critically ill and penniless. Three times a day food has been supplied to this family.

The loss of his baby daughter, it became known yesterday, caused Mr. Shepherd to go to Lawrence and help take care of the needy children.

"Three weeks before I heard the cry of the sufferers in Lawrence," said Mr. Shepherd, "I lost my baby daughter. I could hardly bear the departure of my dear one, but as I thought of my own child the picture of thousands of children in Lawrence without warmth and food seemed to imprint itself on my mind more and more vividly.

Feeding the Children.

"I was inspired to action by the belief that if I could not save my baby perhaps I could do something for the Lord by helping the famished tots of Lawrence.

"So I called on several prominent persons who have assisted me in my rescue mission work and appealed to them for help. They gave me letters of recommendation and in many cases they contributed funds. I went back to Lawrence and secured the use of the vacant store at No. 543 Common street. I had tickets printed announcing that children would be given meals. These were distributed among the children several days in advance of the opening of our kitchen.

"Groups of youngsters gathered around the store two days before the doors were opened. They pressed their eager faces against the window glass and longingly awaited to be let in. Some of the tots remained there for hours at a time. This more than ever convinced me that they were really hungry.

"The first meal was served Monday morning and the number that came then took my breath away. At noon they came in still larger numbers, and in the afternoon their numbers were practically doubled. I did not know what to do. When I came here I was prepared to feed about 200 a day, and I had no idea that nearly 3,000 would come in each day.

MRS. BARR TELLS OF STRIKE CONDITIONS

he is so cute. I only wish that some of my friends in the Back Bay could have seen this little fellow get rid of the bread. I really could not take my eyes off him.

Going around watching the other children and pouring out soup for them into little mugs brought me into close touch with many of them.

Hungry but Happy.

While they were hungry, they appeared to be so happy. They did not have any butter or jam on this bread. Our children would never eat bread without butter, but these children first ate the soft bread and left the crusts till the last. I saw one little fellow, barely tall enough to reach the table, soaking his bread in the soup. He certainly was enjoying it.

I went over to him and said to him quietly: "Tell me, little man, did you have anything to eat today?" He shied at first and did not attempt to answer. "Nope," he said. "My mother is sick and she can't get us anything to eat."

"But where is your father?" I inquired.

"I don't know," he replied. Here was on of the sad tragedies of the strike. I suppose that the father had gone away from home to seek work, and the mother had not heard from him. In the meantime this soup kitchen, under the charge of Walter Shepard, has been a great blessing.

Such a place must do good, and there are many such cases as this one.

Over on one table I espied a bright-looking girl, who had such a sweet face. You could not help being attracted to her. "Well, honey, how do you like the soup?" I ventured to ask her. She smiled and hesitated for a while and then mere said, "I like the cocoa better."

"But you can't have cocoa all the time. You must have a change, and this is excellent pea soup," I said. Then she made an effort to take more of the soup and took a large bit of bread with it.

Charming Little Girls.

There were such charming faces in those girls. I was glad to go around among them. They were so well behaved. I really never felt so well repaid for working among them, and I feel assured that my friends in Boston would have the same feelings that I had.

But there is always something touching about such scenes. When I went down stairs to see what I could do at the tables, I came across a young girl about ten, with her little sister. They were sitting underneath the stairway and this ten-year-old girl was feeding with a spoon her little sister. For three days this family had very little to eat, so I was told, and it was a sight to see this older sister feed the younger sister, who seemed so weak. It looked like a little nest with the mother bird feeding the fledglings.

I could not stand this. It was too much for me. I think that if any woman in the Back Bay saw this, it would have moved her to come up here weekly and feed these children.

Afterward I had a long talk with the older girl. Ever since they came to this country they have had a hard time. The mother is young and has been ill and been to the hospital three times. I went to this home and found a young mother lying ill. Her children came to her while I was there with half a loaf of bread and a knife, asking her to cut them off a slice or two. This poor woman gets help every week. It amounts to $2 and she keeps herself and three children on that sum.

Share Bread at Home.

To go back to the soup kitchen. I saw so many touching incidents there. One little girl was taking home a slice of bread. She had eaten one with her soup, but with the other she was going home to give it to her younger brother.

But that child went home with four slices. I made her eat the slice that belonged to her, and with the other slices she went down the stairs directly home, so happy and contented.

I found afterward that many children were carrying home a slice or two of bread.

After all had been fed—and probably in all seven hundred had received bread and soup—I sat down and thought over what I had gone through.

Was it worth while coming all this distance to feed little children? I gave up a very important engagement. It was worth while in every way. I did so enjoy talking to the children.

They are not to blame for this strike.

Poor little things, when I saw them carrying home slices of bread to their mothers or brothers or sisters, I simply could not keep back the tears.

Milk for Mamma.

After the soup kitchen closed I went to other places of relief and saw what is being done for the mothers at the Central Labor Union headquarters on Broadway. While much was painful to witness here, and I heard the record of many sad cases from those in charge, I must say that the cry of the children appealed more to me.

But what do you think, "Sunny Jim" that I had met was outside the door of this relief place with an empty quart bottle.

"Why, 'Sunny Jim,' where have you come from?" I said to him. "Did you not get enough to eat down at the soup kitchen?"

"Yes'm," he said, "but mother wants milk."

I took him into a grocery store near by and filled his bottle.

Oh, such a happy face shining out through dark eyes, now brighter than ever, as he scampered away with his milk bottle filled.

I have nothing to say about the strike. I did not go up there with any intention to look into this or that side of the matter. I simply went up to Lawrence to feel that I could do something for the hungry children that this clergyman told me about.

I never enjoyed anything so much. Every moment of the time was well spent. I love the children. I like to speak to them. I find something in what are called gammins of the street. I had a delightful talk with a few of these types of boys when I was waiting for my train at the station. They made me laugh so with their frolics.

I had such a good time that if I can get the opportunity I am going to have some of my Back Bay friends go up next week and see the children eat dry bread.

BERGER HURLS BACK BILL COX GAVE TO CHILDREN

WASHINGTON, March 2.—Grabbing a five-dollar bill from a hat that was being passed around for the benefit of the wan and haggard child textile strikers of Lawrence, Mass., who appeared before the House Committee on Rules this afternoon, Representative Victor L. Berger hurled it into the face of its donor, Louis Cox, postmaster of Lawrence.

"We don't want your money. It's blood money," cried Berger dramatically. "We'll take care of our own without your help."

Instantly Cox and R. J. McCarthy, a banker from Lawrence, made a dash for Berger. An adult striker hurried to the aid of Berger, but members of the committee and several lawyers jumped between them and prevented a clash.

With tense and angry visage, the banker on one side and the Socialist and the strikers on the other, stood face to face, scarce two feet between. Then with features relaxed but eyes still dancing with rage, Cox and McCarthy left the room.

Children Tell Stories.

Little slaves of the Lawrence textile mills, some of them marked for life with the cruelty of the machinery, today told pitiful stories of working conditions in the big mills on the Merrimac.

This country never before beheld such a pathetic exhibit as the thirteen little boys and girls who had been brought here to tell their own stories and the stories of their fathers in their efforts to live on the pitiful wages that they are able to earn.

They met before the Rules Committee of the House in the room where recntly the Mony Kings of America—Carnegie, Hill, Gary—met to talk about millions with less appreciation than the mill toilers would mention pennies.

And behind both stories—those of the millionaires and those of the mill slaves—loomed the same cause. The towering tariff. It made the money for the steel man, so that Carnegie sold his holdings for $420,000,000 and could have had a great deal more. It makes the money for the Lawrence mill men and is supposed to help pay decent wages—which it dos not.

In the delegation, as one of the strike leaders who accompanied the children to Washington, was Miss Josephine Liss, a beautiful Polish girl who is known as the Joan of Arc of the strike. She was arrested in Lawrence after slapping the face of a young soldier and taking away his gun.

"Look at the slit in this dress," said Miss Liss to the committee. "That cut in the dress was made by a bayonet in the hands of a guardsman. I barely escaped serious injury."

Pearl Shinberg, thirteen years of age, and a very pretty girl, told the committee that she worked from 6:45 a. m. until 5:30 p. m.

"I am a twister," said the child, "and I earn from $3.50 to $4 a week."

Boy Supports Family of Five.

This is the story told by John Bardella, a little over fourteen years of age:

"I am the only one of a family of five able to work. Until the strike began I earned $5.29 a week. There are two other children in the family smaller than I am. My mother is sick and my father is not strong. My pay had to support all of us."

Charlie Dhooghe, fourteen years of age, told this story:

"I can earn about $5 a week. That has to support all the family."

Among the girls of the party was Camilla Teoli. Camilla's scalp was barren of hair. On account of that, she attracted particular attention when she came to tell her story of the committee. Camilla said:

"I had long hair once, but it was caught in a big wheel. It was torn right out by the roots. It hurt me fearfully. I was in the hospital seven months. I did not get a cent of pay until I got back to work.

"The mill company did not pay me any wages while I was in the hospital. All my pay when I'm working is used to support our family."

Congressman Testifies.

Surrounded by the children, who came to tell the committee how they were held in riot-ridden Lawrence, Representative Wilson of Pennsylvania was the first witness. He is the author of the resolution to which Representative Gillett of Massachusetts objected on the floor of the House a few days ago.

"Stories have been published," said Wilson, "that the police power of Lawrence was used to prevent the children of strikers from leaving the strike centre. So far as I know, there has never occurred in all the history of trade disputes any conditions that have approached or approximated those alleged to exist in Lawrence.

"It was the height of cruelty to prevent parents from sending the children from the strike zone of suffering, starvation and privation. So far as I know, there was no civil remedy which could have been invoked at the time the policemen and militiamen forcibly beat back children from the train.

"The difference between continental life and American life is freedom of action, and yet here in Lawrence we have had the basic principles of the bane of life in Russia and in countries where the police espionage prevents citizens from going and coming as they please."

Representative Berger brought the boys into the committee room. All of them wore the garments of toil. Heavy grey shirts, patched trousers, sweaters and wool caps were the background for the lean faces of the youngsters. One of them wore a new and freshly-pressed suit.

"He doesn't look much like a starving child," said one of the spectators, and then it was discovered that Robert, Jr., son of Chairman Henry, had got mixed up with the little strikers.

Whiskey and Pine for Colds

Fine Formula for Old Time Remedy Cured Thousands Here Last Winter.

The increased use of whiskey for colds is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. "From your druggist get two ounces of Glycerine and half an ounce of Concentrated Pine Compound. Take these two ingredients home and put them into a half pint of good whiskey. Shake well and take one to two teaspoonfuls after each meal and at bedtime." Smaller doses to children according to age. This treatment often knocks the worst cough or cold in a day. But be sure to get only the genuine (Globe) Concentrated Pine. Each half ounce bottle comes in a sealed tin screw-top case. If your druggist does not have it in stock he will quickly get it. Don't experiment with cheap uncertain mixtures. It is very risky. Local druggists say this has had a marvelous demand for the past six years.

FIND THOUSANDS HIDDEN BY THIEF

Big Department Store Robbed But Money Is Recovered Before It Is Taken Away.

Several thousand dollars in bills, stolen from the vaults of the James A. Houston Company yesterday afternoon, was recovered later, before the thief had a chance to remove it from the premises.

The thief planned the theft with a particular view to having all Sunday before the loss was discovered. But this well-laid plan fell through.

Thadeus Flerzbick, aged twenty-two, of No. 291 E Street, South Boston, was arrested last night by four inspectors from police headquarters charged with the larceny of $8,000 from the company. He was employed in the store as an electrician.

It was his custom to accompany the cashier, Miss Nellie McNellis, to the basement of the store, where the vault is located, with the day's receipts, after the store is closed. When searched by the police, a drill, two jimmies and a knife with a badly hacked edge was found on his person.

At the end of the shopping day the cash from the office is placed in the strong box in the vault by one or more employe detailed for that duty. The general supervisor soon after time of closing the store yesterday, found the door of the vault open. The inner doors of the vault were then opened. The strong box or cash box was missing. It was known that this box contained several thousand dollars in bills.

Police headquarters was notified. At the same time careful search was begun by trusted clerks. The strong box was found in a pile of papers in the store cellar. It had been cut open, like a can is opened with a can-opener. It was empty.

A few minutes later the bills which had been put in the cash box were found in another part of the cellar behind a bale of cloth. Doubtless the thief had not had time to secrete the money on his person, fearing interruption.

A hasty checking up of the cash showed that all the money that had been in the cash box was discovered.

DEGRAFF ACQUITTED.

Jury Out All Night Clears Cook Accused of Barge Murder.

William DeGraff, the cook on the barge Glendower, who was charged with the murder of his captain, Charles D. Wyman, was found not guilty by a jury in the United States court yesterday, after more than fourteen hours' deliberation. The jury argued all night. A verdict was reached at 6:45 o'clock in the morning. DeGraff wept when he was told the jury found him innocent. He was freed at once on motion by United States District Attorney Mark Sullivan.

TEN WEEKS IN BED—EMINENT PHYSICIANS FAILED—WONDERFUL RECOVERY.

I wish to inform you of the great benefit I have derived from the use of Swamp-Root. I had been a sufferer for more than twenty years from kidney and liver trouble and was almost constantly treated by the most eminent physicians, who could only give me temporary relief. I had been in bed ten weeks when I began the use of Swamp-Root. Inside of twenty-four hours I could see that I had been greatly benefited. I continued to use Swamp-Root until I had used several bottles, when I really felt that my old trouble was completely cured, and I am positive that any person suffering with kidney or liver trouble can be cured by the use of this preparation.

I am now in the best of health, better than I have been for ten years or more. I do not know how to express myself as strongly as I desire, in favor of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, as I am sure that it saved my life and that my good health is due entirely to this great remedy. I heartily recommend it to every sufferer, and am confident they can be benefited as I have been. It is a pleasure for me, gentlemen, to hand you this recommendation.

MRS. H. J. PRICE.
1334 Center St., Portsmouth, Ohio.

Personally appeared before me this 13th of September, 1909, Mrs. H. J. Price, who subscribed the above statement and made oath that the same is true in substance and in fact.

MISS ANNA HALEY, WHO RECEIVES 27 PROPOSALS BY MAIL

GIRL'S PICTURE LED 27 MEN TO PROPOSE

Confidentially, old chap, are you one of the twenty-seven hopefuls who proposed to Miss Anna L. Haley by mail?

Confidentially to you, if you are one of the twenty-seven, then you are a "darned fool," in Miss Haley's own opinion.

Miss Haley is so wearied of sentiment, of this kind at least, that she says she wouldn't marry the best man living. But that may be just a manner of speech.

Miss Anna L. Haley is an operator in Dedham telephone exchange. Recently her picture was published in the newspapers in connection with an account of a Leap Year party the telephone girls held.

What happened? Right away twenty-seven different men, old, young and in between, burdened an already overworked postoffice department with twenty-seven love letters, some so mushy that a fly couldn't walk across the paper without sinking through.

Miss Haley is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Haley of Richards street, Dedham. She is a striking brunette and believes in saying what she thinks.

"The majority of these proposals sound as though they were written by mollycoddles. A few may be from good, sensible men. But, to give you my candid opinion, I would call them darned fools.

"Why, one letter, I will not mention his name because that wouldn't be fair, a man writes—if it is a man who wrote it—that he has raved for me ever since he saw my picture in the paper.

"They say that in Leap Year a girl may propose but I should say not when there seem to be so many men who will propose to a girl merely after seeing her picture in the paper. I wouldn't marry the best man living, anyhow."

Extracts from two of the letters will be enough for the reader in these days of trouble and worry.

"George ——" writes, in the best Laurajeanlibbey style:

> Pardon my presumption in addressing you at this time, but the fact that your picture appeared in a newspaper impelled me to answer the call of my heart after gazing at it. Your dreamy eyes bewitched me. Will you love me, fair one? Just say the word and I am at your service for life. I could pen my thoughts to you all day, but as brevity is the soul of thought, I will now close.

Whereupon George —— brought his long-suffering pen and ink to a halt. By the way, isn't George a bit to the bad on that allusion to "brevity is the soul of thought"?

Another gink writes like an advertisement for building up feeble-minded muscles, thus:

> Dear Miss Haley:
> Knowledge is power, Miss Haley, and power is strength. If you feel that you would like a man possessed of those assets, me for you. That's me. When I gazed into your eyes of blue many endearing thoughts flashed through my mind. Your face bespoke the fact that you would need a partner for life who was firm and powerful. I'm that man.
> PARKER ——.

Business must be slack in the foundry, by the way "Parker" writes.

BOSTON GIRL WANTS TO WEAR P--T'S

Tim Mooney blushed yesterday. When Tim blushes there is no gainsaying he is perturbed. And as chief of the municipal information bureau, a question that can perturb Mooney is some question. It was like this.

Mr. Mooney was contentedly running the typewriter when a lady entered the office. She was, as they say, a beauteous lady, young and gaily gowned. She asked Tim a question and Timothy blushed.

Tim politely referred the lady to Police Commissioner O'Meara. It was some hours afterwards before Mr. Mooney regained his customary equanimity. Then he explained that the question was, "Who can issue permits for women to wear men's trousers?"

Tim says the lady did not confide whether she expected to be married and was getting advance information on how to be head of the house, or whether she was a disciple of Dr. Mary Walker. Later he confided that the lady was a member of one of the girls' secret societies and that one of the initiation "stunts" will be to have the candidates don the garb of their brothers and parade. They thought there might be some horrid law or something like that against it and so they asked Tim.

There were two very important things that in his embarrassment Tim forgot. One was to get the name of the lady and the other the route of the propose parade.

No One to Blame for Revere House Deaths

Justice Bolster Says Women Who Lost Their Lives Were Overcome or Were Confused.

No one was responsible for the deaths of the three women who lost their lives in the Revere House fire, according to the report filed yesterday by Chief Justice Wilfred Bolster of the Municipal Court. The report was of the inquest conducted by Justice Bolster. He filed the report with Clerk John P. Manning of the Superior Criminal Court. He says that the three women who lost their lives were overcome by smoke or become confused.

"The unlawful act of no person," says the report, "contributed to the cause of death."

"The Revere House," Justice Bolster goes on to say, "was not built according to the present building laws, as it antedater the building department laws of the city, but the fact more than 100 guests of the hotel wh owere sleeping near the fire escaped to safety renders it as probable that those who lost their lives did so through want of sufficient presence of mind rather than through want of any precautionary foresight in the hotel equipment."

ROBBER WHO ROBBED ROBBERS IS ROBBED

NEW YORK, March 2.—The end of the roundup of the taxicab robbers who held up two messengers of the East River National Bank on February 13, getting $25,000, was expected by the police today in the possible arrest of the man who fired the shot that killed Adolph Stern, at Jacoby's jewelry store at Thirteenth street and Sixth avenue, last July, after the store window had been looted.

Matteo Arbano, head of the "three brigands" in the taxicab case, who robbed the real robbers of $10,000 of their plunder, was out most of the night with detectives from the central office. The detectives followed clews that led through many of the lowest dives of the Tenderloin. Deputy Commissioner Dougherty said this morning that the police had information that probably would lead to the arrest of the Jacoby robber soon.

Arbano was promised leniency if he would turn State's evidence, and he snatched at the opportunity. His story of his wanderings after leaving New York showed he had been a victim of the game which he had helped to work on the real robbers. After going to Havana with his share of the $10,000 loot, Arbano fell in with confidence men who got $2,400 of Notebooks Pile up in Nearbyp Drugstore, so Crimson Calls a Halt.

Harvard boys are careless. Yep, so careless are they that it will soon be necessary to establish at Harvard University a lost and found bureau.

Text books and note books and such things are continually getting lost. They have been finding their way in large numbers into a Massachusetts avenue drugstore, opposite the college grounds.

The secret of the carelessness was let out by to-day issue of the Crimson. The Crimson laments the fact that there is no central bureau for articles lost and found, and that it has been found necessary to impress a drug store into service for that purpose.

The article in the Crimson which appears under the head, "A Lost and Found Breau," follows:

"One of the drug stores on Massachusetts avenue has in its possession a number of unidentified notebooks and textbooks which have been found in various places about Cambridge. They were brought there, as it was either the most convenient place for the finder to deposit them or because it seemed a natural place for the owner to inquire for them. Needless to say, many of them have lain there for a long time.

FRIEND'S NAME WAS BENJAMIN; GOT $143

The best description the police have to work on is that his front name is Benjamin, and he is a wizard at matching pennies.

This description is given by Henry Gould of No. 14 Elton street, Dorchester.

"I met Benjamin at the North station," so Henry told the Dorchester police. "It was just a chance meeting. We got acquainted and Benjamin suggested matching pennies. We went up to a hotel up in the Back Bay and Benjamin had wonderful luck. He kept winning.

"Bimeby we got matching for dimes and quarters and then halves and finally all dollars. Benjamin kept winning. He got quite a bit ahead and stepped out for a minute to telephone a man. He never came back. I counted up and found he had matched me out for $143."

The police are looking for Benjamin, King of the Matchers.

BREAKS DOOR OPEN AND SAVES CHILDREN

Policeman Finds Little Ones Locked in While Fire Rages in West End House.

Two children were carried through a heavy pall of smoke, from the second floor of No. 40 Irving street, in the West End, by Patrolman Maurice Sullivan of the Joy Street Station, last night.

The fire started in the apartment of Louis Hammer on the top floor and gained considerable headway before it was discovered. The metropolitan was the flames shooting from the windows. He pulled the alarm, then entered the house to warn the occupants. He heard someone pounding on the doors of the apartment on the second floor, occupied by Max Merkin and his family. Only the children were at home. The place was a mass of flames.

Making his way through the smoke-filled hallways, Sullivan, broke open the doors and carried the children to the street, two at a time. He was nearly overcome after the first trip.

The top floor was gutted, resulting in $1,000 damage. The fire apparatus was handicapped in getting to the fire on account of the steep incline that leads to Irving street, which is in the Beacon Hill section of the city.

highest qualities of personal devotion and self-sacrifice. Involved in it are problems of so grave a character that upon their solution depends the commercial, industrial and financial liberty of the coming generations.

The American people do not forget that he, after Lincoln, was our greatest President, because he was the greatest friend of the common people and the public interests of this country."

Resolutions Favor Primary.

Resolutions in favor of a preferential presidential primary were offered and were passed practically unanimously by the audience.

The crowd began to get tired when Governor Stubbs had finished his speech and promptly took up its cry, airplane and in the rear of the main hall went out.

Former Governor Croft of New Jersey then began his speech. Those who stuck to the meeting said that Croft was not at his best. He was interrupted several times by questions made by the speakers and a clamor in the audience to force Lipson to speak. The name of Roosevelt was introduced at the end of eloquent perorations in such a way that one could tell at once whether the applause was for the candidate or for Lipson. Each of the times the name of Roosevelt was mentioned in connection with applause Lipson increased the Lincoln. There was applause, but it was Lincoln as much as Roosevelt that called it forth.

A post card, minus the one ten-stamp, was circulated among the crowd for the audience at the meeting. It was in this form:

I am in favor of Roosevelt's nomination for President, and will support him. (Signed) H. Oveson, secretary, 5 Sun Street, Roxbury.

Tale of a Skilled Workman.

Samuel L. Lipson, who said that he is a skilled workman, but at the best was able to earn only $10 per week in the Lawrence mills, prefaced his talk by explaining that he had a family of five.

"The cost of living is such that we don't use butter," explained Lipson. "We can't afford it. We can't afford molasses. In fact, I don't believe my children would know the taste of butter if they saw it."

At Lipson's explanation of his substitute for butter, a gentleman in a picture hat and a man sporting a fur-lined overcoat anticipated the speaker and explained to them for an instant and continued his testimony.

"You have a family of five, you say, and you receive an average of $10 a week?"

"That is right," said Lipson. "Last Summer, however, we were not allowed to work regularly, and some weeks it was more, less than that."

"You pay $2.50 a week," said the striker. "And what else, meat and butter rose in Lawrence?"

"Some meat, such as I have to buy," answered Lipson, "costs eighteen cents a pound."

"Why did you strike?"

Why He Struck.

"Because I could not make a living for my wife and four children. I am a skilled workman, and my average wages were $9 or $10 a week."

"But there was so much slack time in Lawrence that some time I got only $3 and $4 and we had to live on that, myself and my wife and children."

Lipson said that when the Massachusetts law cut the hours of labor the mill proceeded not to force the same amount of work in the shorter time.

This caused the strike. When the original demand was made on the company the most it was told, he said, that they could either go back to work or get out.

Under guidance of Bonoff, several witnesses corroborated Lipson as to wages and clashes with militia and police. When John Golden, president of the Textile Workers' Union, accused the Industrial Workers of America, a rival organization, to which many of the strikers belong, of spending a Socialist propaganda, a woman became hysterical.

"You are a Judas! You lie! You are not telling the truth!" she screamed, excitedly, as Golden proceeded. She was interrupted with being sent to jail for contempt.

Here is Colonel Roosevelt's letter, which was read from the platform by Colonel Thomas F. Doherty, the presiding officer.

Roosevelt's Greeting.

March 1, 1912.

My Dear Colonel Doherty:

Through you I desire to express my very earnest greeting to the people of Massachusetts. This is more than a mere party contest; this is a contest to establish the right of the people to rule themselves, and through their own efforts to work for the causes of social and industrial justice, and of good will among men. We are the true conservatives, for in the long run it will be found that the only true conservative is the man who resolutely sets his face toward the future and strives to get wise guidance to those who are struggling toward the ideal for a fairer dealing between man and man.

We believe that only through the triumph of the principles for which we stand can business prosperity be assured to this country on a permanent and not a merely fictitious basis. These principles can be embodied in action and prosperity will come only when the people must stand on a foundation of justice, justice to wage-worker, to capitalist, to the general public.

All we ask is justice, and we are as anxious that it should be scrupulously given us that it should be scrupulously exacted. We have announced that we fully and sincerely adhere to a lofty ideal, for surely there can be no loftier ideal than that of the achievement of justice through the rule of the people; and we hold also that success of the very fact that we are idealists we are in the truest sense of the word practical men, for we intend in good faith to try to realize our high ideals and their realization will make, not only for the weal, but for the material well-being of all our people.

Faithfully yours,
(Signed) THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

Cheer from the West.

The National Roosevelt Committee also sent the following telegram of greeting which was read to the meeting:

Chicago, Ill., March 1, 1912.

Hon. Matthew Hale, No. 15 State street, Boston, Mass.:

National Roosevelt Committee congratulate Massachusetts on mass meeting at which the desire of the people that Colonel Roosevelt accept nomination for President may be given definite expression. The action appears to be one for Roosevelt and the only question confronting the people is to correct this sentiment into delegates to the Chicago convention.

Illinois will give Roosevelt fifty of its fifty-eight delegates; with preferential primary would give him all. The West almost solidly for him. The South has started his way. Yesterday's meeting will demonstrate that the East also is with us.

National Roosevelt Committee.

The letter from the Colonel and the predictions of success from the committee were enthusiastically received. The open-air meeting was held under the auspices of the Progressive Republican Club of Massachusetts. Colonel Thomas F. Doherty, the chairman, called Theodore Roosevelt "the man who has done things." He called the Colonel "the popular idol of the American people." He alluded to the Republican party of Massachusetts as "the party of the political Brahmin who espouses the cause of the plutocrats and favors, culls to himself the places of profit and prestige and leaves to others less favored only the knowledge that the principal seats at both the banquet and council tables are solely for the elect within the sacred circle."

Says Foss Led the Way.

Colonel Doherty said that the Republicans had never recognized the sons or descendants of aliens and that a Democratic Governor has shattered all political precedents by naming, for the first time in the history of Massachusetts, the talented son of an Irishman, a Catholic, to the Supreme Judicial bench; he names the Catholic son of a French Canadian to the Republican, if you please, to the Superior Court."

The Brahmin Republicans, the speaker said, hoped this would result in Republican victory, but the result was against even so popular a man as Lieutenant-Governor Frothingham. Concluding, he said:

"The salvation of the party is with progressive republicanism. That brand of republicanism recognizes that a political party is merely the popular agent and servant of the whole people, made up as the body politic is of varying shades of national extraction and diverse creeds, all gathered together under the aegis of Massachusetts laws and comprising the people of this grand old Commonwealth. It is the duty of every Progressive Republican to see to it that from this time forth, guided by the master genius of a man like Roosevelt we, all of us, no matter of what class, creed or condition, shall stand up and demand popular rule and responsibility, without fear or favor, without privilege or special grant to any man."

Ex-Governor John Franklin Fort of New Jersey said that President Taft "personally is a charming man." Outside of this the speaker attacked President Taft and the Republican party. He closed with saying Roosevelt stands for and with the people.

In opening, the speaker said that the Democratic element in Congress ought only has been and is in control at Washington. "The men whom it was the boast of the head of the convention of 1908 had relegated to the rear were immediately put to the front and are now in the saddle."

MRS. W. MORGAN SHUSTER AND HER YOUNG DAUGHTERS

Family of the former Persian Treasurer-General was with him during stormy times in the East.

SHUSTER COMES TO BOSTON ON TUESDAY

American Driven by Russia from Persian Post Will Talk of Eastern Affairs.

W. Morgan Shuster, former treasurer-general of Persia, accompanied by his wife, arrives in Boston Tuesday to deliver an address on "The Duty of Civilization Toward the Weaker Nations" at the Economic Club dinner in Symphony Hall that evening.

Mr. Shuster's recent experiences in Persia, when he was made the object of a personal attack by the Russian government, coupled with his attempts to modernize the 1,000-year-old Persian financial system, adds to the interest of the occasion.

Driven from the treasurer-generalship of Persia by one of the most powerful nations of today, the subject of his after-dinner address in this city will enable him to lift the lid from Persian affairs at Russia's expense. The dinner is to begin at 6:30 o'clock.

CHARGE WOMAN WITH STEALING $175 RING

Patent Lock and Vigilant Clerk Frustrate Plan in State Street Store.

A young woman giving the name of Miss Annie Swanton was arrested in a jewelry store at No. 25 State street, yesterday afternoon on a charge of trying to steal a $175 diamond ring by the old "substitute paste" game.

The vigilance of Charles A. Orcutt, salesman, combined with a patent lock on the ring tray, led to the arrest. Miss Swanton said she lives at No. 141 Appleton street, South End. She is thirty years old.

According to Orcutt, Miss Swanton brought a ring to the store to be repaired. Then, asking to see diamond rings, she brought out a tray, which has a patent lock which will not let a ring set in the tray unless one knows how the lock works.

Orcutt's attention was diverted a moment. When he looked at the tray again he saw, he says, that one of the rings did not fit in its place. It was not "locked in." He examined the ring. found it to be paste.

Miss Swanton had decided she did not wish to pay a ring then after all, but Orcutt had signaled for a call to be sent to the police. Captains Armstrong and McGerr came in and took the woman to headquarters.

LIVING BY MACHINERY.

Chicago Man May Owe His Recovery to a Vacuum Cleaner.

CHICAGO, March 2.—Alfonso Fisher, son of Otto Fisher, of Elmhurst, is living by the grace of a vacuum cleaner. If he recovers from the almost complete paralysis which afflicts him, it will be, in the opinion of physicians, because he has had the aid of the electrically driven machine which is concealed in the case of the machine.

For fifty-six hours a pipe from the exhaust side of the cleaner has been filling the lungs with air eighty-one times a minute. Fisher is conscious, his mind is clear; he can talk about his predicament in the intervals when the device is removed. His young wife and six-months-old baby are almost constantly in his room.

ENGAGEMENT ANNOUNCED.

Miss Sarah Goldstein and A. C. Golden to Wed.

The engagement is announced of Miss Sarah Goldstein, daughter of the Rev. Samuel Goldstein, of No. 376 Blue Hill avenue, Roxbury, to Abraham C. Golden, a prominent business man and a graduate of Boston University, '11. The young people were schoolmates at the Hancock School, this city. Later Miss Goldstein went to Montreal, where she studied music. She graduated from the Montreal Conservatory of Music and won a scholarship from the Montreal Opera Company. A few months ago she returned from a lengthy stay at Milan, Italy, where she studied music under Mme. Arkel. She has also studied in Paris.

Harvard Teachers to Meet.

MRS. PANKHURST AND 149 OTHERS IN JAIL

Leader, Sentenced For Window Smashing, Says Women Will Take Any Steps.

LONDON, March 2.—One hundred and fifty Suffragettes, the most notable among them being Mrs. Emmeline Pankhurst, tonight began jail terms of various lengths, meted out to them today in the Bow street police court for their damaging activities in yesterday's Suffragette riot.

Mrs. Pankhurst drew a term of two months in Old Bailey and a like sentence was imposed on Mrs. Mabel Tukeach, a national leader. Mrs. Emma Marshall, another renowned leader, was sentenced to serve fifty-one days.

When Mrs. Pankhurst was called she admitted she had helped smash the windows in Premier Asquith's residence.

"We are prepared to take any steps necessary to win our object," she declared defiantly. "We are willing to pay any price the government may demand."

The militant suffragists bitterly denounce the action of their sisters in smashing store windows. Business men today estimated their loss at $25,000, and declared the government should recompense them.

Miss Christabel Pankhurst, a daughter of the suffragette, for some unexplained reason missed yesterday's outbreak. She was sorry, she said today.

AGAINST AUTO OWNER.

Supreme Court Awards Damages to Injured Women.

A verdict of $2,250 for Mary L. Smith and one of $100 for her sister, Georgiana against George E. Jordan were granted yesterday by the full bench of the Supreme Court for injuries which the sisters received when their carriage was struck by an automobile, driven by Jordan's son. Although a father is not ordinarily liable for personal injuries done others by his son, the court ruled that as long as the automobile was registered in the father's name and the son was the only person licensed to operate it, the car was operated in accordance with his father's instructions and the father became liable.

MRS. CUSUMANO CALM IN SHADOW OF DEATH

With Harry Marshall Will Hear Date of Execution on Next Tuesday.

PLYMOUTH, March 2.—Lena Cusumano, the first woman to be convicted of murder in the first degree in Plymouth County, and Harry Marshall, will be brought before Judge Quinn in court Tuesday morning, to hear the date set on which they are to be put to death for the murder of Frank Cusumano, the husband of the woman.

Judge Schofield and a jury found them guilty in February, 1911. Frank Cusumano was killed with an axe while asleep and his body carted away to the beach at Hull, where it was found bound with wire.

Last Tuesday the Supreme Judicial Court overruled the exceptions taken by the attorneys for the defendants. With this decision their last hope went.

Learns of Court Decision.

Mrs. Cusumano learned that the Supreme Court had ruled against her. To Sheriff Porter, Mrs. Cusumano said, when she learned that the court had ruled against her: "I want to know the worst. Tell me all. I am not afraid to hear it."

"I fear the worst," said the sheriff. "I am afraid you will have to go to court next Tuesday to receive the sentence of death. I am afraid that the court will sentence you to the electric chair. Your lawyers and your friends will do all in their power to have the sentence of death commuted to life imprisonment."

Marshall, or Enrico Mascioli, the other name by which he was known, has not been told of the Supreme Court decision against him. He has been morose and surly during his incarceration at the jail. He appears to bear ill will to the jail attaches and especially to Mrs. Cusumano, with whom he was implicated in the murder of her husband.

All the officials at the jail praise Mrs. Cusumano in the highest terms for her brave showing in the face of meeting death in the electric chair.

The chief witness against Mrs. Cusumano was her little nine-year-old daughter Lucy. She was put on the witness stand and withstood a grueling cross-examination by the lawyers for the defendants for four hours. Not once did she look at her mother.

Disowned by Little Girl.

The child was so short in stature that she had to be placed in a high chair so that she could look over the top of the rail of the witness stand. She told a straightforward story.

"You have not looked at your mother," said one of the lawyers in cross-examining her.

"No," she answered.

"Don't you want to look at your mother?" she was asked.

"No, I don't want to see her," said the child.

Pimples? No They're All Gone!

No More Humiliation; the Wonderful Stuart's Calcium Wafers "Get Right After" Those Pimples, Boils and Skin Eruptions.

Trial Package Sent Free to Prove It.

No need for anyone to go about any longer with a face covered with pimples, blotches, eruptions, blackheads, and liver spots. They are all due to impurities in the blood. Cleanse the blood thoroughly and the blemishes will disappear.

That's what Stuart's Calcium Wafers are intended to accomplish and do accomplish. Their principal ingredient is Calcium Sulphide, the quickest and most thorough blood cleanser known.

These wonderful little wafers get right into the blood, and destroy eruptive substances present in it. In some cases a few days is sufficient to make a marked improvement. And when the blood is pure the whole system is a hundred per cent. better.

Don't fret any longer about those blackheads, pimples, boils, tetter, eczema, spots or skin eruptions; they all go and "go quick" if you use Stuart's Calcium Wafers.

You can have a trial package of Stuart's Calcium Wafers, simply by sending your name and address to F. A. Stuart Co., 175 Stuart Bldg., Marshall, Mich. Then, when you have proved their value, you can get the regular-size package for 50 cents, at any drug store.

MISS DELAND, DEDHAM AUTHOR, WHO IS FOR BALLOT—SOMETIME

Miss Deland deplores the militant methods of suffragettes. She says votes will come for women when women are ready for votes.

MISS DELAND IN NO HURRY FOR BALLOT

Miss Ellen Douglas Deland—Suffragist-at-Leisure!

Miss Deland is the Dedham one, author of "Malvern," "A Little Son of Sunshine" and other stories, especially tales for children. Then there is Mrs. Margaretta Wade Deland, the Boston one, author of "John Ward, Preacher," "Old Chester Tales" and so on, and who holds jonquil sales for sweet charity. By the way, did you know that Mrs. Deland's first name is Margaretta and not Margaret? (See "Who's Who in N. E." Page 294.)

Don't know whether they are relatives or not, but this little explanation of which is which is made because, when you come to write about Delands 'round these parts you have to specify, especially if you're [illegible]

Sure to Win Office.

This is about Miss Ellen Douglas Deland, the Dedham author, now suffragist and officeseeker. But, as Miss Deland says herself, "Yes, I am a suffragist, but I am by no means in a hurry about it."

[illegible] Miss Deland's unhurried suffragism comes into the light just now is because the annual town meeting comes in Dedham to-morrow, and Miss Deland is going to be elected to the Board of Public Library Trustees. It's a sure thing. If they were anything half so sure in national politics all bets would be off now and big [illegible] would know whether to [illegible]

There are forty-eight men struggling to be elected to thirty-three Dedham offices tomorrow, so some men are going to be disappointed. But Miss Deland is the only woman candidate. This is her first office, too, as it were. She is one of three candidates for the Library Board, and as there are three vacancies, their election is like breaking sticks.

Miss Deland was asked if she is a suffragist. She said she is. Later she said no woman is fit for "any high administrative office." Just how she keeps these statements from colliding is told in her interview, thus:

Time Will Bring Ballot.

"Yes, I am a suffragist, but I am by no means in a hurry about it. I believe that votes for women will come when women are ready for votes. I have no sympathy whatever with the methods of the militant suffragettes in England. Over here, of course, we are not so violent nor so slow to realize that we are making ourselves ridiculous. Suffragists in this country do not as a rule cheapen themselves and their cause by undignified demonstrations such as those that occur with such painful frequency in and about the House of Commons.

"You will understand how I feel about it when I tell you that I have not yet joined the Massachusetts Woman's Suffrage Association nor any other suffrage club. I believe that women should have the ballot, but I do not feel that there is any need of excitement about it, and I am not sure that I approve all the methods adopted by the women's organizations to further their cause, even in America."

GAYNOR DEFENDS DIX IN THE BRANDT CASE

Mr. Hearst, Commenting on Mayor, Demands All the Guilty Be Punished.

NEW YORK, March 2.—Opposed by his Attorney-General and all his personal advisers and by the State and city prosecutors in his action in upholding the imprisonment of Foulke Engle Brandt and taking the side of Mortimer L. Schiff in the case, Governor Dix today found one champion in the person of Mayor Gaynor of New York, who in a long letter commends the Governor for every step he has taken and all those he has refused to take.

"I honor you for your stand in the Brandt case," writes the Mayor. "You have not, like other officials before whom this matter came, prostrated yourself and your office before the newspaper publishers who have championed this scamp in order to defame women and men of the highest character."

Mayor Gaynor then enters into a long dissertation on the legal aspect of the case in an effort to justify the Governor's course in refusing to grant Brandt clemency and publicly condemning all those who are fighting in the courts for the young Swede. The Mayor holds that the sentence of thirty years which was imposed upon Brandt was just, although Judge Rosalsky, who sentenced the prisoner, has himself asked that the case be tried over again, and the Supreme Court has freed Brandt on a writ of habeas corpus which set forth that he was illegally sentenced.

That the records of the prison department of the State were falsified to accomplish the transfer of Brandt from Sing Sing to Clinton Prison, which is reserved for consumptives and three-term convicts, was the important discovery made at Albany to-day. This transfer is at present the subject of inquiry by the Grand Jury.

Mr. Hearst's Comment.

William Randolph Hearst was asked tonight about the Brandt case and the Mayor's letter, and he dictated the following interview by tel phone:

"There is only one quetsion properly to be considered in the Brandt case, and that is the question of absolute and abstract justice.

"One phase of that quetsion has been propounded and has been answered.

"It was answered by Judge Rosalsky when he set aside his own sentence upon Brandt. It was answered by Justice Gerard when he sustained the writ of habeas corpus in the Brandt case. It was answered by Schiff himself when he engaged $100,000 worth of questionable value in lawyers to try and keep one wretched, petty criminal in jail for life. It was answered by Governor Dix when he ordered the evidence in the case withheld from the public, and answered by Mayor Gaynor, who, with all his viciousness and violence, has nothing to add to the situation except abuse as a substitute for argument, and falsehood as a substitute for fact.

Gaynor Still at Large.

"Brandt is a rascal, and has been described as a rascal by every one at every time and on every occasion throughout this case. But not even a rascal deserves a sentence of thirty years in jail, or Mr. Gaynor would not now be occupying the distinguished position of Mayor of the city of New York.

"Brandt is so much of a rascal and so little of a hero that the best that can be said of him is that he compares favorably in courage, character and veracity only with such pitiful specimens of humanity as Governor Dix and Mayor Gaynor.

"Brandt deserves punishment, but not persecution. He has been punished, and he has been rescued from persecution.

"There remains only one other phase of this question of absolute and abstract justice to be considered, and that will be considered despite every effort of hireling lawyers and servile politicians to divert attention from it.

Demands Plain Justice.

"The other question is the detection and punishment of everyone who has been guilty of criminal conspiracy to pervert the ends of justice to private advantage and personal revenge.

"Unfortunately, quasi-conspirators like Dix and Gaynor can only be condemned to the bitter contempt of honorable men, but the actual conspirators should be indicted and convicted for traitorous assault upon the equality and justice which constituted the very foundation of our American institutions.

"Brandt is but an unimportant and discreditable incident in a great case. Gaynor is equally unimportant and equally discreditable. But Mr. Whitman and every honest representative of the dignity and sanction of the law should proceed to do their full duty without consideration for either Brandt or Gaynor.

"And let all true American citizens who would keep their courts undefiled and their institutions intact uphold the hands of righteous judges and faithful and fearless officers of the law without regard to race or creed or party prejudice."

GRAND OPERA HOUSE SOLD.

Dr. Lothrop Acquires Property and Will Produce Burlesque.

The Grand Opera House on Washington street, which for many years has been the home of popular melodrama, will next season be turned into a burlesque house. Dr. George E. Lothrop, proprietor of the Howard and Bowdoin Square Theatres, purchased the Grand Opera House yesterday from the Massachusetts Theatre Company and also the unexpired term of the present lease from the lessees, Stair, Wilbur and Magee. The lease expires July 1, 1913. According to the present plans Dr. Lothrop will connect his latest purchase with the Empire burlesque circuit. George W. Magee, who has been connected with the Grand Opera House since its opening and for many years has been manager, will continue in this capacity.

BARRY OPENS FIGHT.

Democrats Greet Mayor at Cambridge Ratification Meeting.

An enthusiastic reception to Mayor J. Edward Barry, and a rousing welcome for Assessor Jeremiah F. Donovan, his opponent at the polls last year, on his return to the ranks of the party, were the features of the ratification meeting held by the Democrats of Cambridge in Cyprus Hall, which marked the opening of Mayor Barry's campaign. Many were in the gallery.

SPEAKER CLARK FOR AN INCOME TAX AND FREE SUGAR

Champ Clark, who, as Sp... er ... kers, senatives, has ... with grave his views on the adoption ... n. He also favors the ... tically the amount of the tariff. The average citizen of this country eats eighty pounds of sugar a year, so you can calculate how much it will save the individual and how much it will save the family.

WASHINGTON, March 2.—I have been in favor of an income tax ever since I can recall. A graduated income tax with proper exceptions is the most just and fairest tax ever levied. I have expressed that opinion hundreds and hundreds of times in Congress and out, and it is the solution of the tax question in America.

As soon as that constitutional amendment in favor of the income tax is ratified, Congress will pass a bill for a graduated income tax that will raise a hundred millions or more a year, and when that is done the tariff can be reformed and revised to a very large degree a great deal more than we can now do it.

As for the question of sugar legislation, the bill under consideration by the Democrats in Congress will make sugar about two cents a pound cheaper to the consumer.

The tax on raw sugar in the average is $1.68 a hundred pounds. On refined sugar it is $1.90 a hundred pounds. That will cut the price of sugar to the American consumer by practically the amount of the tariff. The average citizen of this country eats eighty pounds of sugar a year, so you can calculate how much it will save the individual and how much it will save the family.

It would be .0168 multiplied by 80 or $1.344 a year. The average family is five and one-half people, and the saving by each family can be mathematically shown.

Through the sugar tax about $53,000,000 a year goes into the United States treasury, but it costs the American people to accomplish this from $125,000,000 to $150,000,000. Under the proposed change this vast sum will remain in their pockets. Every dollar in the case of the income tax goes into the public treasury, and the people will save the difference between $53,000,000 and $150,000,000.

And as the income tax is levied upon the people who can afford to pay the tax, while the sugar tax is levied upon rich and poor alike, the income tax is greatly preferable and more just to everybody.

SPEAKER CHAMP CLARK.

THE FIRST GRAY HAIR SIGN OF AGE. DON'T LOOK OLD BEFORE YOUR TIME

A harmless remedy, made from common garden sage, quickly restores gray faded hair, dandruff, itching scalp and hair to natural color. The cure of the falling hair. After a few applications hair, to prevent it from losing its color of this simple, harmless remedy, your and lustre, is just as important as to hair will gradually be restored to its cure for teeth to keep them from discoloring. Why spend money for cosmetics and creams to improve the complexion, and yet neglect your hair, when your hair is even more conspicuous and suggestive of age than wrinkles or a poor complexion. Of the two, it is far easier to prevent the natural color and beauty of the hair than it is to have a good complexion.

All that is necessary is the occasional use of Wyeth's Sage and Sulphur Hair Remedy, a preparation of common garden Sage and Sulphur, combined with other valuable remedies for dry, harsh, natural color. After a few applications hair will gradually be restored to its natural color, in a short time the discoloring, dandruff will be removed, and your hair will no longer come out, but will start to grow as Nature intended it should.

Don't neglect your hair, for it goes further than anything else to make or mar your good looks. You can buy this remedy at any drug store for fifty cents a bottle, and your druggist will give your money back if you are not satisfied after using. Purchase a bottle today. You will never regret it when you realize the difference it will make in your appearance.

We Make Them for All Kinds of Business. Prices $20 to $765

All sorts of stores, factories, garages, dining cars, county and city offices, commissaries, public service offices, hotels, theatres and newspaper offices are included in the list. They are used in the largest stores and on the smallest corner stands.

They are used in the store farthest North and the store farthest South.

Certain kinds are made especially for department stores, railroads and banks. They give quick service and protection and do things no other machine sold can do.

Our office registers certify and classify accounts and records. They give the most positive checks for bookkeepers, auditors and managers. No other machines sold give so much information and protection with as little work and in so short a time.

We have spent 30 years in studying the needs of all businesses where money is handled and records kept. We make cash registers to fit every need and that is why we make over 300 styles and sizes.

Our registers safeguard all transactions occurring between employes and customers. They save time, work and worry and insure to proprietors all their profits.

They cost so little and do so much.

Write or call and have the kind of register suitable for your business explained to you. Investigation will cost you nothing.

TODAY

The Gloves of 240,000 Years Ago

The gloves that Professor Boyd Dawkins tells us were worn by the cave men before the glacial period (about 240,000 years ago) were not so very different from the gloves of today.

To be sure they were not handsome to look at—nor so well fitting as the gloves of today—but then they wore well—and long, which was no inconsiderable point in their favor.

Nowadays—the chief fault in gloves is that they don't wear satisfactorily.

The Way "London-Town" Raincoats Are Made

Is the reason they give so much satisfaction in the wearing. We watch them carefully from mill to wearer that we may know what we are selling.

The fabrics we buy direct from the mills in Scotland—secretly to insure that the fabric patterns are both new and uncommon.

Unicorn Club Wins by Score of 1 to 0 in One of the Fastest Game of Hockey Ever Seen at Boston Arena

Great Struggle for the Opening Contest of the Battle for the New England Championship; Big Crowd Sees the Event

SUMMARY.

BOSTON A. A. [illegible] INTERCOLONIALS.

By TED PARKE.

[illegible] took [illegible] of strength the Boston Athletic seven [illegible] gather [illegible] last evening [illegible] to test their rival for local supremacy on the ice the Intercolonial Hockey Team, in the Arena, and after much rough housing and highly exciting play for forty minutes the Boston A. A. seven emerged the victors by the close score of one goal to none.

The winners took the game in the first nine minutes of play, Hicks scoring the lone goal on as neat a bit of stick handling and dodging as has been seen in the Arena for many a long day. Both teams put up such a good defence that there was little opportunity for team play and the result of the game depended entirely upon individual brilliancy, and Hicks [illegible] it.

There was a very large crowd and one which got into the game with as much enthusiasm as did the players themselves and freely criticised many of the decisions of the referees, which at times did seem [illegible] of raw, especially when Heron was [illegible] out in the second period after just having served a term of punishment, there being no cause for the second penalty except that he was unfortunate enough to have a man skate into him, and the offender was foxy enough to fall down.

Hard Fought From Start.

The game was fought tooth and nail from start to finish, the two Canadian players, imported for the purpose by the losing team, namely Molyneux and Wiggett bringing a [illegible] Canadian tactics into the game [illegible] make a bit [illegible] all. The rivalry between the two teams however is so strong at all times that the fight is sure to be one of the hardest, [illegible] this naturally makes hard [illegible] play inevitable and some one is sure [illegible] getting hurt.

The only [illegible] suffered in the [illegible] [illegible] for blood was shed was [illegible] the Canadian [illegible] was late in the first period when he got mixed up with [illegible] who started the game at [illegible] A. A. team [illegible]

[illegible]

Teams About Even.

[illegible]

Canadians Followed.

The two Canadians, Wiggett and Molyneux, proved to be the life of the losers' [illegible] [illegible] even close to the [illegible] for the Boston A. A. [illegible] them too closely and [illegible] was possible only on a straight [illegible]

[illegible] acquisition of Huntington and Sortwell, the Harvard players proved to be a [illegible] the [illegible] usual great game and although his [illegible] was not as brilliant as usual, [illegible] [illegible] many chances for [illegible] played well a [illegible] while Hicks put [illegible] a great game at rover.

AMERICAN WILL HOLD BOWLING FINALS ON NEW BOSTON ALLEYS

Strings Will Be Rolled On March 14, [illegible] 16. Over Two Hundred and Fifty Bowlers Will Compete

Winner of the Contest Will Receive One Hundred Dollars For His Labor; Other Prizes Will Be Given Place Winners

The New Boston bowling alleys, No. 167 Washington street, Boston, have been selected by the bowling committee as the place at which will be decided the elimination [illegible] and final of the [illegible] AMERICAN bowling championship [illegible]

[illegible] contest will be held [illegible] March 14 [illegible] Thursday, the opening day [illegible] devoted to [illegible] round. With [illegible] the round will have to be started [illegible] in the forenoon. Each entrant will bowl five strings.

On [illegible] the second [illegible] will be [illegible] at 2 o'clock. The [illegible] will be composed of the [illegible] twenty-four [illegible] these bowlers being paired [illegible] making twelve matches. The dozen winners will then be matched in the second semi-final by pairings into six matches, and the six victors will once more be paired in the third semi-final, the three winners being eligible for the final of twenty strings.

Finals March 16.

Saturday comes the finals, the first ten strings starting at [illegible] o'clock and the remaining ten strings going on at 7 o'clock in the evening.

That everybody qualified will have a chance in rolling the five strings in the elimination round it is absolutely necessary that each of the eligibles notify the Bowling Editor on or before Saturday, March 9 that they will positively [illegible] at the New Boston [illegible] Thursday, March 14 to take part in the elimination round.

All bowlers who rolled 48[illegible] or over in their preliminary or round of five strings are eligible to the elimination round. In the instance of the Bowling Editor not receiving word from any bowler eligible to the elimination round, it will be considered that he intends not to be present when the round is decided, and his name will be crossed off the list for good.

The New Boston bowling alleys will be put in the very pink of [illegible] by the Brunswick Balke-Collender [illegible]. The company has agreed to have them in perfect tournament condition. New pins and balls will be supplied to the contest by this company.

Location Is Central.

There are sixteen alleys at the New Boston bowling alleys, all of which will be in use on Thursday, March 14, the date of deciding the elimination round. There is not a single post to obstruct the view of any of the [illegible] being [illegible] floor space from wall to wall.

In de[illegible] the New Boston bowling [illegible] not only to [illegible] consideration the location [illegible] Railroad, the tunnel [illegible] of Milk and State streets and Scollay Square Station of the subway, being but a minute's walk, but they also had in mind the large number of alleys available and the perfect condition in seating a number of spectators.

Jimmy M'Aleer Has a Squint At New Red Sox Battle Field

Jeems, the new Sox boss had a last look at Fenway park yesterday. When he comes home from Hot Springs he will find his new $400,000 playground finished. He's satisfied that he has the best ball park and the best team in the country. Beside him is Fred Lake, ex-Sox manager, who disagrees with McAleer on the team question, because he ran the Sox two years ago. On Lake's right, though, is Robert B. McRoy, McAleer's secretary, so Lake has to keep still. Below is McAleer again, hustling away from the park.

MIDDIES DEFEAT YALE.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 2.—The Midshipmen closed [illegible] season this afternoon with a [illegible] score, Yale being defeated in the final contest by [illegible] points to 22. The horizontal bar and tumbling events furnished the best sport, several good men being absent in the other events on account of injuries.

Callahan of Yale did some clean and expert work on the bar, while Middy [illegible] showed [illegible] strength and skill on the flying rings.

The tumbling of Kieffer and Gillette of the Naval Academy and Williams of Yale was far above the ordinary.

What the American Plans to Give Fans

[illegible] Hot Springs. The Boston AMERICAN, daily and Sunday, will have the newsiest, snappiest and most complete baseball stories and illustrations in New England throughout the season. L. R. Murdoch, sporting editor of the AMERICAN, and Harleigh B. [illegible] will keep Boston AMERICAN readers posted [illegible] happening at the training camps at Augusta and Hot Springs and [illegible] be supplemented by [illegible] by Charles Dryden, the [illegible] baseball writer in America [illegible] the clever baseball paragrapher, and others together with the most striking and attractive illustrations and cartoons by staff artists and photographers.

BOSTON'S big league baseball season opens tomorrow. If it looks cold [illegible] remember that the ball tossers [illegible] in the National League start for their outdoor training camp tomorrow night [illegible] the athletes who will case the pennant in the American League will leave Thursday night. They're off. The crack of the National Leaguers' bats will be heard Thursday morning at Augusta, [illegible] and the bang of the Red Sox horse-hide will sound in Hot Springs a week from tomorrow.

Both teams start the 1912 season with better chances than last year. The National Leaguers have new owners, [illegible] president, new manager [illegible] strong hope of climbing out of last place. The Red Sox have new owners, new players, new president, new manager [illegible] park, a sure thing first division team and a bid on the pennant.

RED SOX ARE READY TO START FOR HOT SPRINGS THURSDAY

AFTER a final inspection of his new ball park in Jersey street yesterday afternoon Jimmie McAleer finished his plans for taking his pennant bones to Hot Springs Thursday night. Mack is satisfied that he has the best ball park in the United States now, and he thinks it will be complete in time for the great opening April 1[illegible], the big [illegible] on Patriots' Day, when the New York Yankees will help the Red Sox start the big show in Boston.

The new Fenway Park is moving along rapidly. Twenty-five thousand fans can find seats there next month and every one of them will have a close-hand view of every play. McAleer hopes to fill the [illegible] the first two [illegible]

See the New Things at the Chalmers Exhibit

At Mechanics Building

When you go to the Motor show you will want to see the new things that distinguish the 1912 cars.

Nowhere can you get a better idea of the year's progress than at the Chalmers Exhibit. We call special attention to the following features

1. Chalmers Self-Starter.
   Self-starting motors in constant operation, starting every few seconds.
2. "Cut-Out Chassis."
   Our "Thirty-Six" chassis in operation with parts cut away so you can see "the works."
3. Chalmers "Thirty-Six" $1800.
   With these features: Self-starter, long stroke motor, five-speed transmission, 36 in. x 4 in. tires and demountable rims—and many others.
4. Chalmers "Six" $3250.
   A new high-powered luxurious addition to the Chalmers line—54 h. p., self-starter. 130 inch wheel base, 36 in. x 4½ in. tires, ten inch upholstering.
5. Chalmers "30" $1500.
   The famous car that for four years has set the pace among low priced cars. With the 1912 improvements, and fully equipped, still $1500.

The Chalmers exhibit will give you a new standard by which to judge motor car values. Be sure to see it.

This monogram on the radiator stands for all you can ask in a motor car.

"If you have never driven a six-cylinder car ..."

FIRST TIME IN BOSTON.

The Havers Six-44 Is at the Show.

The Havers "Six 44," which is exhibited for the first time in Boston this week, is attracting its full share of attention and furnishes evidence of the increasing popularity of the six-cylinder car. It is built by the Havers Motor Car Company of Port Huron, Mich., the first company to market a six-cylinder car selling for less than $2,000.

The Havers "Six 44" is built in two passenger roadster and five-passenger touring car types, both on the same chassis. The wheel base is 1.2 ... power long stroke motor ... Bosch dual magneto, Stromberg carburetor, semi-elliptic front and platform suspension rear springs, rear axle full floating type.

The Havers exhibit in Mechanics building is in charge of B. F. Blaney, sales manager of the company.

The First Car Sold.

Even before the motor show opened last evening the enterprising publicity men of at least three concerns exhibited had sent to the AMERICAN office statements to the effect that the particular car they had the honor to represent was the first car to be sold after the opening of the show. One of these publicity men rather outdid all others with a long winded story to the effect that four of his make of cars were sold at the salesroom yesterday afternoon.

Columbia
SILENT KNIGHT
THE COLUMBIA KNIGHT motor possesses every advantage of other types without limitation to qualify its complete success. It has, too, great power and flexibility and that silence which is the absence of noise.
Driving the Columbia Knight adds a new charm to motoring, so smooth and velvety is its running. There is no consciousness of mechanical effort or of the presence of a powerful prime mover.
Here are shown Columbia touring and coach bodies mounted upon Columbia Knight standard chassis.
Careful design and accurate workmanship are evident in every part of the car, whether large or small, and detailed examination of methods of building prove the superlative fitness of the Columbia Knight.
See the working model of the Knight motor, shown at the Columbia Exhibit at the Automobile Show, Mechanics Hall.

"I wanted to pay about $1000 for a car. It had to be big enough to hold five people, powerful enough to climb hills, well-built, well-appointed, stylish, and above all, dependable—for it had to last. I couldn't buy a new car every year.

That is why I bought a Maxwell "Mascotte"

—G. C. SMITH, Springfield, Mass.

AT the big National Motor Shows, where values were carefully compared by every one looking for a moderate-priced car, the "Mascotte" was undoubtedly the leader. Look them all over at Mechanics Hall and you'll approve that judgment.

It was big enough, powerful enough and the most stylish, low-priced car shown. Indeed, it compared favorably with any car there. We only ask you to judge the style and finish for yourself at the Show

It's well built, like all Maxwells. If they weren't well built, there wouldn't be 51,000 of them in use. Doctors, who demand constant, unfailing service, drive 16,000 Maxwell cars. None but a dependable car could meet this test—and an economical car to run as well.

And it will last as long as the most expensive cars made. This is proved by State registrations in New York, where last year 91 per cent of the 1905 Maxwells were again registered after seven years' continuous service. No car at any price has an equal record.

Stoddard-Dayton "Saybrook" at $2800 is the best and the cheapest

HERE'S the car that's head and shoulders above all others. The car with every possible improvement so far TRIED and FOUND SATISFACTORY. There is no ONE device to catch the eye; we are not selling this car on its finish and upholstery ALONE; there are MANY advanced features which the average man will not see, but he'll enjoy their benefits just the same. No ONE feature stands out more than another. The satisfaction that any car can give depends upon the WHOLE CAR. A "Stoddard-Dayton" car is a COMPLETE MOTORING PROPOSITION.

Demountable rims—Quick detachable, demountable style, 4x4½ tires. An extra rim furnished. Also tire irons.

Wheelbase—Of 122½ inches. Exhaustive tests proved this the most advantageous wheelbase for a comfortable 7 passenger car.

Hartford shock absorbers—Makes sure the riding comfort of the already perfect car.

Combination electric and oil lamps—Makes kerosene an optional reserve, and not a necessity.

Windshield—Of latest improved pattern is part of this equipment.

Top and cover—Full mohair top and top boot are furnished to harmonize with the car. Storm curtains are also regular equipment.

Stoddard-Dayton Service—Does not cease with the purchase of a car by you. That is when it BEGINS. A part of the pleasure of Stoddard-Dayton owners is the prompt and willing service rendered to car and owner at all times.

The price—Complete, as outlined above, f.o.b. factory, $2800

"Saybrook" $2800 fully Equipped

Stoddard-Dayton makers do their experimenting in their own shops. They do not ask owners to experiment for them. The new Stoddard-Dayton stands as the sum total of all automobile knowledge to date. Every improvement—actual, real improvement—is there. We shall be very glad to send you a catalogue and follow same by calling upon you, if you so desire. We are always glad to have people call at our store whether they purpose buying or not. If we can give you any information we will gladly do so, and all without obligation.

Examine the entire Stoddard line at Mechanics Hall or come to our show room and arrange for a demonstration.

About New York's Motor Boat Show

It was, by all odds, the most brilliant and complete display of motor boats, their parts and accessories ever held in this country. Manufacturers, big and little, displayed their wares. There were the standard makes you knew about and new firms you never heard of. The old lines, with an improvement here and there mayhap, were surrounded by new innovations, new inventions. All motor boatdom spread itself before your eyes.

The MARCH issue of MoToR BoaTinG brings the New York Motor Boat Show to your library table. Whether you visited the Show or not, you want to read it. It was a great Show—one that you want to know all about.

MoToR BoaTinG has prepared the most thorough and elaborate account of this Show ever attempted by a magazine. There is a minute and detailed description of the exhibits—all beautifully illustrated by hundreds of photographs.

All the new models are described, and the various types of motors, clutches, transmission systems are compared and illustrated. The complete specifications of many hulls are given with full sets of plans. The latest accessories are described and illustrated. In fact, all that vast exhibition will be put before you.

FAIRMOUNT DOESN'T LIKE OUR COMPANY

[illegible] to Shake Us and Hitch [illegible] to That Nice Town of Milton.

[illegible] "INTEGRITY" HIT

[illegible] Want to Flee [illegible] of "People We Don't Know."

Well, [illegible] you, Lester P. Winchenbaugh of Fairmount!

Whadda you mean, anyhow, by saying Boston isn't good enough for Fairmount?

Come up close, [illegible], and listen to what they think of [illegible] Bostonians out in the Fairmount section of Hyde Park.

You know Hyde Park was annexed to Boston at New Year's. Now the Fairmount district of Hyde Park asks the Legislature to let Fairmount be cut off from Boston and be annexed to Milton.

Some parts of Hyde Park fought against the original annexation to Boston. Lester P. Winchenbaugh was against it [illegible] and some 400 others are [illegible] this scheme to cut loose from Boston and tie up with Milton, which is a swell residential town, as everybody knows.

And why?

Well, among other reasons Mr. Winchenbaugh cited yesterday the following:

"We want to maintain our present form of town life. We are a purely residential section, like our neighbor Milton. We have no factories or businesses of any kind and we do not wish to have such."

That's all right. But here is where they put the "houn' dawg" sign on us Boston roughnecks — — —.

O You "Social Integrity."

"If we remain a ward of Boston," says Mr. Winchenbaugh, "it is quite likely that business may invade our community. In that case we might have an influx of people we don't know, and the social integrity of our colony would be broken up."

Get that, Bo?

If Fairmount stays in Dame Boston's family, the Fairmounters may have an influx of people they "don't know."

And their "social integrity"—whatever that means—may get plumb busticated.

Fairmount seems to think almost as much of Dame Boston as the young lady in the song did of the young man when she twitted him:

"I don't like your fam-i-lee
Your folks don't look good to me
I don't believe your Uncle John Ever had a collar on—

Wanted to Stay Out.

Mr. Winchenbaugh says a [illegible] other things not quite so harsh. [illegible] of his chief arguments is that [illegible] Fairmount people never want [illegible] to Boston in the first place [illegible] because the rest of Hyde Park [illegible] Fairmount always [illegible] that they had annexation "wished on" [illegible] as it were.

Another argument of Brother Winchenbaugh for ripping Fairmount away from Boston and [illegible] it up to Milton is this.

"Fairmount is [illegible] a part of Milton. The Neponset River forms a natural dividing line between Milton and Fairmount, on the one hand, and Hyde Park on the other. [illegible] Fairmount was originally part of M[illegible]

[illegible]

Those Apartment Houses.

[illegible] Mandell, who went to [illegible] and remembers well when [illegible] of Hyde Park a year after [illegible]

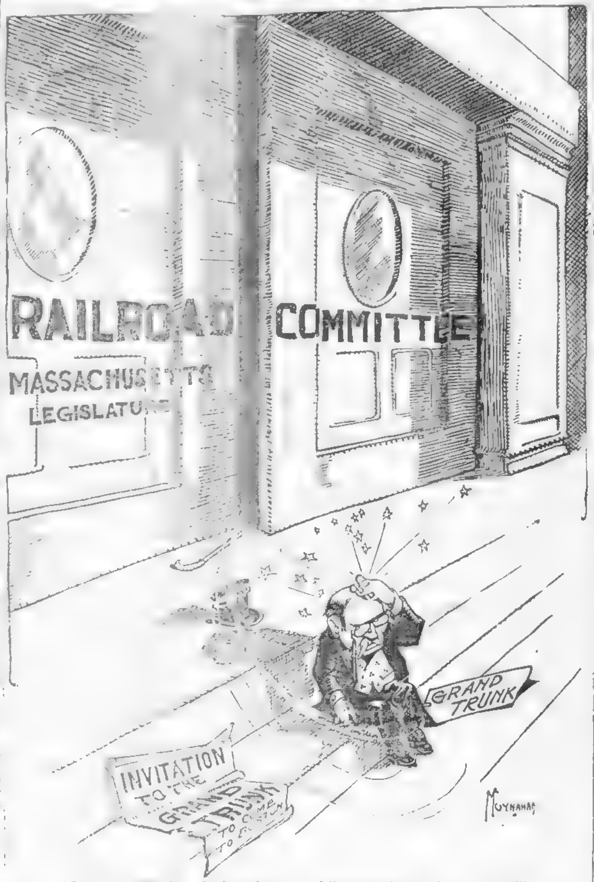
"We want to get out of Boston and [illegible] Milton because we want to remain a residential community. Boston's tax rate [illegible] that we fear the increased [illegible] the bringing [illegible] apartment houses and the consequent [illegible] of our social life. Milton is a [illegible] and has a lower tax rate. We [illegible] looking for social prominence in Milton, but we want to preserve our own homes and social life."

Mr. Mandell has the same dread of Boston that Mr. Winchenbaugh feels. Mr. Winchenbaugh fears lest Fairmount's social integrity be broken up.

Mr. Mandell says "ruin of our social life."

There are a lot of other arguments, but the "social integrity" and "ruin" reasons seem most weighty.

"BY SPECIAL INVITATION!"



"I [illegible] they do down here to a fellow who hasn't been invited!"

SCHOONMAKER COMMITTEE IS AGAINST THE GRAND TRUNK

Statesmen on the Railroad Board at the State House Insist on the Introduction of Maps Showing Right of Way

To Produce Them Would Cost Grand Trunk Millions of Dollars to Land Speculators; Road Would Rather Quit

When Grill Is Resumed Wednesday, Coolidge for New Haven and Hudson for B. & A. Will Have Reserved Seats

THE game of baiting the Grand Trunk Railroad, whose promoters innocently accepted the unanimous vote of the Legislature to come to Boston and were then turned over to the Railroad Committee, will be resumed on the fourth floor of the State House on Wednesday morning at 10:30 o'clock.

While the Morgan interests have not yet shown their hand in the open—there doesn't appear to be any great necessity for it as yet—William H. Coolidge, New Haven attorney, and Woodward Hudson, Boston & Albany attorney, will continue to occupy front seats. Mr. Coolidge will hold down a chair close to the semi-circle of legislators. Also there will be three or four members of the railroad lobby running around in circles, fetching and carrying, anxious for the bill to reach the House or Senate in some form that the battle may begin.

Great Fight Assured.

The Beacon Hill stage is being set for the greatest railroad fight within memory. It may be the last great railroad battle in the East. The Commonwealth of Massachusetts, not to mention the men and the interests most directly involved, will be exceedingly fortunate if the fight goes by without a scandal. The hangers-on in the lobby are exceedingly hungry after two or three lean years.

Eight of the fifteen members of the Railroad Committee at the State House are said to be against bringing the Grand Trunk Railway to Boston except on terms which make it impossible for the Grand Trunk to come.

Seven of the eight were members of last year's Legislature, both branches of which unanimously passed an order inviting the transcontinental line to come to Massachusetts.

That Majority of Eight

The eight who [illegible] and general attitude [illegible] hearings [illegible] position are:

How to Telephone An Emergency Call

¶ We wish every telephone user in Greater Boston would read the suggestions regarding Emergency Telephone Service as contained on Page 9 of the Winter Issue of the Telephone Directory

¶ We believe we could increase materially our efficiency in handling such calls if in every instance we could have the cool-headed, intelligent co-operation of our patrons.

¶ [illegible] Emergency Call for the police,

"Police Department Emergency" or, when they want to make an Emergency Call for the Fire Department,

"Fire Department—Emergency" or, if there is emergency need of a doctor, to say,

"Call a Doctor—Emergency"

¶ We make such calls without charge, as our contribution to a public service. We are especially desirous, therefore, that they shall be fully effective. The word "Emergency" acts as a signal that such a call is to be referred at once to a special operator—usually a supervisor or chief operator—and to have her exclusive attention.

¶ The simplest way of assuring effective results is for telephone users to join with us in carrying out this plan. We therefore submit this explanatory outline and request their co-operation.

¶ The delivery of this Winter Issue of the Directory has just been completed. If you have not received a copy, call Fort Hill 7600.

ALFRED HENRY LEWIS MAKES ANSWERS TO LITTLE'S QUERY

[illegible] the [illegible] maga[illegible] Mr. Hearst, to be run under the caption, "Looking for a President.")

By ALFRED HENRY LEWIS.

[illegible] meet with Mr. Hearst in [illegible] time. I will find him, however, before your next number appears, and [illegible]

[illegible] that, however, I have here [illegible] my own thoughts [illegible]

[illegible] Pearson's referred to in your note, you [illegible] of too [illegible] House. [illegible] speaks [illegible] own feeling. You conclude by [illegible] "originality, per[illegible] independent spirit [illegible] his business capa[illegible] in business along original lines, and [illegible] of his own [illegible]

[illegible] is a pheno[illegible] Where a [illegible] who know [illegible]

[illegible] Upon the whole, your selection of Mr. Hearst makes great [illegible] credit. Who would be offended, what interest would be threatened by the White House elevation of Mr. Hearst? Mr. Hearst is offensive to the money-changers—to the princes of privilege—and they have ever borne him bitterly upon the skyline of their regard. And yet we can confidently promise this. If any citizen will but light a fair candle of inquiry, he will find nothing in Mr. Hearst, or in what he fights for, which should either disquiet a prudent public or alarm an [illegible] If no one worse than [illegible] has been com[illegible] in our time.

A True Business Builder.

The money-changers will shudderingly tell us, to be sure, that Mr. Hearst is a destructionist and would [illegible] for the White House. That is because they fear him for his integrities, and what laws he would enforce. They can't call him rascal and [illegible] of his White House elevation. All of which is hand-made mendacity and [illegible] error and fable.

Mr. Hearst threatens no one who isn't a criminal. As a President he would be radical only in upholding the law. Mr. Hearst a destructionist? Are we to have laws and [illegible] them? And if wealth be the word in the mouths of our money changers, [illegible] Mr. Hearst's stake in the country is as great as their own. He is no Kearney of the Sandlots, with nothing to lose, who, to bring others to his own poor level, would pull [illegible] If we [illegible] has millions, and unless [illegible] be rogue millions, black millions borne of crime, in what should he harm them without harming himself?

Mr. Hearst is a business man, in the term's extremest and most sensitive expression. He owns newspapers in [illegible] has a group of maga[illegible] [illegible] day [illegible] the muster-sheets of an army.

Also, every Hearst publication pays.

In getting the measure of a man, for what White House good or harm should dwell in him, it is greatly worth while to induce him to talk. [illegible]

[illegible] burglary.

"Good Trusts" and "Bad Trusts."

In any [illegible] and, consequently, any permanent settlement of the trust problem, we have to consider the retention of the benefits of combination [illegible] as the elimination of the evils attendant upon combination. I would define a trust as a combination [illegible] The evils of the trust lie largely in the abuse of this power to control [illegible]

[illegible] economies [illegible] of combination make it possible for an article to be produced of a better quality and [illegible] compel the sale of the product at a cheaper price. In other words, combination [illegible] distinct benefit to the consuming public, the public must be allowed to participate in its advantages. Business will no more return to competition after it has learned the superior advantages of combination than a child will return to crawling after it [illegible]

[illegible] larger must be the percentage of profit to make it successful. The evils of the trusts are due to the fact that their control of products and prices enables them to fix prices at an unnaturally low level in order to drive a competitor out of business and then at an un[illegible]

[illegible] organized to fix the price of its products at a reasonable or unreasonable figure, it is doubtless the right and will undoubtedly become the duty of the government to interfere in behalf of the consuming public and see that the [illegible]

[illegible] Concerning the tariff, Mr. Hearst [illegible] there should be a gradual reduction of [illegible] benefited and the consuming public benefited without injuring the legitimate enterprises which have been encouraged by the tariff and are more or less dependent upon it. I am not an extremist, I believe in construction. [illegible] Also apart from my [illegible] opinion of the people generally favors [illegible] the competing lowering of duties levied in other countries against ex[illegible]

[illegible] views by declaring that "there should be no protection for oppressive trusts [illegible] sell cheaply abroad and take advantage of the tariff at home to crush competition, raise prices, control production and limit work and wages."

Recall—Initiation—Referendum.

For twenty years Mr. Hearst has been frank, open and emphatic concerning those great reforms now becoming popular—the recall, the initiative and the referendum. I clip the following from a score of Mr. Hearst's utterances bearing thereon:

This is an age of business, and we should place the control of government [illegible] the initiative, the referendum and the recall. I've been saying this for twenty years. These measures are not dangerously radical. They are no [illegible] in principle. They confer no more reckless rights upon the citizens than are enjoyed by the stockholders of every business institution. [illegible] upon action upon legislation of which [illegible]

[illegible] proved incompetent or corrupt [illegible]

[illegible] without the people [illegible] more than a private servant should be allowed to hand the silverware out of the window without the master's consent. The referendum would be employed to secure the approval of the real proprietors of a franchise upon [illegible]

[illegible] as a menace to unfaithfulness [illegible] The right of recall should be in the [illegible]

[illegible] a corrupt [illegible] the Hearst [illegible] government is chiefly [illegible]

[illegible] We are not getting [illegible] the people have more confidence—based on demonstrated facts—in the ability of the government to conduct public ownership successfully. I would favor, let us say, the immediate public ownership of telegraphs and their operation in connection with the postal service. This much of public ownership is not an experiment and prevails in every civilized nation except our own. [illegible]

[illegible] and municipalities to conduct public utilities for the public good [illegible]

[illegible] impedes the right to select the candidate. In machine government the citizens do not choose their candidates. The "boss" appoints the candidates; the convention affirms the appointments; the citizens on election day go through the formality of ratifying a "boss" action. I object to "boss" rule. I revere a leader but resent a "boss." I am ready to be led, but I am not ready to be driven or delivered."

Concerning an income tax: "The income tax is no more than elemental justice. One eminent economist, Mr. Rockefeller, said that the income tax is confiscation. All taxation is confiscation in a sense. But of all taxation, that which savors least of confiscation is the tax which falls upon the surplus income of the rich, while that which savors most of confiscation is the tax which falls upon the scant possessions of the poor."

[illegible] viewer quotes Mr. Hearst as saying this: "Of course," returned Mr. Hearst, with a reminiscent smile as he reflected upon what hundreds of thousands of dollars war had cost him in his role of news-getter—"of course, I am opposed to war, as every sane American is. But inasmuch as America cannot control the actions of other powers, and since this country, despite its desire for peace—may be at any moment forced into a [illegible] taxes of the world reduced to a [illegible]

The Laws of Mr. Hearst.

There you have Mr. Hearst, in convincing black and white, upon fairly every angle of popular concern. And yet there is in addition a chapter of important achievement [illegible] deserves to be written. When Mr. Hearst sat [illegible] of Representatives, the [illegible]

[illegible] of the Interstate Commerce act, which gave the Interstate Commerce [illegible]

[illegible] The Hearst bill, being a minority measure [illegible]

[illegible] Interstate Commerce Court. This division of the Hearst bill was so clumsily done [illegible] the second half [illegible] a paragraph in the first half of Esch bill was not [illegible] and is fool-ishly there today. It has this merit however: it clearly proves the Esch bill and the Townsend bill to be merely the Hearst bill [illegible] in two and [illegible] for partisan Republican purposes.

Neither the [illegible] the Townsend bill [illegible] At [illegible] President Roosevelt in a message [illegible] was [illegible] law. One weighty clause, however, was omitted. It was the clause in the Hearst bill which gave shippers the right by mandamus to compel railroads to furnish cars and perform their legal duties as common carriers. At the next session and in a second and separate measure, President Roosevelt urged upon Congress that omitted clause, and today the shipper by mandamus may protect himself in court against the refusal of a railway to give him what cars he needs precisely as was set forth in the original Hearst bill.

The second half of the Hearst bill, made over as the Townsend bill, slept until the White House advent of President Taft. He picked it up, as had President Roosevelt the first half, and [illegible] it congressionally through. Thus in three pieces, and after three years, did the original Hearst bill become law. It was he and not Mr. Esch [illegible] Mr. Townsend, he and not Mr. [illegible] velt and Mr. Taft, who created the Interstate Commerce Court and invested the Interstate Commerce Commission with power to regulate railway rates. It is to him [illegible] the glory should go.

Other Measures Offered in Congress.

While in Congress, Mr. Hearst offered a Federal Incorporation act, and a measure arranging for the Parcels Post. The Hearst [illegible] corporation act sought to [illegible] capitalization of corporations, and confine it to the actual value of what property the company owned. It met the fate of all good minority [illegible] in two separate messages, revived it, [illegible] ing certain tariff changes meant only to [illegible] party [illegible]

Other ideas introduced in Congress by Mr. Hearst and fought for by him in his newspapers were:

A bill to provide the construction of a national system of good roads; a bill establishing the eight-hour day on government work and the payment of the prevailing rate of wages by all Federal contractors and sub-contractors (which by the way six years later, is now being enacted by the present Congress); a bill to increase the salaries of the justices of the Supreme Court, a bill to enlarge the domestic [illegible] for farm products, and [illegible] tured alcohol; a bill authorizing the United States government to acquire [illegible] paying therefor by the sale of bonds redeemable out of net earnings; a bill to authorize [illegible] donel and to provide for the maintenance, operation and development [illegible] ers, a bill making [illegible] a criminal offense (subsequently enacted on the initiative of others); and a bill amending the Sherman Anti-Trust law so as to strengthen it as a criminal statute.

[illegible] the quoted words of Mr. Hearst, and recalling his congressional career, what interest does he threaten?—and whether the interest be private or public, an interest of commerce or an interest of government?

As you re-read the statements of Mr. Hearst and consider his congressional work, you will more and more wonder [illegible] radical. I can tell you. It was by outrunning his hour, by getting ahead of his times. For example, today the recall, the initiative and the referendum are popular as reforms. He is doubted for a reactionary who is heard to oppose them. [illegible] are for them, because the people are [illegible] forward by the tail. But it was not always so. Twenty years ago, when Mr. Hearst began urging them, the initiative, the recall and the referendum were far from being fashionable. Mr. Hearst, because he supported them, was called "Anarchist" and worse.

Those were days when the Woodrow Wilsons, crying for the "Safe and Sane" (too often spelled "Scene")—denounced the initiative, the recall and the referendum, as the lures of Satan [illegible]

[illegible] with warmth [illegible] patriots [illegible]

[illegible] recall, the initiative and the referendum. He was for them in their cradles [illegible] Woodrow Wilsons but [illegible] the things and hold the ground which have been said and held by Mr. Hearst since ever—with his San Francisco Examiner—he began moving in public affairs.

It was by those [illegible] Mr. H[illegible] [illegible] and invested with the [illegible]

[illegible] merest echo of the Woodrow Wilsons [illegible] who in slow [illegible] such hesitation [illegible] from a personal acquaint[illegible]

[illegible] forces oppose a man, and I'll tell you what manner of man he is. Who oppose Mr. Hearst? Who fear or pretend [illegible] to [illegible]?

Because he has everywhere, and upon all occasions, used his newspapers as a lash herewith to sting the saffron sides of Special Privilege, the chief detractors of Mr. Hearst have been and are our richest [illegible] of greed. He has hurt them, he promises to hurt them more. Because he has hurt them they fear him, and [illegible] they [illegible] these robbers hate him. Everywhere, and at all times, the Hearst enemy is the [illegible] a public should politically [illegible]

"A Dangerous Demagogue."

When Mr. Hearst came to New York in 1895, he offered as splendid a picture of clean-strain Americanism as one might find, and search throughout a long Summer day. There was nothing sordid in what impulses moved him [illegible] honest and not [illegible] you will find their politics is but a [illegible] for self-interest. There is a [illegible] goes with money, and folk [illegible] prone to consult their pocket-books in deciding upon their principles.

It is to the good repute of Mr. Hearst that, with this the plain portrait of what majority surrounded him, he exhibited virtues which had been out of New York fashion since 1776. Mr. Hearst was honest; and [illegible] would go to the mark. No self-interest would serve either to deflect or defeat it. There are honest [illegible] is in honesty neither hesitating nor [illegible] It is tame, tractable; it [illegible] extremes. As is said of a well [illegible] horse, it will stand without hitching.

[illegible] pirate Special Privilege [illegible]

[illegible] be taught the alarming lesson which [illegible]

[illegible] every stateman of [illegible] every [illegible] crook in Wall Street. As Wall Streeters and politicians denounced Mr. Hearst, the [illegible] took him up. With that, every engine of criminal Privilege was harnessed against him. He was most regarded by criminal Privilege who most vilified Mr. Hearst.

Criminal Privilege, for a purpose of slander, is [illegible] well equipped. How many of our daily papers are merest [illegible] of criminal Special Privilege, tireless to swing the incense censer in their song of praise? At the criminal nod of [illegible] Mr. Hearst was assailed by [illegible] they said it was to celebrate [illegible] When they helped his bread [illegible] wagons, feeding long lines of Winter [illegible] the presiding geniuses of the [illegible]

[illegible] on the highway, every hoss in the slums, if backtracked to his parentage would be found their legitimate offspring. And it was these who called at Mr. Hearst. They claimed the right to produce tramps; he, however, must not [illegible] them.

Yelping at the Hearst heels [illegible] hounds [illegible] of Special Privilege [illegible] and is nothing other than compliment. Its authors would have said the same of the Ten Commandments, had they been present when Moses [illegible] They would have said worse of the Declaration of Independence that July day when the Franklins and the Jeffersons laid it before the encouraged eyes of mankind.

A Disciple of Force and Publicity.

The attacks of criminal Privilege and a Moneyfed press failed of malefect. The people had taken the measure of those yelping Privilege papers. They knew them for the veriest dogs of Privilege, trotting along beneath the Privilege wagon. Where Privilege went, they went; where Privilege stopped, they stopped. When criminal Special Privilege halted and pitched camp, those Special Privilege press-dogs slept in its grateful shade, arousing themselves only to bark at honest strangers, not of Privilege, who [illegible]

[illegible] thrown at Mr. Hearst, fell back to [illegible]

[illegible] Hunting in the honest wake of such as Mr. H[illegible] their sympathy [illegible] ity of their interest, their lack of any [illegible] heartlessness, their pride with [illegible]

[illegible] peruse Burke's Peerage and [illegible] nothing and may think of less, they [illegible] dangerous who [illegible]

[illegible] Weakness shrinks from [illegible] quakes before courage.

A Candidate Who Would Win.

Mr. Hearst Answers Mr. Little as to Principles and Purposes; Not a Candidate for President

The following letter of Mr. Hearst appeared in the MARCH number of Pearson's Magazine:

My Dear Mr. Little:

I have read the article published in your magazine with natural gratification. While I am not a candidate and can see no present reason why I should become one, it is, nevertheless, very agreeable to have the work that I have tried to do referred to in so complimentary a way as you have referred to it in your magazine. Publishers, as a rule, do not receive much recognition from their fellow publishers, and therefore your generous attitude is particularly appreciated by me.

I have not seen Mr. Lewis of late and have not had an opportunity to discuss with him the subject matter of the article, but as you know, Mr. Lewis and I have been friends for many years and he has certainly defined and described my principles and policies with great correctness and exactness.

I went home from Harvard in 1886 and shortly after that took charge of the San Francisco Examiner. Ever since that time I have been crusading along the lines of the policy described in your article.

The San Francisco Examiner is celebrating this month the twenty-fifth anniversary of its existence and activity under my management. In that twenty-five years a great many things which seemed radical at first have become conservative, and so a great many of the policies which I was considered an extremist for advocating are now generally accepted. In fact, many of them are in practical operation.

In the same way many of the projects which I advocated have become accomplished facts, and many others are in process of accomplishment. For instance, one of the first movements to which I lent my advocacy was the agitation for a trans-Isthmian canal. Next year will probably see that canal opened to shipping, and San Francisco in 1915 will celebrate the completion of the canal with an international exhibition.

Of course, I do not imagine that I have done much to bring these principles and projects to fruition. But I have at all times done all that I could do to advance these progressive principles and beneficial projects. I am gratified to see many of them reaching successful accomplishment, gratified to think that I have had some small part in their advancement, and also gratified to remember that I have not wasted much time or much effort in supporting unsound theories or impractical ideas.

I do not believe that in the list of principles and policies you have enumerated there is a single one which will not sooner or later—and in all probability sooner—become the accepted policy of the country.

If I could advance any of the policies which are as yet unaccomplished by becoming a candidate for President, I would become a candidate. But I do not see that I can do so. There are candidates in the Democratic field who represent these policies in the main with as much enthusiasm as I do, and probably with more ability and experience.

I have declared a preference for the man who I believe represents them best, and I shall labor to secure the Presidential nomination for him. If at any time, or for any reason, he should retire and the selection of a candidate to represent true Democracy and genuine progressive principles should lie between an avowed reactionary and a pretended progressive, I might become a candidate.

But I hope that situation will not arise, and, frankly, I do not think it will arise.

WILLIAM RANDOLPH HEARST.

An original musical comedy in two acts, called the "Runaway Girls from Dixie" is the vehicle. There is no time lost in meaningless dialogue. Instead there is a rapid succession of funny scenes which keeps the audience in a constant uproar. The chorus numbers twenty-five young women well trained after the manner of the rollicking Broadway show girls. The chorus of the Runaway Girls is conceded to be one of the best ever seen outside of Greater New York. Mr. Clark has also introduced some new ideas in electrical effects.

The story told in this picture is one that does not give the Mormons any of the best of it on moral grounds, and the story is both thrilling and romantic. It should prove a big hit.

Hub Theatre.

Levasseur, the champion back lifter of the world, who was a special feature with Ringling Bros', world's greatest shows, season of 1907, is to be the feature act at the Hub Theatre this week.

Irish Players.

The last appearance in this country of the Irish Players will take place on Tuesday afternoon at the Plymouth Theatre. Lady Gregory, who has been with the company since the beginning of its American tour, personally chose Boston as the scene of the farewell performance prior to their departure for England on Wednesday morning. The program for the special matinee will include J. M. Synge's "The Riders of the Sea," and Lady Gregory's three one-act plays, "The Workhouse Ward," "Spreading the News" and "The Rising of the Moon." Owing to the length of the bill, the performance will start at 1.30 p. m. sharp.

McGrath Benefit.

For the first time in his entire fifteen years of theatre service, Frank M. McGrath, the "man in the box office" at the Majestic Theatre, has consented to accept a testimonial benefit which has been tendered him by the Wilbur-Shubert Company and F. C. Whitney. This benefit will ... on the occasion of the opening ... of the return engagement at the Majestic ... of "The Chocolate Soldier." Mr. McGrath has been at the ticket window of the Majestic for six years now and in that time his courtesy ... has won him many friends among the patrons of the theatre. Previous to his connection with the Majestic Theatre he was in the box office at the Columbia Theatre for nine years. He is a Boston boy, and was educated in the public schools.

At the Theatres

ROBERT HOOD BOWERS, the composer of some of the biggest musical successes in recent years, is responsible for the music of "California," the one-act American operetta which Jesse L. Lasky brings to B. F. Keith's Theatre this week. Bowers composed the music of "The Vanderbilt Cup," Elsie Janis' first starring vehicle, and "The Red Rose," which served ... last Summer. In "California" ... incorporated with two of the cleverest writers in the American stage, ... Stewart and Cecil DeMille. Stewart ... lyrics and DeMille, who wrote "Strongheart," Robert Edeson's great dramatic success of five years ago, is responsible for the book. The best number in the score of "California" is a duet sung by the hero and heroine, played by Harry Griffith and Leslie Leigh respectively, and entitled "I Love You, My Own."

FROM a story told by James K. Hackett, who is at the Hollis Street Theatre, it would appear that a certain young man in the Southwest was terrified by the conventionalities which appeared to him to be necessary in the case of his marriage to a young woman of Little Rock.

This young man had sent a letter to a large clothing concern in New York in which he had made the inquiry: "What is the proper dress for a groom in the ...?"

Now, it seems that the clerk who opened the mail referred the inquiry to the livery department, and the head thereof dictated a brief reply: "Bottle-green coat, fawn colored trousers, with top boots, silk hat with cockade. We can quote you prices as follows."

In a short time came this plaintive letter from the young man in the Southwest: "I always knew it was expensive to get married, but can't you suggest something a little less elaborate?"

ADA DWYER AN OPTIMIST.

But the Actress Longs to Settle Down and Stay Settled.

Ada Dwyer of "The Deep Purple" declares herself an out and out optimist. "After the fires of your youth have burned themselves down a bit," she explains, "after you've ceased trying to hitch your burning chariot to some far off star; in short, after you've passed into your thirties and settle down to common sense and logical views of things, you discover that the normal things are the real things after all. There is no success so great, no ambition so gloriously realized, to compare with the simplest of these normal and fundamental things—motherhood and a home.

"I've seen all the world it seems to me, Europe and Australia and all the nooks and corners here and while it's glorious to travel and be in touch with the ongoing rush of life and events, I often find myself wishing to 'be put' somewhere and to stay 'put' for ever."

Scott & Company's Opening SUCCESS

We think that single word fittingly conveys what our opening day meant.

We were anxious for an expression of opinion from you—the people who make or mar success. We are pleased with the kind words and many well wishes said yesterday regarding our new store and our clothing.

With more room, more light, good ventilation and a chance to show our styles to better advantage, we ought to be able to serve you better than before and we are going to try to do so.

We thank you all heartily and will be glad to greet you soon again.

200 EAT A 14-CENT MEAL TO SHOW COST

Church Women Serve Dinner for 10 Cents as "Ad" for Chicago Housewives.

CHICAGO, March 2.—Two hundred guests, mostly women, yesterday partook of a 14-cent dinner served in the Immanuel Baptist Church by the Rev. John Alson Myers and the women's society of the church, who are striving to prove to housewives of Chicago that the cost of living need not be so high if food is purchased economically and properly cooked.

Although the dinner actually cost 14 cents, the society charged the usual lunch room price of ten cents.

Mrs. J. P. Bishop, chairman of the committee preparing the dinner, explained. Dinner had a dinner was provided as an ... of what it is ... for ... ... offered ... or less ... Mrs. Ida Mae Pr... declared a ... How to Reduce ... a ... Living ... skating ...

She Dog Gay Paris Ways

THE DARING FIGURINE "THE ROSE" FOR WHICH THE ENGLISH SOCIETY BEAUTY, MARJORIE MANNERS POSED

"CUNNING AS A MOUSE"—ANDREOTTI'S ODD STATUETTE, SAID TO HAVE BEEN MODELLED AS A PORTRAIT OF MRS. LAURENCE GILLESPIE WHO WAS ONE OF THE IMMENSELY RICH SHERMAN GIRLS.

IN Paris, centre of the art world, headquarters of fashion and strange spiritual cults, women of the international smart set and of celebrity on the stage have originated the most extraordinary of all of fashion's fads. They are having themselves reproduced in statuettes in which the sculptor combines with their own personal characteristics a startling suggestion of their favorite pet animals.

It was the inspiration of the sculptor Andreotti to execute his conception that women, even in their outward being partake of the attributes of their best loved animal companions; that such women are actually dog-like, cat-like, parrot-like, horse-like, mouse-like, even elephant-like—according to their animal preferences.

Even in the last named case Andreotti was equal to the emergency. In an exquisite figurine he placed the elephant-loving lady, scantily clad, in graceful posture on the beast's head.

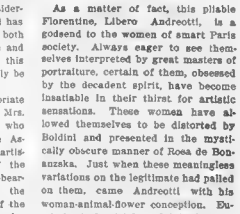
The Russian wolfhound pets of the Countess Cassini are famous. Although the Countess is a very beautiful woman, the sculptor has succeeded in modeling herself plus a striking wolfhound suggestion, though the method is most subtle and discreet.

In the case of Miss Marjorie Manners, probably the most beautiful girl in English smart society, not a pet animal, but her favorite flower—the rose—is embodied in the figurine. A woman, however beautiful, can hardly resemble a rose; but the sculptor solved his problem with charming effect by showing the lovely face and form emerging from among the petals of that flower.

The sombre trend of the genius of the great Italian actress, Eleanora Duse, together with the fact of her fondness for that darkly mysterious bird, the raven, enabled Andreotti to produce a wonderful likeness; that is, wonderfully ravenesque.

This young sculptor, who is tall, dark, handsome, and immaculate as to dress and manners, has become so much the vogue in Paris international society that hardly any woman with a social position to maintain can afford to hold herself aloof from the fad of which he is the apostle. When Anna Gould—Princess de Sagan—submits herself for his plastic ministrations, Paris anticipates that the result will show more than a suggestion of that industrious fowl, the ben. Considering how diligently Anna Gould has "scratched" for both Boni de Castellane and Prince de Sagan, this inference can hardly be set aside.

Equally appropriate in the case of Mrs. Spender Clay — who was Miss Pauline Astor—would be an artistic application of the beaver that fur-bearing animal being the accepted symbol of the Astor family's rise from obscurity to celebrated multi-millionairedom.



As a matter of fact, this pliable Florentine, Libero Andreotti, is a godsend to the women of smart Paris society. Always eager to see themselves interpreted by great masters of portraiture, certain of them, obsessed by the decadent spirit, have become insatiable in their thirst for artistic sensations. These women have allowed themselves to be distorted by Boldini and presented in the mystically obscure manner of Rosa de Bonanzska. Just when these meaningless variations on the legitimate had palled on them, came Andreotti with his woman-animal-flower conception. Eureka! Andreotti leaped into fame.

This extraordinary fad is likely to be longlived, for Andreotti's solid genius is admitted—the salons have placed upon his more serious works the stamp of their high approval.

"THE RUSSIAN WOLFHOUND PETS OF THE COUNTESS CASSINI ARE FAMOUS. ALTHOUGH THE COUNTESS IS A VERY BEAUTIFUL WOMAN, THE SCULPTOR HAS SUCCEEDED IN MODELING HERSELF PLUS A STRIKING WOLFHOUND SUGGESTION, THOUGH THE METHOD IS MOST SUBTLE AND DISCREET."

How I Would Make War—By G. Bernard Shaw.

"I Should Kill All the Women Less Than Fifty Years Old, Taking Care Not to Shed a Drop of Masculine Blood Without Necessity—

"Then the Population of the Enemy Would Perish from Senility or Be Compelled to Wed the Women of My Nation in Order to Perpetuate Itself."

"The Mothers' Curse Upon War," a Powerful Picture by G. Ferrier Which Shows How the Horrors of War Always Fall Largely Upon Women. Bernard Shaw Would Push This Teaching to a Logical Conclusion by Destroying All the Possible Mothers of a Defeated Enemy.

By G. BERNARD SHAW

WAR as we have known it is a nuisance, a necessity, but a sport. It is indeed the survival of the sporting instinct in us that makes us fight as animals do, and that makes us regret the passing of the days when we could fight openly and honorably for the sport of fighting within endurable limits.

A comparison will illustrate my idea exactly. I grew up in the grand old English sport of [illegible]. It was [illegible] and we were [illegible] we were forbidden to kick, to hit below the belt, to poke one another's eyes out. The foul [illegible] adversary [illegible] in order that we might establish [illegible] the struggle until [illegible] was in a perfect condition, [illegible] or boxing matches were thoroughly practised. Often they lasted for several hours without [illegible] of the combatants exhibiting any remark[illegible] personal courage. We have seen a case [illegible] glorious but [illegible] the struggle until [illegible] and [illegible] a mirror to convince [illegible] that his [illegible] was in a perfect condition, while that of his antagonist was noticeably black and [illegible].

To-day the same manner war has been [illegible] by a collection of rules, which have [illegible] and cruelties within supportable [illegible]. The use of explosive bullets is forbidden. Non-combatants are spared from pillage and [illegible]. Pillage and wanton destruction are [illegible]. Even [illegible] The Red Cross service is organized [illegible] to the wounded, and is carefully guarded by both sides. Congresses are held from time to time at Geneva or The Hague to preserve [illegible] of this old sport by imposing [illegible] which will carefully preserve its essential [illegible].

None of these Congresses has quite succeeded in restoring the elaborate etiquette of the old [illegible] kings [illegible] Napoleonic wars a domestic affair, there has appeared a [illegible] at Marengo according to the rules. He changed defeat into victory by refusing to accept the decision and by attacking again when the battle [illegible] restored to honor by the triumph [illegible] at Waterloo. A long period of peace followed, during which the liberal bourgeoisie completed its conquest of political power [illegible] and on one special day let them never fight. No man who stood head to toe [illegible] would dream of [illegible] out of one's bed, but an occasional bloody shirt would do him good and he knows it. And that's where my matrimonial reckoning day comes in.

"If the logical development of war which I have outlined should prove repugnant to the civilized nations, it is evidently possible that they may unite to suppress war altogether by destroying the first army that enters the field or the first fleet that fires a shot, by means of their united forces."

This has to be [illegible] and it is something so really need. When should never pay their husbands, but they should keep an account of their shortcomings and on one special day let them never fail. No man who stood head to toe [illegible] would dream of [illegible] out of one's bed, but an occasional bloody shirt would do him good and he knows it. And that's where my matrimonial reckoning day comes in.

[illegible] consideration, this important word and the sign of stinginess. When the reckoning day arrives he will be astounded to learn what a bad man he has been and he will be penitent.

A wife must be reasonable in making her list of his delinquencies. Remember he works hard all day to provide the necessaries and perhaps luxuries for the home. Wives are liable to forget that, or to regard it as of little importance. Be a little charitable. If his temper is a bit irksome when he comes home and before he has his dinner. If the mood continues through the evening that is a different matter. If he has been drinking consider whether he is so exhilarated that the one beside you can see that he has been [illegible]. Don't know what a [illegible] movement of the barometer, and you may little the world was prepared to see the old chivalrous tournaments replaced by a war designed to destroy and subjugate another nation.

Ever since then the Bismarckian ideas have been put more and more in practice. Bismarck indeed was a tender sentimentalist compared to the English officers who commanded in the war against the Boers or the American officers who ravaged the Philippines. These in turn were philanthropists compared to the Italian officers who are now, with perfect logic, assuring their safety in Tripoli by massacring all the Arabs.

From now on the tradition of war as a sport must vanish. Its final disappearance will be heralded by the weakening of the most obstinately cherished of the old chivalrous rules—the [illegible]. Suppose, for instance, that two nations, A and B, declare war against one another, and that I am placed at the head of A's army. Suppose that A is victorious and invades the territory of B. I should not do anything so barbarous and fatiguing as to try to exterminate all the inhabitants of B. I should simply kill all the women less than fifty years old, taking care not to shed a drop of masculine blood unnecessarily.

I should then return to the soil of A without asking any indemnity and I should tranquilly await the time when the population of B would perish from senility or be compelled to wed the women of A in order to perpetuate itself completely than any conquest could have.

I will add that in order to [illegible] patriation for humanity, I should [illegible] the women in the most [illegible] and with the minimum of [illegible] out, too, that the apparent [illegible] would be mitigated in a certain [illegible] very unusual attentions which would be [illegible] upon the surviving women of B, upward of fifty years old, by their countrymen.

If the logical development which I have outlined of war as a serious method of [illegible] nations should prove repugnant to the sentiment of the most highly civilized powers, it is evidently possible that they may unite to suppress war altogether, by declaring that the first army entering the field or the first fleet firing a shot shall be destroyed by their united armies and [illegible] to this way, and in no other, war will come to an end.

Meanwhile, attention should be drawn to the evidently providential character of the [illegible] in Tripoli. The French [illegible] stroyed failure by the [illegible] [illegible] the allied Kings of [illegible] this terrifying peril, which [illegible] made her capable of the supreme [illegible] put an end to all question of foreign intervention in her internal affairs, and has always been one of the marvels of history. When [illegible] consolidated pressure [illegible] the moment, the revolution [illegible] simple weakness and lack of [illegible]. The proclamation of the Duke of Brunswick saved it.

Now consider the case of Turkey. Turkey has had her revolution, too, but the sovereigns of Europe have not rallied about the [illegible] Europe said: "He has got what he [illegible]. It was really time for him to modernize a little." But neither did Europe show any enthusiasm for the Young Turks or any genuine hope that they would bring their undertaking to a successful issue. In short, the Turkish revolution lacked a Brunswick proclamation to solidify it. Then, suddenly, "the Vital Force" of Bernard Shaw or "the Vital Spark" of Henri Bergson launches Italy against Turkey in a savage campaign of aggression and conquest. At first sight the resistance of Turkey seems as hopeless as the resistance of France against united Europe at Waterloo. Italy has money, guns, warlike ardor, rapacity and enormous superiority of military and political prestige. Turkey has only the revolution and Mahomet. But history lies before us to tell us that the Turkish revolution will now win. It is true, as Hegel remarked, that history also teaches us that men learn nothing from history

Why Not Have a Monthly Audit Day for "Grouches"?

By Baroness Rayus
(Mrs. Frank Leslie)

I AM [illegible] a new [illegible] making it compulsory [illegible] day of the month as a matrimonial reckoning day. On that day she can tell her husband [illegible] be offended by [illegible] husband's [illegible] spirits after he has drunk a glass of claret. Yet no [illegible]

Truth there is the matter of [illegible] tion is a man has [illegible] thoughtlessly or by design allowed any woman to smile in her sleeve at his wife, saying to herself or others "I know he doesn't care for her—I've had proof of it." he has gone [illegible] the absence of his [illegible] [illegible] Up of affairs; the domestic balance. He should [illegible] a woman of [illegible] to her is quoted [illegible] [illegible] are [illegible] of these. Politeness should be insisted upon in married life. It is assumed when a pair marry that they will spend the rest of their lives together. There may be forty or fifty years of this life and politeness will mean even more comfort and peace and trade. So "courtesy" must not be lightly overlooked.

Peevishness is just [illegible] must be cured. Mere calling attention to it at each household reckoning is not enough for the fault has its roots deep in a man's nature. If he growls and grumbles about expenses retrench, but retrench on the table. Every man likes good food and the nearer his wife appeal to him more than your tears, speak louder than eloquence.

Don't nag. But do have the matrimonial day of reckoning. Your husband will pay far more attention to what you say, if you say it only occasionally, or, better, semi-occasionally, and when you do, say it with vigor and emphasis that astound him. How often this occurs will depend somewhat upon your husband, and the character of his shortcomings. But with the average husband, with the average faults, a balance would better be struck perhaps once a month, with the most grievous outbreak of his worst fault at the head. That is what the law I'm making shall provide.

"Here's your month's account of shortcomings. Hubby, you've overdrawn your balance."

"Why I Need 33 Trunks"—No. 2

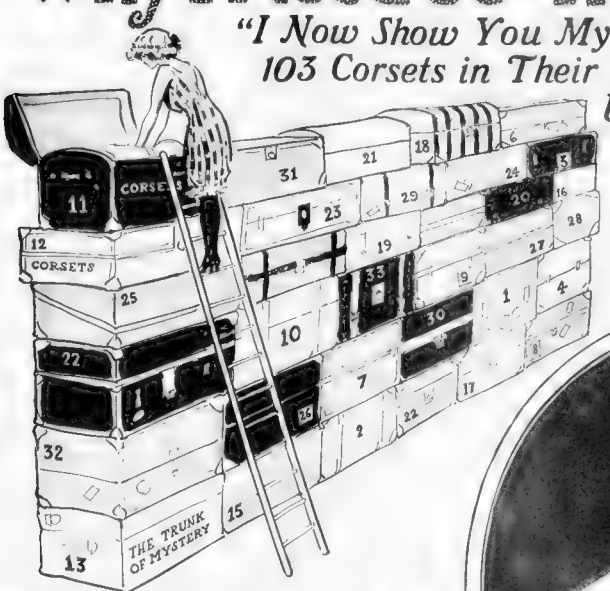
"I Now Show You My 103 Corsets in Their 2 Special Trunks. I Wear a Corset ONLY ONCE! No Woman Can Afford to Do Otherwise. Listen, I Tell You Why!"

By Mlle. Claire Faurens



"See—of my 33 trunks I now open for you my 2 so dear corset trunks."

MLLE. CLAIRE FAURENS is [illegible] who comes to America as the [illegible] to Gala Days.

Mlle. Faurens brings with her 33 trunks. Two of them are filled with 103 corsets. Mlle. Faurens never wears the same corset twice!

These 33 trunks are the shining cabinets of her business. "My business," says Mlle. Faurens, "is myself! No woman who follows my new and original practice of feminine efficiency can do with less than 33 trunks!"

In a series of articles written exclusively by her for the newspaper she tells just why she needs the 33 and just what is in each. Last week she gave a general story of her baggage. In her second article she opens her two trunks of corsets, exhibits the 103 corsets therein and analyzes the efficient relation of corsets and women

By Mlle. Claire Faurens

MY corsets! What is there in her wardrobe [illegible] dearer to [illegible] than her corsets? Her hat? I hear you say. Ah, yes, perhaps; but not dearer!

Corsets! What treasure of women have been [illegible] Helen of Troy, whose corsets [illegible] launched [illegible] Had Cleopatra worn them, never would [illegible] Had Venus been shaped in many a pair of corsets. History would be of a different story today had it always been [illegible] Had Eve worn corsets, [illegible] Had women ruled the world [illegible]

Early, three years after I discovered my doctrine of personal efficiency I studied the corset. I studied it with all the care I [illegible] business which [illegible] enterprises. For I was [illegible] in my business!

The corset! For a woman who makes me three hundred [illegible] I never wear my corsets twice!

You ask me Who is the greatest woman in France? I answer—my corsetiere. Just before I left Paris the so spiritual poet D'Annunzio and I were tête-à-tête. "I care not who makes a nation's laws if I may make its songs!" I quoted to him. "Non, non," he replied. "It should be—I care not who makes a nation's songs if I may make its corsets!" And it was at one of my finest parties! I shall not forget. But I have said that my trunk of mysteries is closed until, perhaps, we know each other much, much better.

Voilà! I now open my two big trunks and show you the one hundred and three corsets nestling therein, each of them to be worn during my short stay in America; each of them a poem not yet read and to be read but once!

"La, la! Look at my 103 corsets!"

You American women are barbarians in dress. Only in Paris has the clothing of the waist been [illegible] Only there [illegible] preme artistes! You would [illegible] tain mode because others do. But I never recommend to you that you should scrutinize each detail of every hat or dress you wear, that there is a reason for [illegible] so high and [illegible] and that you should have three hundred stitches to the inch in your silk stockings instead of three hundred and seven; that they should be thirty-one inches long instead of twenty-seven; that your corsets should be as delicately shaped as is the lens of a telescope in one of your greatest observatories or the lens of the glass that corrects your eyes? La, la—barbarians, learn my doctrine of efficiency! You can no more afford to have a—what you call it?—inadequate corset than you can afford to have an automatic cut! No more afford to have stockings with three hundred threads to the inch than to have the wrong way in your balance at your business man. EVERY WOMAN IS HER OWN BUSINESS!

Allons! Enough! I now take out of the first trunk a corset. Observe—a corset has whalebones or—I shudder—steels. It has curves par ici et par là—here and there. Down its back is a row of holes. Through those holes pass two laces. They are open in front, and down the front are fasteners. At the hips are garters—but not at the hips of the corsets of Faurens. Non, non!

Behold the corset then in its last analysis—the foundation of woman, the maker and breaker of reputation! And is this all of a corset? So think the barbarians. As well say a shoe is a piece of leather of a certain [illegible] eye and nose. [illegible] ply of your K[illegible]

[illegible] the surveying imagination that [illegible] A mad dilettante [illegible] added only "a rag and a bone and a hank of hair," to describe a woman! A woman is that, but [illegible]

—we know how much more! And a corset is just what I have said—main combien encore, oh mes mots!

I had this corset in before you. Its shape are made only of the finest whalebone. But pure whalebone bends, you say. True; but I, Faurens, will wear it but once! Therefore I can have the purest whalebone. But it is expensive [illegible] You [illegible] perform. And so I insist upon pure whalebone. This is my corsetiere seamstress from one who examines personally every inch of it [illegible] only the finest of whales.

Alas! It is a sorrow to me that I cannot have whales especially bred for me to grow me their bone even as I have my own special silk worms [illegible] for my legs! But I cannot. I know that this feat would be the logical working out of the efficiency doctrine, yet it is impossible! They—the whales—do not [illegible]

"My silk worms work for me alone."

I pick the fabric. I have had corsets made for me of brocades which were especially designed for the Queen of Spain and the Empress of Russia. They were court costumes of these wonderful fabrics. Faurens wore corsets of them—moi! I was the [illegible] seur, then the vandale! But what I cannot [illegible] Collects. My most elaborate creations are of fabrics specially designed and woven for me. Here I show you a corset made of green and silver brocade. The pattern is [illegible] It took [illegible] to weave. Again [illegible] design. We spent one early Spring day in the forest of Fontainebleau and there I studied the lilies and me. This perfect brocade is the result [illegible] worms which work unceasingly for my very beautiful stockings. And I shall wear it but once!

Observe it on me—but, alas!

In these color creations I follow out a perfect course of reasoning. I am extremely sensitive to color. The scientist will tell you that slight gastropore [illegible] development of the tactile sense, the sense of touch. You know how [illegible] certain colors affect you, how [illegible] afford to wear [illegible] afford to have stockings with three hundred threads to the inch than to have the wrong way in your balance at your business man. PICKLED TUNNY FISH OR "THON MARINE."

PICKLED tunny fish, or "thon marine," is a very appetizing dish not sufficiently familiar to American families. It may be used instead of sardines as a preliminary to lunch, as the principal dish of a meal, as part of a salad, and in various other ways.

The following is one of the best ways of preparing tunny: Take one box of pickled tunny about a pound in weight; seven or eight medium sized tomatoes and an onion chopped up, four tablespoonfuls of olive oil, a little chopped parsley, a mite of garlic, if you like it; salt and pepper.

Remove the tunny from the box, scrape it carefully. Place the onion and olive oil in a saucepan and keep it on a medium fire until the onion has taken a good light brown color. Add the seven or eight tomatoes, skinned seeded and chopped up, and the salt and pepper. Then add the chopped parsley and the garlic, and let this mixture cook for twenty-[illegible] minutes. After that add the tunny [illegible] minutes' gentle cooking with a dash of potatoes baked [illegible]

Add two carrots, sliced up; two chopped onions, five or six tomatoes, skinned and seeded and divided in quarters.

Place the bouquet of herbs in the centre, add the pickling mixture as described, and close the "daubiere" or whatever saucepan you are using. Let [illegible] cook at a gentle fire for five to six hours. At the end [illegible] the grease off the cooking [illegible] and serve [illegible]

In Southern France the "daube" is also served accompanied with a dish of macaroni or ravioli. You may also serve the daube accompanied with potatoes cooked in the oven or in their jackets.

You can prepare mutton equally as well in a daube, but in that case it is best to serve with it a good dish of thoroughly cooked white beans.

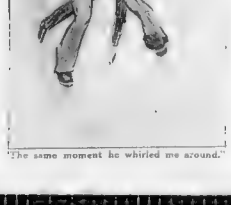
PATE OF COMBOURG.

THIS is a favorite dish in Brittany. For any one who wishes to try one of our characteristic country dishes, this is a very attractive recipe, but I must warn my readers that it offers considerable difficulty. The following are the quantities of materials required in a pate of about two pounds: Two pounds of slices of pork, four ounces of chopped up heart and liver of pork, one glass of good brandy several shallots, a little parsley, thyme, chervil some salt and a pinch of pepper.

Bone the pork carefully, and also the crackings, and also the crackling. Take the mixture of heart, liver, etc., chop it fine as possible, skin the shallots, chop them up fine, and also several sprigs of parsley chervil, and mix the whole with the meat, season with salt and pepper and a little pinch of clove powder. Add several leaves of thyme, and mix the whole again. To test the taste of the pate you take a piece the size of a walnut which you put in the oven. To this add salt and pepper at will. Garnish the interior of an earthenware dish with the pork cracking, arrange the meat in this dish, and then cover it with flat pork sausage. Make a good-sized hole in the middle of the pate, put into it a piece of rolled cardboard to form a chimney, and pour into this a glass of brandy. Set the pate to cook in an oven, which you must keep at an even, moderate heat.

You may vary this recipe according to taste by using white onions instead of shallots, chervil instead of parsley, or you may omit these things altogether. The pate may be served hot or cold.

How a Real Arsene Lupin Fooled the Greatest French Detective



"The same moment he whirled me around."

Paris, Feb. 20.

THAT "Arsene Lupin," sublimated thief-hero of recent exciting fiction, may be a character drawn from real life, only [illegible] the Paris Detective Corps, and now at the head of all French detectives outside of Paris.

BY M. HAMARD,
Late Chief of the Paris Detective Corps.

EVERY policeman has been mistaken [illegible] once, and a policeman's mistakes are his best teachers. Therefore I feel very grateful, rather than otherwise to the mistake I made in a little tete-a-[illegible] that A sette Du[illegible] motor car and [illegible] sank messenger."

Dubois sat on the chair, jumped from it, [illegible] fired at me, and at the same moment [illegible] that I very nearly [illegible] done, I should think," [illegible]

"You must have been there whatever your concierge may say," I thundered at him. He looked straight back into my eyes and laughed. "No, no, Monsieur Hamard," he answered, "your terrible glance is historic. It may frighten confession out of a guilty man, perhaps out of an innocent coward. [illegible] am not guilty, and I am not afraid. I have only committed one robbery with violence in my life, and I am not in the least ashamed of that."

All the time till it became most irritating [illegible] at the robbery [illegible] a short time ago, of which he was not ashamed. At last I pretended to grow very angry with him.

"Look here, Dubois," I said, "you know my position and your own. I allow you a certain amount of freedom here, where we two are alone, because I have my reasons. But you are talking to a magistrate, and by your own confession you are a criminal."

"Yes, but prove it," said Dubois quietly. "Your own confession is sufficient proof," I said, "for me to send you to prison."

"You will not do it at," answered Dubois "I give you my word of honor that I have nothing to do with the Rue Ordener crime. I know nothing of the Rue du Bac burglaries. I am not a coiner. I have lived an honest life except on one occasion."

"When was that?" I shouted. I really was losing my temper.

"Ten minutes ago," answered Dubois, "when we were playacting, I picked your pocket of your watch and chain. Here they are. Will you send me to prison for robbery with violence, M. Hamard? You can prove it now."

Dubois scored, did he not? But we are watching him still. He is so very clever.

What's Worth While—Something to Think About

Written by Carolyn Wells — Illustrated by Penrhyn Stanlaws

"Suppose two women are dining alone. This offers no spur of entertainment which might make the occasion worth while."

"Change the scene to a dinner table where a woman is dining with a man. Anyone can understand that this is worth WHILE."

MUCH has been written (I am told) on the subject of a "unit of value" and on economics of all sorts, from political to poetical. Of these themes few of us have a true working knowledge, but, by taking thought, many of us may master the principles of worthwhileness.

First, is necessary an understanding of the meaning of "while" used in this connection.

The unthinking will at once say that while means simply time, and the question is, Is such and such a thing worth your time? But not so; many a thing and many a person is worth time, but not worth while.

A while is a special and particular portion of time; it is extra valuable time. For example: you are invited to meet a Mr. A., who, you are assured, is exceedingly worth while. The occasion of the meeting will occupy, perhaps, an hour, and you estimate that the pleasure will be well worth that amount of expended time.

But a moment later, you are invited to another function at that very same hour to meet Mr. B., whom you know to be twice as attractive and desirable as A. In a word, he is much more worth while.

So the time in question changes to while. A. is worth time, if the time can be selected to suit your other engagements; but he is not worth while, if the while be that particular portion of time which you might be associating with B.

So, we see, things are worth while if they are more valuable to us at a certain time than other things offered at that time—or while.

While is a precious possession. It is a portion of time definitely and satisfactorily assigned.

And so the worthwhileness of things, after all, can be merely relative.

We are invited to a friend's amateur musicale. It is worth while if we have nothing more attractive to do. It is worth time in any case. But if we are invited to spend the same evening at the opera, the musicale, though still worth time, is not worth while.

Again, worthwhileness is largely, if not entirely, a matter of personal opinion. To one man a good dinner is always worth while (unless he has just eaten one) no matter what other attractions might be offered for that especial while. To another, food, though worth time, is never worth while, if a more aesthetic pleasure is offered.

And what woman cannot appreciate the difference between time and while in such an instance as this:

Suppose two women are dining alone. The dinner is all that it should be, and well worth the time required for its consumption. But it has only gastronomic value, and offers no spur of entertainment which might make the occasion worth while. Change the scene to a dinner table where a woman is dining with a man.

Breathes there a reader with soul so dead that he or she cannot understand that this is worth WHILE?

But the pity of it all is that so few people realize the difference between time and while, and accept invitations or make arrangements for people and things that, though worth time, are not worth while

If Men Lived Like the Ants

A DISTINGUISHED German naturalist, Professor August Camphausen, of Heidelberg, has just made minute observations of a tribe of red ants which exceed in interest everything that has yet been recorded concerning those marvellous insects. Professor Camphausen's record is as interesting as Maeterlinck's story of the bees.

For the sake of illustration, an artist has drawn the ant city with its compartments, its industries and its organization of public services, as described by the Professor, but with the ants replaced by human beings. In studying this picture it should be borne in mind that the sexes in the ant community are not divided as in a human community. In the ant city there is only one female, the queen, who is the mother of everybody in the community, while all the other inhabitants, her children, are practically sexless workers and fighters. The few ants who assume an active male sex die after performing the paternal function. The queen may go on laying eggs and producing young ants for fifteen years.

By Professor August Camphausen
(of Heidelberg University).

THESE ants were discovered in the Cameroons, a country of German Southwest Africa. Their ant hills, or rather cities, dotted the land in certain regions like haycocks, and were frequently fifteen and twenty feet above the ground.

By long and patient observation I discovered that these ants had a community life which might be compared to that of a model human city and was in most respects far more highly and intelligently organized than that of any existing human city.

Up at the single entrance of the ant city there is always a sentinel day and night, keeping watch least an enemy should attempt a sudden attack on the city, while about him is a guardroom in which there is always a body of soldiers ready to answer the sentinels's call, to detain prisoners or to sally forth on the appearance of a hostile army.

A Photograph of One of Professor Camphausen's Ant Cities.

These ants are divided into soldiers, policemen, servants and plain workers. If any working ant refuses to work, a policeman with big mandibles is called and promptly chops the head off the sluggard.

On the second floor from the top is the Summer sleeping room of the workers, for these ants have separate Summer and Winter quarters for most of their functions and industries.

On the third floor down, the workers dine in Summer, waited upon by ant servants.

Below this is the room in which the ants receive provisions and building materials, which are here packed up ready to be used for daily requirements or stored away for Winter use.

On the fifth floor down is the great barracks, where the soldiers of the ants' standing army are drilled and trained in all the operations of war. These soldiers perform a most vital duty in the ant community, for they guard the queen [illegible] residence a floor below [illegible] and [illegible] hatches her young, a [illegible] Summer [illegible] Summer time.

The queen mother is surrounded with the utmost possible luxury and receives every attention from the other ants. The highest aim of their life is to provide her with delicacies and protect her from injury, so that she may perform her wonderful function of producing young under the most favorable conditions.

The queen nurses the eggs until they hatch as minute larvae or grubs. These she feeds with a salivary secretion until they are large enough to take vegetable nourishment, after which they pass into another department of the city.

The grubs grow slowly, pass into the inactive stage known as "pupation," and finally hatch out in the form of small workers.

From this stage they are taken in hand by nurses and instructors, who train them into efficient workers capable of understanding the economy of the ant community.

The vast majority, I should say, become workers, while only a few very perfect individuals are endowed with active sexes and go forth to form new communities.

Of the sexed individuals the fertile females alone survive, while all the males and the unfertile females perish.

On the seventh floor down we begin to see the most amazing department of the ant community. In this floor is stored the plant-fodder for the aphids, or milch-cows maintained by the ants. These aphids, commonly known as plant-lice, draw juices from plants, which in their glands are changed into a substance called honey-dew.

This honey-dew forms part of the food of all the ants and the exclusive nourishment of the young. The aphids themselves are on the floor below the food supply. They are kept in compartments, which are as scrupulously clean as any stable for blooded cows ever [illegible].

In Winter the ant-cows feed on the food stored up for them, but in Summer they are driven forth by ant cow-keepers to feed on the plants. When they have filled their glands with juice their keepers drive them home again. The ants milk the aphids by stroking their neck glands with their antennæ, a process not much unlike the human way of milking cows.

After passing the eighth floor we reach [illegible] of the city [illegible] is completed [illegible] This [illegible] of [illegible] odd [illegible] and mail. There the ants retreat when [illegible] overtakes the upper part of their city.

On the ninth floor, the first below the ground, we find the nursery of the new born children who are fed with milk from the cows above and faithfully cared for by ant nurses who never avoid work, or strike for higher pay or better conditions.

Stepping down to the floor below, the tenth, we find the young ant children playing happily about, well fed and well cared for in every way, very differently placed in fact from the unhappy little poor children who play about the gutters of many a human city.

On the eleventh floor down is a hospital where sick and wounded ants are nursed back to health. A portion of this floor is given up to what in human terms of express on may be called a chemical laboratory. Here medicines are prepared, food stored away above is condensed into a minute form and poisons for use against the enemy are manufactured. The ants drag their larger victims and drag their bodies back to the city in a stupefied condition to be eaten when [illegible] ventilation.

On the twelfth floor down are the Winter sleeping quarters of the ants. They occupy little room, for they do not need much air in Winter. Part of this floor is the graveyard. Fortunately ant bodies are not open to the same objection as human ones. The ants are scrupulously clean.

And now in the lowest, safest and quietest place of all is the Winter apartment of the queen mother, where she spends the season in warmth, luxury and security.

MY SECRETS OF BEAUTY

No. 166 THE CARE OF THE CHILD. By MME. LINA CAVALIERI, THE MOST FAMOUS LIVING BEAUTY.

MME. CAVALIERI believes [illegible] to train a child [illegible] beauty. After [illegible] ...ceed, she step[illegible] its reasonableness. Again she demonstrates [illegible] of her [illegible] lessons by telling in detail how to do this train[illegible]

By Lina Cavalieri

"Train the eyebrows by twice daily brushings."

I [illegible]

[illegible] that in little children, teach [illegible] that much of the expression of the face depends upon the arch and smoothness of the eyebrows, and show them how to train them by twice daily brushings.

[illegible]

Look to the fact that the child's teeth have a good start. A little watchfulness will cause the first set to be drawn in good time for the second to come in straight and strong. Then teach the little one to take pride in their whiteness. Furnish a pure fresh powder or paste or let her use a powder for one cleansing and paste for the next, and so on alternating. Teach her to brush the teeth up and down, not across, and to brush them inside as well as out and along the [illegible]. Help her to form the habit of always rinsing her mouth [illegible] water or with warm salt water, if there be an acid tendency of the mouth after each meal. Teach her that the mouth must always be rinsed with water into which a pinch of borax or of bicarbonate of soda has been dropped after eating either fruits, which are acid, or candy, which soon resolves itself into acids.

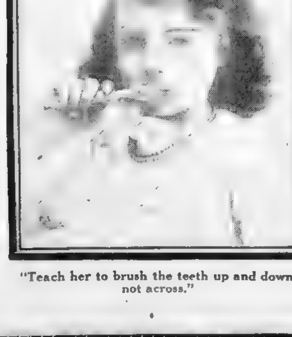
[illegible]

Appealing to the fashionable van[illegible]

Teach them to love the life in the open. If you live all year in the crowded city, the roofs, at least, are available to you. And in some part of your home, even though small, you can put up a crude gymnasium. For instance, a horizontal bar, with a mattress drawn under it for precaution, will give the little ones great fun, besides being a developing agent.

Break the children's unpleasant facial habits in the forming. Show a little girl how ugly and old she looks by flashing a mirror before her eyes while she is frowning. Show her that the frown of concentration is as ugly as the frown of anger and train her to solve a problem with smooth brows. If she twists her mouth unpleasantly when she talks, tell her of it, and if that doesn't cure her, call the mirror to your aid.

Mme. Lina Cavalieri.



"Teach her to brush the teeth up and down not across."

BEAUTY QUESTIONS ANSWERED

BY MME. CAVALIERI

H. G. asks me to publish a formula for an [illegible] agent that will reduce the size of the large pores in her face. In the same page [illegible] makes a confession: "I have been steaming my face a great deal and I thought perhaps it was that which enlarged the pores."

You are quite right about the cause of those enlarged pores. I have repeatedly said in my articles on beauty that I was opposed to face steaming, except as a last resort when the pores were deeply clogged with dust. The evils of face steaming are two. It causes the skin to relax, stretch and become flabby and eventually to form wrinkles. And it so relaxes the pores that some of them refuse to draw together again, leaving unsightly holes in the face.

Apply with a piece of [illegible] gauze the following:

Camphor water ... [illegible] pint
Glycerine ... [illegible] ounce
Borax ... [illegible] ounce

H. L. P. says: [illegible]

[illegible] Form the habit of [illegible] The application of cloths wet in cold water makes the muscles firmer. Many pat the face with ice. Others pass the ice over it with long upward strokes from chin to forehead. The ice should be wrapped in cotton or in a piece of muslin.

H. R. D. propounds these queries:

"First, how can I whiten my skin? Second, how can I prevent redness at the tip of my nose? Third, how can I make a broad nose thin? Fourth, how can I cure blackheads?

A red nose is caused usually by excessive use of alcohol or by some form of indigestion or imperfect circulation. Loosening your clothing wherever it is tight, whether it be in collars, garters, belts, gloves or shoes. Eat [illegible] foods, little meat and [illegible] vegetables and salads and much fruit. Drink water very freely.

You will improve the shape of your nose by gently [illegible] beginning at the bridge [illegible] the eyes and pressing the cushions of the thumb and first finger against the sides of the nose and drawing them slowly, gently, but with firm pressure, to the tip. Dip a soft complexion brush in green soap, which you probably know is a liquid, and scrub the parts affected [illegible] The [illegible] to be pressed gently out with [illegible] fingers or a [illegible] cold cream [illegible] treatment.

[illegible] interested [illegible] them [illegible] cold cream [illegible] to close the pores [illegible]

This cold cream is a good food for the skin:

Oil of sweet almonds, 80 grams.
Cocoa butter, 16 grams.
Spermaceti, 16 grams.
White wax, 8 grams.

Camphor water is an astringent. This mixture serves the same purpose:

Camphor water, 1 pint.
Glycerine, ½ ounce.
Pulverized borax, ¼ ounce.

Why a Good Chef Is Worth $10,000 a Year

By an Ex-Chef.

SOME people [illegible] astonished when they hear that a good [illegible] draws a salary of $10,000 a year. It can easily be shown that a chef who serves a large hotel may easily be worth this sum or more.

Many New York hotels are paying from $[illegible] to $15,000 a year for their chefs.

The good chef must be a naturalist, an economist, a disciplinarian, a butcher, a hygienist, a chemist, an artist, a [illegible] and an epicure.

He is a naturalist because of his intimate knowledge of all kinds of meat animals; birds, both wild and domestic; fish, crustaceous and shell; of fruits, vegetables, spices and condiments.

He must know in what season [illegible] food is at its best, in what [illegible] or section it is produced.

He must be an anatomist because it is necessary to know the location of every bone and joint in animals, birds and fish which he [illegible] dishes small birds [illegible] have all their bones [illegible] requires a special [illegible] of anatomy.

He must be an economist, because [illegible] in this way depends [illegible] success of the hotel. He [illegible] potatoes, be they ever so [illegible] peeled with as little waste as possible. A large hotel uses about fifty bushels a day, and [illegible] be increased [illegible] $1[illegible] a year by a chef [illegible] economically as [illegible] who doesn't.

[illegible] cases where five [illegible] answer the purpose of [illegible] provided they are prop[illegible] the chef, and the [illegible] impaired. The [illegible] applies to milk, [illegible] and hundreds of supplies [illegible] through the cook's [illegible] daily.

He must be a disciplinarian, because the success of the hotel depends upon each man doing his work promptly. If a banquet is scheduled for a certain hour, it is impossible for the chef to be overseeing every department at the same time. He must have trained his men to do their work promptly [illegible]

[illegible] is vital, for [illegible] made ready too soon its [illegible] appearance and flavor are injured. If it is late, the trouble [illegible] serious. Each course is [illegible] a different department [illegible] finished on the moment so that it may be sent to the [illegible] banqueters without interruption of the scheduled time of [illegible]

The chef in a great hotel like the Plaza of New York, has upward of a [illegible] skilled assistants, with as many more unskilled ones. The [illegible] sauce cooks, roast cooks, [illegible] cooks, pastry cooks, vegetable cooks, ice cream makers, confectioners, butchers, carvers, salad makers, etc.

The chef must be a butcher, because he must know how to cut up large pieces of meat into steaks, chops, roasts, stews, etc.

He must be a hygienist in order to understand the dishes that will agree with his patrons. In compiling a menu he avoids bringing dishes together that combine badly. He must understand, to take a simple instance, that lobster and ice cream together have a destroying influence on the digestive ferments.

In storing foods the good chef knows that raw fish must not come in contact with iron or tin; that butter or milk must be kept in separate compartments, [illegible] er and meat in another and ex[illegible] olive oil and syrup must be kept in a dark, cool place or [illegible] the flavor will be impaired.

He must be a chemist, in order to understand the nature of food and the process of digestion. He knows that there is no healthy digestion without fermentation and that disordered fermentation will cause ill health. Buttermilk when taken into the stomach will create an entirely new fermentation. The lactic acid bacteria present in buttermilk will check the disease-producing bacteria and restore the stomach to its normal condition.

In the preparation of certain sauces, including Bordelaise and [illegible] the preparation [illegible] the necessary flavor. Others, including [illegible] and Mayonnaise are made by emulsifying the ingredients. If they are not sealed at the proper [illegible] the cook's work has gone for nothing.

A [illegible] soup is best made [illegible] The fresh cut vegetables are placed in a [illegible] pan to which is added some [illegible] butter. The pan is covered hermetically and placed over a slow fire which extract the juices and the [illegible] salts from the vegetables.

Ignorance of the laws of chemistry is responsible for the tasteless beef soup so frequently served

The Story of a Muslin Sack

THE real wonder-story of the tobacco that is smoked by more millions of men than all other high grade tobaccos combined—

GENUINE "BULL" DURHAM SMOKING TOBACCO

FORTY "ROLLINGS" IN EACH 5c MUSLIN SACK

In quaint old Durham, North Carolina—that's where the story starts.

That's where those golden leaves first grew in the sunny fields of Greene's farm. That's where they first filled those simple muslin sacks with good, sweet, native tobacco—fifty-two years ago.

No thought then of fancy packages—or of "processes" for improving on nature.

Just surprisingly good tobacco! That was what they had discovered—that was what interested those critical Southern smokers who gave a rousing welcome to "Bull" Durham as the greatest tobacco they had ever tasted.

And then the soldiers came. They came—and smoked—and were captured! Scattering to their homes all over the nation they carried the fame of this wonderful smoke.

Wasn't that Durham postmaster busy with letters from up and down the land asking how to get more of that "Bull" Durham!

And—for over half a century, just because it's so down-right good—it's been earning and winning and holding new friends, both among pipe and cigarette smokers, faster than any other tobacco ever grown.

Faster! Twenty-two million pounds—352,000,000 packages—were sold and smoked last year! Yet this was merely the normal growth over the year before.

That sack might have been displaced by a fancy box. But the increasing millions of smokers who have an affection for this plain, convenient muslin cover have shown that they want the value where it belongs—in the tobacco. You can't smoke the cover, and you can't get better quality for pipe or cigarette in the fanciest of packages.

"Bull" Durham has stood the long test. Its purity—its natural, undoctored goodness as a smoke have held and splendidly multiplied its friends—have won for it the leadership over all the tobaccos of the world.

A booklet of "papers" free with each 5c muslin sack.

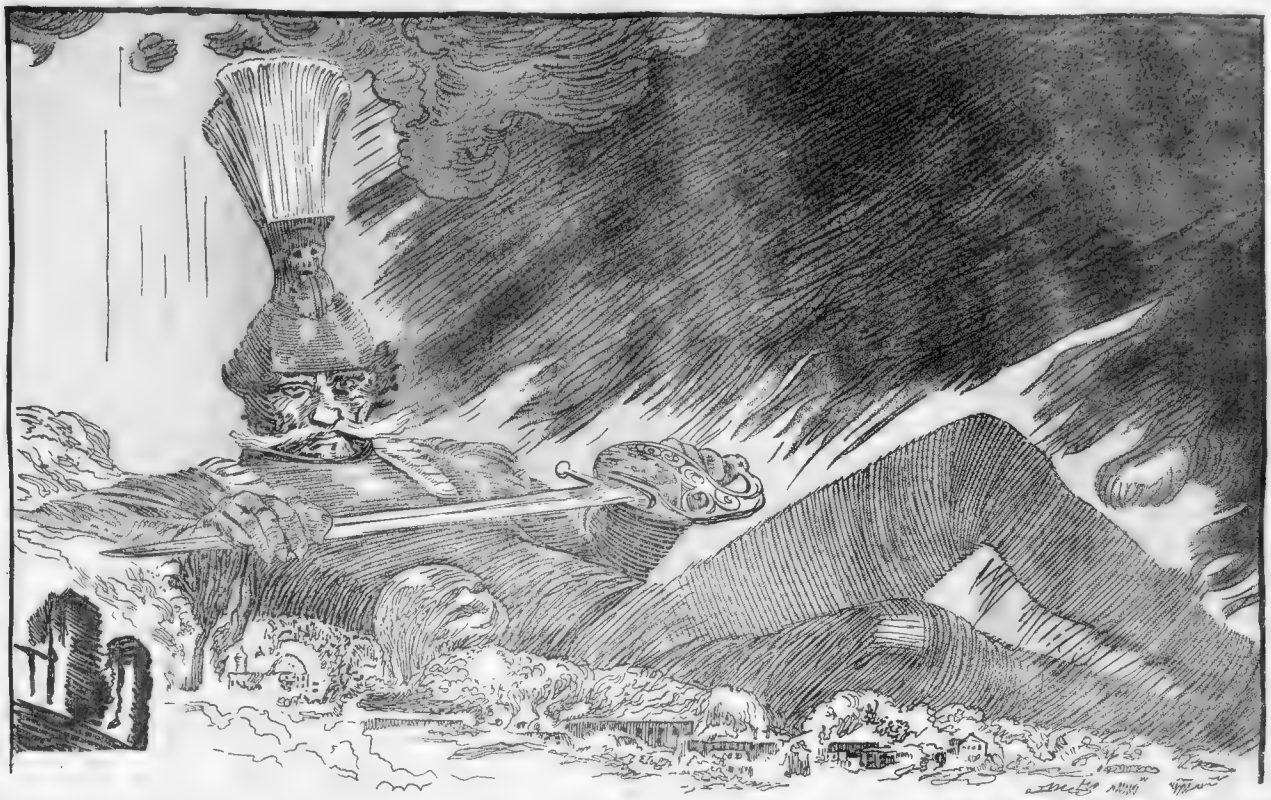
This Old Giant Should Be Put to Work---and Finally Abolished



Copyright, 1912, by the American-Journal-Examiner.

For more than a thousand centuries the human race has wasted its best energies feeding the giant of war. The monster shown in this picture has stretched himself across the nations year after year, using up the peoples' vitality, pandering to the vanity of kings where kings rule, pandering to the vanity and to the hatred of peoples in the lands of rule by the people.

This giant of waste and destruction could be harnessed up, put to work, made to earn his own living temporarily and abolished finally.

HIS picture, printed to concentrate the mind upon the subject discussed, by awakening imagination, is a German artist's conception of the war giant.

A monster of smoke, fire, blood and iron lies stretched across the land. The souls of human beings vanish in the curling smoke above him. Cities, factories and farms smoulder and crumble at his feet. He is the giant of waste, of hatred, of destruction.

It is time for nations that call themselves civilized to destroy this monster, or at least put him to work, as men would destroy or put to work any individual braggart or bully representing hatred, battle and discord in a village.

We ask all citizens, and particularly newspaper editors throughout the country, to consider the possibility of changing the American machinery of battle which now costs hundreds of millions a year—WASTED—into a self-supporting, productive, useful Government machine. The possibility of making our army and navy useful while waiting for general civilization throughout the world to make disarmament and the abolition of a special fighting class possible—that is a possibility worth considering.

Every year the people of the United States spend enough money, MERELY KEEPING PREPARED FOR WAR, to build one Panama Canal

We worry about the cost of a Panama Canal, we wonder whether we can afford to build good roads, we hesitate about undertaking the smaller canal enterprises necessary to the development of the country.

And blindly, without question, as dully and servilely as the peasants of the middle ages, we contribute as a people, tens of millions and hundreds of millions every year, SIMPLY GETTING READY FOR AN IMAGINARY WAR, SIMPLY KEEPING ALIVE THE OLD BELIEF IN BATTLE AS A MEANS OF SETTLING DISPUTES BETWEEN NATIONS.

Remember that what we spend keeping ready for war would build a Panama Canal every year, and leave enough money every year to build a first class road from the Atlantic to the Pacific.

It is not necessary any longer to discuss with men and women of intelligence the right and the wrong of war. Every human being fit to live in a free country knows that war is abominable.

A certain class of savages will tell you that they must settle their own affairs in certain cases. They must take the dagger or the revolver in hand and punish certain offences. Savages at the bottom of society, and a few savages higher up, maintain that they have the right to shed blood when their so-called "honor" is affected.

These men that take the law into their own hands, that kill without waiting for the courts, are on a par with the so-called statesmen who maintain that war in certain cases is necessary.

There is only one kind of JUSTICE in the world. And there is no question in the world that justice cannot settle, and every man who is free from the spirit of bragging and bloodshed and savagery knows that if INDIVIDUALS can leave the most sacred causes to the decision of their fellow men in courts of justice, NATIONS can do the same

Inasmuch as the nations of the world keep up preparations for war, inasmuch as we are exposed to attacks from these other nations, attacks due to our own folly, to the ambition of kings, or to the quarrels of industrial princes, struggling for the markets of the world—inasmuch as fighting is still a part of the world's program, it is clear that the United States cannot disarm until all nations shall agree to disarmament.

We must be ready for war. But is there nothing to be done except continue the spending of hundreds of millions annually for nothing?

Is there no solution of the problem except to keep on, year after year, building boats that costs ten millions apiece, throwing them into the "junk pile" and building new ones?

Must we keep tens of thousands of men locked up in camp, marching up and down, wasting their time, officers and men alike becoming demoralized by the most harmful of all existences—that which produces no useful result by its labor?

Must we forever continue to withdraw from useful effort thousands upon thousands of young men in the prime of life, and thousands upon thousands of educated men, engineers and others, turned out by our national academies, and keep them with a pistol and sword in hand, simply WAITING FOR WAR?

The people must remember that what we spend on war in dollars and cents is not the most expensive part of war.

The great extravagance of war—and this is true especially in European countries, where the number of young men under arms number millions, is WASTED HUMAN EFFORT.

The money that the people are taxed to buy the uniforms, and the guns and the food for the soldiers is little comparatively. Even the hundreds of millions spent for battle-ships is comparatively a slight expense.

The great expense is THE WASTED HUMAN EFFORT. Men well educated, mathematicians of ability, young men of enterprise and courage, and tens of thousands of men chosen for their physical fitness, are taken away from useful work, their lives wasted, and are kept like fighting dogs or the fighting bulls of Spain, or fighting cocks in some disreputable resort, ready to be thrown at the throats of other men when the time comes.

The suggestion which this newspaper makes to readers and to the editors of the country is, that the fighting machinery of the United States could be made not merely a money-wasting engine but a productive industrial agent earning its living, repaying to the people what the people spend and more, and, above all, engaging in useful, productive work the men whom the army now condemn to uselessness, monotony and destruction.

Men accustomed to think about public affairs will see at once how unnecessary it is that our army and our navy should be mere ornaments, idlers, waiting for a fight.

Go back to the days when this country fought against Great Britain in 1776. Where did the fighters come from then? Where did the rifles come from in that war? The fighting was done in 1776 in this country as it was done in the Transvaal more recently by men who had a rifle hanging above the chimney, a rifle that they could use when the time came.

Those old fighters of our Revolution, and the plucky fighters of the Transvaal did not spend their hours, year after year, walking up and down with a rifle on their shoulder. But they know how to USE that rifle, they HAD it. And when the time came, MAN FOR MAN, they were more than a match for the trained poppinjays of the regular army, men that had been drilled into machines, drilled out of patriotism and out of the real devotion that makes successful warriors.

The great fighting machines of the world have not always been the trained armies, but often men of character, the men of principle, the men that were willing to fight because they were defending something worth while.

This is true of the wonderful armies turned out by France after the revolution, armies that conquered Europe.

It was true of the extraordinary armies of Cromwell, the only General in history who never lost a battle.

It is true of our own men in 1776, and true of our men in the Rebellion.

The army and the navy of the United States can be made something better than mere ornamental, idling machines, reserved for the battle that may never come.

THEY COULD BE AND SHOULD BE MADE USEFUL PARTS OF OUR NATIONAL ORGANIZATION.

Instead of having thirty or forty thousand soldiers in our regular army walking up and down, wasting their hours saluting their idling superiors, we ought to have a hundred thousand, two hundred thousand, or three hundred thousand men engaged in work that the nation needs.

The army of the United States should be an army fighting fires in the forests during the fire season. And that same army should be an army fighting the swamps and the deserts, ditching the swamps, irrigating the deserts, reclaiming the waste lands.

The army of the United States should be officered, not by idlers, not by men waiting for a superior to die in order to get advancement, but by young engineers and old engineers, energetic disciplinarians and builders, men trained to fighting the real enemy of man, NATURE, with her deserts and her swamps. Such men would fight any enemy at need.

The army of the United States should be a great machine of national improvement. It should reclaim homes for hundreds of thousands of human beings yearly, and map out and execute road work valuable to the entire nation.

This could easily be done, AND THE ARMY WOULD BE A BETER FIGHTING MACHINE, MAN FOR MAN, THAN IT IS NOW.

If the ingenuity of human beings would enable the army—officers and men alike—to earn good wages, to spend seven hours a day in useful work and one hour in drilling—which would be plenty, the soldiers could be better paid than they are now and more contented and more devoted to their country.

The officers might have a thousand chances of promotion and advancement—and infinitely better pay than they have now—and retain all their present ornaments and foolish finery if they wished it.

In the ancient days in Rome the army was employed reclaiming land for the nation, not by cultivating deserts or ditching swamps, but by taking land from unfortunately weaker people.

As a reward each General endeavored to give to his soldiers part of the land conquered—a farm to each.

As a far better reward in these days of civilization Uncle Sam could give to each of his soldiers, after certain years of service, a home to live upon, a home reclaimed from the desert or the swamp, a homestead of his own in which he could raise his family, in which he could live in honor after having spent a useful life.

This would be a better future for the soldier than the present, dull, dismal life, with a very small pension at the end of an idle and wasted career.

To-day every soldier in the army represents a certain amount of money wasted in salary and in keep.

Under a sane system of National EMPLOYMENT OF THE ARMY every soldier could represent and would represent an actual source of profit to the nation. Instead of having forty, fifty thousand or one hundred thousand at the most, and bleeding the country to pay for them, we could have two hundred thousand, or five hundred thousand if we chose, and every year the nation would be richer through the work of those men reclaiming land, building the roads, abolishing the swamps that breed disease and wiping out the deserts that are plague spots on the country. And all the time the rest of the world would see in this nation the possessor of a well paid, well fed, highly organized, healthful, ambitious, patriotic army, enormous in size and self-supporting through its own labor. Who would attack the United States without gravest cause?

And what is true of the army could be made true of the navy. Why should our gigantic battleships pass their days at sea, firing off stupid salutes that cost thousands upon thousands of dollars, keeping their sailors at work rubbing up miles of useless brass or saluting hour after hour rows of officers as useless as themselves?

Why should we have these giant war machines burning up hundreds of thousands of tons of coal for nothing, merely carrying across the seas and up our rivers and through our lakes the heavy armament of the battleship?

Why not, instead of fifty battleships, have a THOUSAND gigantic National freight-carrying vessels?

Why not LEAVE THE GUNS ASHORE, leave the armor plate ashore, but let the other nations understand that if they compel us to change our freight-carrying Government boats into warships we have the guns and the armor plate that can be taken aboard when needed

It is ridiculous for a ship in time of peace to carry thousands upon thousands of tons of fighting material, as it would have been for an old farmer in 1776 to carry his rifle and all his ammunition around while plowing in time of peace.

This nation ought to have not fifty battleships, or a hundred battleships, but a thousand or more enormous freight-carrying vessels belonging to the nation.

The crews on these vessels, like the men in the army, should be well paid. They should have so many hours a day of real work in the management of the ship and so many hours a day or a week—the minimum—of military training.

The gunners, sharpshooters of the navy could have their constant drill, if necessary, but they needn't have it on ships costing tens of millions apiece. They could practice as well, all of them together, on one ship, or on the shore. And be ready for war if it came.

The nation's ships could carry the coal, the wheat and all the products of the country all over the oceans of the world. We should be a peaceable people, we should have a navy earning money instead of costing money. But we should be a nation ready for war if war were forced upon us. And we should restore "with a vengeance" the American navy so much desired.

We should have not only the gigantic freight-carrying ships at sea that could be transformed into battleships of the highest power and speed, but we should have on our lakes and rivers passenger boats and mail boats that would go at the rate of thirty miles an hour or more, boats that on a moment's notice could be changed into torpedo boats or torpedo destroyers.

The nations of the world would see in this country a nation, ARMED ON SHORE AND AT SEA, IN PROPORTION TO ITS WEALTH. THEY WOULD SEE A NATION NOT SPENDING SEVERAL HUNDRED MILLIONS A YEAR IN WASTEFUL ARMAMENT, BUT A NATION SPENDING HUNDREDS OF MILLIONS ANNUALLY, IN USEFUL WORK AND GETTING BACK DOLLAR FOR DOLLAR AND MORE, and able to spend a thousand millions annually at a profit.

They would see in us a nation possessing a thousand or more enormous freight carriers that could be transformed at short notice and fighting machines of the most deadly kind.

They would see our rivers and lakes and coasts covered with fast boats, boats with the tubes in the bow ready for torpedo work if necessary.

Other nations might have battleships more modern and deadly than ours. But they would know that against their one battleship, or ten or fifty battleships, we could turn A THOUSAND enormous boats carrying the heaviest guns, manned by men fighting for a good cause, a good country and a good job

When this nation has the army that it should have, and the navy that it should have, the United States, rich beyond all others, developing its navy as a means of developing commerce, maintaining a self-supporting standing army, would be absolutely free from all danger of attack

Nothing but the most rank injustice on our part, driving some other nation to desperation, could bring about a conflict.

We invite the editors, publicists men and all thoughtful citizens to consider the possibility of a navy and army self-supporting and invincible.

Would not Rockefeller arrange it that way if he owned the country?

Mr. Lo Pinto. by Montague Glass

Author of the Famous Potash & Perlmutter Stories

An Appreciation by His Former Bookkeeper, Giacomo Cirrito.

Copyright, 1912, by the Sunday American-Journal-Examiner and Doubleday, Page & Co

'At first the emigrant, being nervous, penetrates only left lung of Mr. Lo Pinto."

MR. GENEROSO LO PINTO and myself conduct very prosperous flower and feather business on West Houston street. Myself; I am bookkeeper with sound knowledge of chemistry, obtained at University of Naples, which I leave on account unpleasant affair concerning diamond ring a professor says I am stealing. This is all a mistake, as ring was glass and of no value to me whatever. Nevertheless by long practice I am mixing glycerine and acid, symbol whereof is HNO, and highly sterilized absorbent cotton, in just right proportions for prosperous flower and feather business such as Mr. Generoso Lo Pinto conducts on West Houston street. Also I am correspondent, having cultivated fine, direct method of appeal to prospective customers, with liberal use of red ink, all of which made trade brisk in flower and feather business, with only occasional recourse to mixture as before.

Mr. Lo Pinto treats ... according to his standard, which is not high ... engaged in fish business in Palermo and not having sound knowledge of chemistry. Mr. Lo Pinto's fish business was conducted by means of stiletto, very ... method, although has the advantage of ... most a teaspoonful or two. Mr. ... in Palermo on account unh... ke affair with lady. Mr. Lo Pinto tells me lady is all time coming to see him and interfering with fish business, as Mr. Lo Pinto is big man with large brown mustache and lady admires him. Mr. Lo Pinto conceives it practicable to remove lady in conventional Palermo fish business method, and he comes to America and conducts on West Houston street flower and feather business as above.

All the time lady's husband is wondering what becomes of lady, he having two small children and old mother, and lady having sound knowledge of to cook, to sew and to keep house generally. Also he wonders what becomes of Mr. Lo Pinto, and for my part I am quick to perceive that Mr. Lo Pinto wonders how long it will be before the husband finds his way to West Houston street. To the end that Mr. Lo Pinto should not be surprised when husband comes, Mr. Lo Pinto wears shirt constructed of steel wire made up the same like thousands of small watch guards, and Mr. Lo Pinto also carries in right rear pocket of pantaloons very expensive magazine firearm and spare magazine full of cartridges. Always I say to Mr. Lo Pinto: "No, my dear Mr. Lo Pinto, rely upon me if husband comes. Buy me also expensive firearm with magazine complete."

But Mr. Lo Pinto always answers, "Do you buy it yourself, on account you have lots of money in Royal Italian Post Office Savings Bank," which I am obliged to admit is true. Also Mr. Lo Pinto about the time I come to work for him shows great attachment for game of roulette, and by the time I am one year working for him, he is all the time trying to borrow money from me, which naturally I object.

"Yourself, dear Mr. Lo Pinto," I say, "would have too money in Royal Italian Post Savings Bank, supposing you would not gamble."

Then he answered me by employing Italian phrase, very hard for translation, which is similar to impugning the chastity of one's mother, only not so refined.

Finally Mr. Lo Pinto is asking me if I would embark in house property speculation with him, as builder in upper part of city, native of Province Potenza owns large number of houses, is of timid disposition. Accordingly I make draft lire 5,000 on Royal Italian Post Office Savings Bank and employ direct method of appeal with liberal use of red ink, toward timid builder. It appears timid builder is very fond of wife and children, six in number, and is willing to make conveyance of houses, provided we should let well enough alone, as the vernacular had it. Lire 5,000 is for paying to advocate, for ascertaining that timid builder really owns houses; also to pay insurance premiums on houses so that ill disposed persons setting fire to same, no loss accrues to us.

At last comes lire 5,000, and I am uncomfortable to notice Mr. Lo Pinto regards me with malevolent glances, in view of lire 5,000 tied around my waist. That morning, therefore, I make great show of being busy in my laboratory for make mixture HNO and glycerine. Instead I am distilling partly incinerated hemp in such fashion as to obtain colorless, tasteless liquid very potent for slumber. This I admix with coffee, which I am accustomed to make for Mr. Lo Pinto's supper, and Mr. Lo Pinto in consequence snores like a catarrhal poodle, at which I extract from right rear pocket of pantaloons expensive firearm as above and introduce for the same, old pipe of tobacco, similar size and shape. Similarly I undress Mr. Lo Pinto with difficulty, he being heavy man, and relieve him of watch guard vest which I assume instead, whereat I sleep with lire 5,000 in my possession, like a top. Next morning Mr. Lo Pinto awakens with severe headache and sits up, at which I say, "Dear Mr. Lo Pinto, you were in pitiable condition intoxicated last night. Mr. Lo Pinto replies with untranslatable phrase as above and goes immediately out to obtain appropriate remedies at apothecary.

Ten minutes later Mr. Lo Pinto returns and is breathless and in face so pale, that I suspect that he has had unpleasant experiences of nausea on account of burnt hemp distillate. But no, Mr. Lo Pinto stands in middle of flower and feather establishment and faces door in which appears short, muscular persons in untidy costumes of native Palermo, just arrived in America.

"A-ho!" says untidy emigrant, "so it is you?"

"You know what I want," says untidy emigrant. "Where is she?" Then emigrant makes torrent of abuse and upbraiding, at which says Mr. Lo Pinto with unpleasant smile, "What use you make so much fuss about——" (employing terms not countenanced among refined persons).

The emigrant he is on Mr. Lo Pinto with one leap, but Mr. Lo Pinto still smiles. Stilettos make no progress with watch guard vest as above, and so Mr. Lo Pinto is confident he is all right.

I am obliged to laugh at the appearance of Mr. Lo Pinto's face when he discovers the truth. At first the emigrant, being nervous, penetrates only left lung of Mr. Lo Pinto. So therefore Mr. Lo Pinto coughs severely and reaches for expensive firearm in right hand rear pocket. I assure you it was a study to observe the mixed expression of astonishment and chagrin when Mr. Lo Pinto discovers that instead of expensive firearm is only a pipe for tobacco smoking. Then the emigrant recovers from embarrassment and nervousness, and this time makes accurate penetration of Mr. Lo Pinto's vital organ.

After this I am very busy man chasing emigrant out of flower and feather establishment with expensive firearm, and arranging for Mr. Lo Pinto's disposition in packing case with big lead, at 2 o'clock the next morning from rear of three horse truck, Public Pier Sixty-two, North River.

The packing case made big splash, for Mr. Lo Pinto was a heavy man, but had not the qualities or the sound knowledge of chemistry which is so essential to the flower and feather business I am now conducting on West Houston street.

MARRIED LIFE THE THIRD YEAR

No. 18—Warren's Mother Calls and Strongly Disapproves of Helen's Roomer

By MABEL HERBERT URNER

IT was the first time Warren's mother had called on Helen since he had gone West on this Bennington deal. And it was the worst time she could have chosen.

Helen was almost panic stricken for fear Mrs. Morrison, her roomer, would come in at any moment. During the week she never came home until six, but this was Sunday and she might come in at any time.

Helen was always uneasy with her mother-in-law. She always felt that her attitude was a critical one, that she was always looking for something of which to disapprove. And now should she find that Helen had taken a roomer without Warren's knowledge or without consulting any of his family—what WOULD she say?

And Helen knew with what horror she would view Mrs. Morrison's rouge and peroxide hair. There were nine chances out of ten that she would go straight to her room and Mrs. Curtis would know nothing. But there was the one chance that she might come into the front room to ask if anyone had telephoned while she was out.

"Do you think you should keep that plant so near the radiator?" asked Mrs. Curtis critically.

"Is it too near? It's been there all W... answered Helen.

"Well, it isn't good for any pot plant to be kept so near the heat. I never ... mine on the same side of the room with radiator. And my plants always look healthy."

Helen thought this little plant looked very healthy, but she did not venture to say so. Instead she moved the jardiniere to the other side of the room. If Mrs. Curtis was not finding fault with this, it would have been something else, and she was glad it was nothing more personal than the plant.

Here Pussy Purrmew strolled leisurely into the room, stopped short on seeing Mrs. Curtis and gazed at her with grave, inquiring eyes.

"I see you still keep that cat," disapprovingly.

"Oh, yes, she's so much company for Winifred, and she's really a very dear kitten."

And now Pussy Purrmew jumped up on the couch and sniffed at Mrs Curtis' black coat.

"Don't let her lie on my cloak—I can't bear cat-hairs."

"Oh, she never lies on anyone's coat unless they like her. She seems to know that instinctively."

And the kitten promptly verified this by giving a last disapproving sniff, and then jumped over to a chair where she settled down, her beautiful bushy tail curled around her, and her green eyes still fixed on Mrs. Curtis.

"Well, I'm very glad she knows I don't like her," sharply. "None of our family could ever endure cats. I don't see how Warren puts up with this one."

"Warren has grown very fond of Pussy Purrmew," answered Helen very quietly, trying to keep down the feeling of antagonism her mother-in-law somehow always aroused.

"Oh, he may pretend that for your sake," disbelieving. "But no Curtis ever liked a cat. Well, I must be going. I want to get around to see Carrie this afternoon."

"Oh, it's early ... must you go?" murmured Helen, hoping desperately that she would go before Mrs. Morrison came in.

"Yes, I promised Carrie I'd get up there if I could. Well, I suppose you don't know just when Warren's coming back?" as she fastened her black fur collar.

"No, his last letter said he might have to stay a couple of months longer."

Just here, to Helen's dismay, the hall door opened. For a second she held her breath, but the steps went straight on down the hall. Then the opening and closing of another door and she knew Mrs. Morrison was safely in her own room. If only she would stay there until she could get Mrs. Curtis out.

But Mrs. Curtis was drawing on her black kid gloves with exasperating slowness. Helen moved suggestively toward the door, but Mrs. Curtis waited until she had deliberately fastened the last button. Then just as finally she went out in the hall, and Helen had her hand on the outside door to open it—Mrs. Morrison's door opened suddenly. And Mrs. Morrison appeared!

"Oh, I just wanted to ask if any one phoned while I was out?"

"No—no one phoned," stammered Helen.

And with a "Thank you" Mrs. Morrison went back in her room and closed the door. For a moment there was a dead silence.

Then Mrs. Curtis asked in a steel, cold voice: "Is anyone visiting you?"

"Mrs. Morrison," answered Helen, and her voice was almost as cold.

"Oh, you didn't say you had any one visiting you," icily.

"I haven't." Then, desperately, "That is a Mrs. Morrison who has rented my spare room."

"Rented your spare room! Why—why," almost stuttering in her astonishment. "Does Warren know of this?"

"No."

"Then why have you done such a thing?"

"For the eight dollars a week she pays me. Warren has complained of the expenses while he's been away, and I want to reduce them."

"But not by taking a roomer! No one in our family has ever rented rooms. He'll be furious when he knows."

"He'll not know—unless you tell him. I never shall. And Mrs. Morrison will give the room up before he returns."

"Well, she doesn't look like the kind of a woman for you to have here. Now Warren should know of this, and know of it at once. And if you won't write him—I shall have to."

"Very well, you may. But it doesn't matter what anyone says. I shall keep Mrs. Morrison until Warren returns. She's been very quiet and very little trouble, and the eight dollars a week will help to get many things I need for Winifred and myself."

"That's nonsense. I know Warren is perfectly willing to get everything you need. But you can't expect him to humor you in your extravagances."

"Extravagances! I don't think, Mrs. Curtis, anyone could be less extravagant than I have since I married Warren."

"Oh, you may think that, but you spend more money than you know. The trouble is you care too much for show, you want to give the impression that you're better off than you are. If you'd been willing to live simply in an inexpensive neighborhood, as Mr. Curtis and I did when we were first married—then you could have saved and laid something away. But we never took roomers," severely. "Our home, however simple, was our own. I don't know what Warren's father will say when he learns you have done this—without letting any of us know."

"I didn't think it concerned you," goaded at last to a retaliation. "It seems to me the only interest you and Mr. Curtis have ever shown is to call here occasionally and find something to criticize."

"Well, of course, if you take that attitude," acidly, "I have nothing more to say—nothing!"

And with a freezing "Good-by" she was gone.

Helen had always before gone out with her to the elevator, but now she made no attempt to do so. Never had she felt so bitterly resentful toward his people. What right had his mother to interfere in this way? What had she ever done for them, that gave her the right to always criticize?

And she had accused her of being extravagant and of spending money for show! There was nothing that could have made Helen more furious. She thought of how she had "skimpt" and saved and done without—and now for his mother to accuse her of this!

And she had threatened to write Warren about the room! All Helen's pride rose in revolt. She was now fiercely rebellious.

Still standing there in the hall and still staring at the door which Mrs. Curtis has just closed after her, Helen determined that no matter what opposition was brought to bear she would rent Mrs. Morrison the room until Warren returned.

THE millionaire soon discovered that he had got hold of a keen-witted man and a person of much resource.

Racksole laughed.

"Can you get off this afternoon?" he asked.

"Certainly," said Hazell. "I'll get one of my pals to sign for me, and then I shall be free."

"Well," said Racksole, "I should like you to come down with me to the Grand Babylon. Then we can talk over my little affair at length. And may we go on your boat? I want to meet your crew."

"That will be all right," Hazell replied. "My two men are the ... st soulless chaps you ever ... they eat too much and they ... enormous appetite for beer ... know the river, and they ... business and they will ... within the fair game if ... paid for it and aren't asked ...

To the west the Tower Bridge spanned the river with its formidable arch, and above that its suspended footpath, 150 feet from earth. Down toward the east and the Pool of London a forest of funnels and masts was dimly outlined against the sinister sky.

Huge barges, each steered by a single man at the end of a pair of giant oars, lumbered and swirled downstream at all angles. Occasionally a tug snorted busily past, flashing its red and green signals and dragging an unwieldy tail of barges in its wake.

Then a Margate passenger steamer, its electric lights gleaming from every porthole, swerved around to anchor with its load of 2,000 fatigued excursionists. Over everything brooded an air of mystery, a spirit and feeling of strangeness, remoteness and the inexplicable.

As the broad, flat little boat bobbed its way under the shadow of enormous hulks beneath stretched hawsers and past buoys covered with green slime, Racksole could scarcely believe that he was in the very heart of London.

He had a queer idea that almost anything might happen in this seeming waste of waters at this weird hour of 10 o'clock. It appeared incredible to him that only a mile or two away people were sitting in theatres applauding farces, and that at Cannon Street Station, a few yards off, other people were calmly taking the train to various highly respectable suburbs whose names he was gradually learning.

He had the uplifting sensation of being in another world which comes ... amid surroundings violently different from our usual surroundings.

He looked over the side of the boat into the brown water and asked himself what frightful secrets lay hidden in its depths. Then he put his hand into his hip pocket and touched the stock of his Colt revolver; that familiar substance comforted him.

The oarsmen had instructions to drop slowly down to the Pool, as the wide reach below the Tower is called. These two men had not been previously informed of the precise object of the expedition; but, now that they were safely afloat, Hazell judged it expedient to give them some notion of it.

"We expect to come across a rather suspicious steam launch," he said. "My friend here is very anxious to get a sight of her and until he has seen her nothing definite can be done."

"What sort of a craft is she, sir?" asked the stroke oar, a fat-faced man who seemed absolutely incapable of any serious exertion.

"I don't know," Racksole replied. "But as near as I can judge she's about sixty foot in length and painted black. I fancy I shall recognize her when I see her."

"Not much to go by—that!" exclaimed the other man curtly.

But he said no more. He, as well as his mate, had received from Theodore Racksole one English sovereign as a kind of preliminary fee, and an English sovereign will do a lot toward silencing the natural sarcastic tendencies ... speech of a Thames ...

"... here's ... I noticed," said ... suddenly, "and I forgot to tell you of it, Mr. Hazell. Her screw seemed to move with a rather irregular, lame sort of beat."

Both watermen immediately burst into a simultaneous laugh.

"Oh!" said the fat rower, "I know what you're after, sir. It's Jack Everett's launch—commonly called Squirm. She's got a four-bladed propeller, and one blade is broken off short."

"Ah! That's it, sure enough," agreed the man in the bow. "And if it's her you want, I seen her lying against Cherry Gardens pier this very morning."

"Let us go to Cherry Gardens pier, by all means," Racksole said, and the boat swung across stream.

Then it began to creep down by the right bank, feeling its way past wharves, many of which, even at that hour, were still busy with their cranes that descended empty into the depths of ships and came up full. As the two watermen gingerly maneuvered the boat in the ebbing tide Hazell explained to the millionaire that the Squirm was one of the most notorious craft on the river.

It appeared that when anyone had a nefarious or underhand scheme afoot which necessitated river work, Everett's launch was always available for a suitable monetary consideration.

The river police kept a watchful eye on it, and the chief marvel about the whole thing was that old Everett, the owner, had never yet been seriously compromised in any illegal escapade.

Latterly, however, the launch with its damaged propeller, which Everett consistently refused to have repaired, had acquired an evil reputation even among evildoers, and this fraternity had gradually come to abandon it for less easily recognizable craft.

"Your friend, Mr. Tom Jackson," said Hazell to Racksole, "committed an error of discretion when he hired the Squirm. A scoundrel of his experience and calibre ought certainly to have known better than that. You cannot fail to get a clue now."

By this time the boat was approaching Cherry Gardens pier, but unfortunately a thin night fog had swept over the river and objects could not be discerned with any clearness beyond a distance of thirty yards.

As the customs boat scraped down past the pier all its occupants strained eyes for a glimpse of the mysterious launch, but nothing could be seen of it. The boat continued to float idly down stream, the men resting on their oars.

Then they narrowly escaped bumping a large Norwegian sailing vessel at anchor with her nose pointing down stream. This ship they passed on the port side.

Just as they got clear of her bowsprit the fat man cried out excitedly, "There's her nose!" and he put the boat about and began to pull back against the tide.

And there was the Squirm comfortably anchored on the starboard quarter of the Norwegian vessel, hidden neatly between the ship and the shore.

The men pulled very quietly alongside.

"I'll board her, to start with," said Hazell. "I'll make out that I suspect they've got dutiable goods on board, and that will give me a chance to have a good look at her."

Dressed in his official overcoat and peaked cap, he stepped rather jauntily, as Racksole thought, on to the low deck of the launch.

"Anyone aboard?" Racksole heard him cry out, and a woman's voice answered.

"I'm a customs examining officer, and I want to search this launch," Hazell shouted, and then disappeared down into the little saloon amidships, and Racksole heard no more.

It seemed to the millionaire that Hazell had been gone hours, but at length he returned.

"Can't find anything," he said as he jumped into the boat, and then privately to Racksole: "There's a woman on board. Looks as if she might coincide with your description of Miss Spencer. Steam's up, but there's no engineer. I asked where the engineer was, and she inquired what business that was of mind and requested me to get through with my own business and clear off.

"Seems rather a smart sort. I poked my nose into everything, but I saw no sign of anything else. Perhaps we'd better pull away and lie near her for a bit, just to see if anything queer occurs."

"You're quite sure he isn't on board?" Racksole asked.

"Quite," said Hazell positively. "I know how to search a vessel. See this," and he handed to Racksole a sort of steel skewer, about two feet long, with a wooden handle. "That," he said, "is one of the customs' aids to searching."

"I suppose it wouldn't do to go on board and carry off the lady?" Racksole suggested doubtfully.

"W..., Hazell ... doubtfulness ...

(Collier introduces Weber and Fields to Lillian Russell as two Texas ranch owners.)

COLLIER—Permit me to present Colonel Gunn and Major Trigger.

(Weber bows low and sits on his spur.)

WEBER—Ouch!

FIELDS—What's the matter? Does it pain you to be a gentleman?

WEBER—No. In my politeness I sat down on my horse jabber. (They both shake hands with Miss Russell.) Oh, Meyer, look at the jewelries! (Indicating her rings.) See that big rhubarb smothered in diamonds!

FIELDS—That ain't a rhubarb. It's a pigeon-breasted ruben.

WEBER—What do you call these green ones—emigrants?

FIELDS—No; Anarchists.

RUSSELL—Don't you think you've held my hand long enough?

FIELDS—I ain't tired.

RUSSELL (calling Weber)—Major! Oh, Major!

WEBER—I don't like that Major. It sounds like a dog's name.

RUSSELL—Won't you tell me about your ranch in Texas? It is astonishing to me how you manage such large herds of cattle with only a coil of rope and a broncho.

WEBER—Meyer, what is a broncho?

FIELDS—She means one of those bronchit es ponies. A bronchitis: a little horse

RUSSELL—It is wonderful how you can throw the lariat and catch the right steer every time.

WEBER—Chuck it to me, Meyer. What does she mean by a steer?

FIELDS—It's the same as a cow, only with larger handle bars.

COLLIER—The lady desires you to give an exhibition of lariat throwing. Throw the rope and catch something. Can you do it?

FIELDS—No; but if I don't try she'll think I can't

COLLIER—And if you do, she'll be sure of it.

FIELDS—It's easy. Every morning before sundown I go out and catch a steer for breakfast. You take the rope and make a hole in it. Then you sprinkle some bread crumbs inside the rope and take the straight end of the rope in your hand and hide behind a tree. Pretty soon the steer comes, and when he gets inside the hole in the rope to eat the bread crumbs you jerk the rope and you've got him.

RUSSELL—I suppose you are a dead shot?

FIELDS (to Collier)—Am I?

COLLIER—Of course you are. (To Russell)—The Colonel is only too happy to oblige you. The Major will hold a dime between his teeth and the Colonel will stand over there, blindfolded, with his back to the Major, and at the signal turn and fire at the dime.

FIELDS—You must stand very still, Mike, or I might miss you.

RUSSELL—I would be satisfied if he did it without the blindfold.

FIELDS—What a still it is here in the clouds. The air intoxications me. We are here, Mike; pull the stopper.

WEBER—I don't know which is the right liver.

FIELDS—Pull them all and you are sure to get it We are going upstairs again. Chuck out some gas. She always wants to go to Heaven, this airship.

WEBER—When we started we were nice and clean and fit to go to Heavan. Look at us now. We ain't fit to go to—any place. .

FIELDS—I'm too much of a sassick to care where we go. Nobody could be acssicker.

WEBER—Think of me, with this (indicating stomach pad). I feel like I had one foot in the grave.

FIELDS—Don't worry, you'll never be able to get both of your feet in the same grave. This boat shies at the stars.

WEBER—They ain't stars They're automobile lamps. We're over New York. See the skyscrapperal

FIELDS—I think it's Pittsburgh. I can see a feller smoking a stogie. Anyway, it's America. I can tell by the bunches of foreigners.. There's everything in America but Americans. Look and see if you can see Columbus avenue, where Columbus landed, the first man that landed here.

WEBER—I thought the first man in America was Adam.

FIELDS—Oh, well, if you are speaking of foreigners. But how do you know he was ever in America?

WEBER—If he wasn't, who started Adams Express Company? We are drifting again. I can see our fish, Meyer.

FIELDS—You're lucky. I can't see a thing.

WEBER—I don't think it is New York. I can't see the Statue of Levity.

FIELDS—Maybe they took it down when Tammany Hall shut up.

WEBER—Did Tammany Hall shut up?

FIELDS—Yes; and now if Roosevelt would only shut up we'd be all right.

FIELDS—There are several reasons why you could never be President of the United States, Mike.

WEBER—What are they?

FIELDS—Well, to commence with, you are a Democrat——

WEBER—That's enough. I give up.

FIELDS and COLLIER—Just so you say.

WEBER—Nobody seems to care what the target thinks. Say, suppose you miss the dime and bullet me in the face?

FIELDS—That shot wouldn't scare and I get another try.

WEBER—Don't hit the dime too hard. I might swallow it.

FIELDS—If you do you're a dime in, as how ever you get the worst of it?

WEBER—If I ever get out of this I'm going to sea. I am a first-class earer and I love the sea. Shiver my flinders, a jack tar's life for me.

FIELDS—Are you trying to vaccinate me with the idea that you are an old salt? If you are, I must say you are the freshest old salt I ever seed.

WEBER—Oh, flitter my starving toplights.

FIELDS—Shut up. "Flitter my starving toplights" ain't correct sailor language. You mean to say "Flip my starry skylights." That is what the sailors do in stormy weather to keep the ocean from getting wet. I'll bet you don't even know what the rudderer is.

WEBER—It's the steerer, under the back plazza of the boat.

FIELDS—That shows you. If the steerer is in the back, how could it see where the boat is going? Mike, confess yourself that you are a land-slobber.

WEBER—Ask me some more; ask me.

FIELDS—Well, how many jib-booms is on a four-masted bloop?

WEBER—Don't joke with me, Meyer. A jib-boom ain't on a ship; it's a kind of a monkey You know I've got ocean blood in me. My grandfather was a sea captive.

FIELDS—Oh, I see. He was arrested before he landed

WEBER—No, he was the landlord of a ship; the captive

FIELDS—You've got the name wrong. You mean the captain.

Your Parents May Be a Joke, but Remember You're the Answer

At "The Turning Point"

THERE is a time in every one's life when the turning point is reached. The question of whether to go on in the same old way, or to strike the new trail, has to be answered. Sometimes another's hand points out the new road and urges its taking. Many a woman does this unselfishly, knowing that if the man takes the new road she will still have to travel along the old one alone.

In "The Turning Point," the splendid serial story by Robert W. Chambers, running in the Cosmopolitan Magazine, one of the heroines, Silvette, has made her lover see the new road he must follow. He is at the turning point. Silvette is determined that he must go. Not only, though, must she daily bolster up her lover's courage, but her own as well.

To lessen the soreness of her own heart, perhaps, Silvette has flirted a little with the son of the household by whom she and her sister, Diana, are employed as "social entertainers." Diana takes her to task for the flirtation. This is how Mr. Chambers tells the situation so charmingly pictured by Mr. Gibson:

SILVETTE [illegible] to an armchair crossed her knees, and [illegible] through the open window [illegible] the [illegible] could no longer see [illegible] asked [illegible] to marry [illegible] expression.

Diana laughed in frank surprise. "That infant!"

"Yes"

"What an absurdity!"

Her sister said nothing.

"How did it come—out of a clear sky?"

"Yes, I knew he liked me. I had no idea he wanted to marry me."

"You're not going to, are you?"

"No."

"I should think not. It would be sheer cradle-snatching."

"He's a year older than I am."

"In years, yes; but, intellectually, he ought to be playing marbles. Moreover, that sort of a boy never grows up."

"I don't think he will. God bestows that gift sometimes."

"What gift?"

"The gift of eternal youth. I haven't it. But I believe it can be shared." She gazed thoughtfully at the distant hills. "Years and years slip from me when that boy and I talk nonsense together."

"Better talk sense with him, and wake up, sweetness, or you'll regress into your second childhood."

"I have just been talking sense to him. I'm awake," she said [illegible].

"Do you mean to admit that the interview has seriously affected you?"

"Oh, I don't know yet."

"Better investigate," said Diana. "You know what his parents expect of their children. And if we are to remain here, I think, dear, that you had better see a little less of Jack Rivett than you have been seeing. Don't you?"

"I am sure of it."

"Otherwise," continued Diana, calmly, "it would be playing the game falser for you and me to seek another business engagement. These people have been very honorable toward us. We can scarcely permit them to outdo us."

Silvette looked up calmly, her cheek resting on her hand. "How dishonorable would it be?" she asked.

"What?"

"To—to let him fall in love with me?"

"Ask yourself. You know their social ambitions."

"I know; but, after all, you and I started out to make of life a successful business proposition. I thought a desirable marriage was to be part of the programme."

"Do you consider Jack Rivett desirable? He could take you nowhere. With all his wealth, where could you take him? And, anyway, it's not playing the game, Silvie. It's kidnapping." She laughed. "Take a man of your size—and of the world, little sister; and if he isn't of the world, and is poor, defy him to take you—give him battle—put up a good fight with foot, horse and artillery. The best one of you will always win, and the other sees what's coming."

Silvette went to the desk, supplied herself with pen and paper, and prepared to resume her interrupted correspondence. Presently she looked around, pen poised. "Did the best man win between you and Jim Edgerton?" she asked.

Diana bent lower over her mending. "I'm afraid so, Silvie."

"Then you won?"

"I think so. I have fought it over every day since—alone."

"You poor little thing," said Silvette softly.

Diana looked up with a slight smile. "Perhaps you misunderstood me, dear. I told you I was winning. Which means, I think, that Jim Edgerton isn't going to remain very long at Adirondac."

"Where is he going?"

"I don't know that he is going at all; he doesn't know it, either. But, somehow, I dare believe that he is going."

"Where?"

"Into a man's world to engage in a man's business."

"It isn't in him, Diana. You are taking a great responsibility on your shoulders. Do you realize that?"

"Yes."

"And that a man with no more force of character and real ability than he has may starve? That the world will probably break his heart, anyway?"

"Let it, then. Only a real man's heart breaks. I'll know he's one if it does; and so will he. And that's worth all the rest."—From "The Turning Point," in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Strong Lines from "The Fatted Calf"

MOTHER love is all that you say, and a thousand times more, but the mother love of the twentieth century is a product of woman's unoccupied mind. The new mother-love has resolved itself into a grim warning finger pointing day and night to catastrophies which might befall the child. It is no longer mother love, it is mother fear, and fear hews down more victims every day than all the pestilences of the earth combined. The kind of mother who doesn't worry about her child is the kind who realizes the injury it does the child.

YOU don't eat everything that [illegible] before you. Why should you mentally masticate every objectionable thought-dish that is offered you? If people were as much concerned about thought-diet as they are about food-diet heaven would be close at hand.

The only thought that persists is the opposed thought.

MARRIAGE is the period which marks the end of speech. That is why plays must end with the marriage. The principals are speechless after that.

WHILE one mind cannot dictate to another, it can assist another to assert what is helpful and to deny what is injurious. The right suggestion, properly implanted, will effect a complete removal of a disturbing condition.

IT is the duty of every man and woman to develop and perfect a race by preventing the marriage of those who are not mentally, morally or physically fit.

ROMANCE OF LORD LEFTOVER

By WILLIAM F. KIRK

Copyright, 1911, by American-Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

LORD LEFTOVER was in a quandary, not by any means the first quandary in which he had ever found himself. Down in his heart he felt, somehow, that the love of the fair young heiress for him was a love that was waning. He felt that the fat fortune of old man Baker, father of young Phyllis Baker, was slipping from his grasp, and he was sore distrait.

He was wandering disconsolately along Fifth avenue when somebody twitched at his sleeve.

"Hello, Your Lordship!"

Lord Leftover was a better twitcher than the man that twitched at his sleeve. He twitched so hard that he came near to falling into the gutter.

"Don't be afraid," came a soothing voice. "It is only your old Irish friend, Conway. Don't you remember meeting me last week? Don't you remember how you took your hammer on a chunk of granite, and I how I loaned you mine?"

Lord Leftover shuddered.

He recalled the youth now, the pleasant-faced young convict who had cracked rocks alongside him during his brief but unpleasant incarceration. He recalled how he had run a race with his new acquaintance one day, and how he had won the close contest by cracking two less rocks.

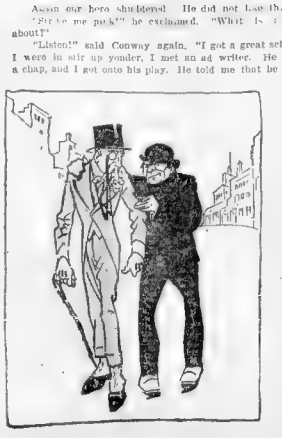
"Well, well!" he exclaimed, looking coldly at the man who had accosted him. "And what can I do for you? What's the idea, and all that blooming sort of thing?"

"Kid," said he, "our fortune is made. No more quarts crushing for ours. We're sure to cop."

Again our hero shuddered. He did not like this word "cop."

"Strike me pink!" he exclaimed. "What is all this bally thing about?"

"Listen!" said Conway again. "I got a great scheme. When you and I were in stir up yonder, I met an ad writer. He was a clever sort of a chap, and I got onto his play. He told me that he liked me because he got the money easier than I did, and he made me promise that I would play the game that he will be unable to play for some years to come. This is the idea:



"I am to write an advertising poem, and get some swell-looking chap to recite it on the stage. The poem will contain a lot of names of stuff handled by men that pay a lot of money for ads. I will write the poem, you will get a job on the stage and recite it, and the two of us will collect and split half and half. Now, here is my idea for the first of your recitations:

A Society Novel of New York Life

"The night was dark and cloudy that bleak December day,
The hospital was crowded in a city far away
One poor old helpless patient, with a corn on every toe,
Was trying for to exercise, but had to walk quite slow.

A young man tried to help him when he saw him so forlorn;
'I sympathize with you,' he said, 'my old man had a corn.'
"'I want no help,' the old man said. 'No wonder I have ills;
'My feet would have grown better had I used Doc Dingbat's Pills.'"

"I shouldn't like to recite that," objected Lord Leftover. "It seems like such a silly lot of rot, and all that sort of thing. Can't you get up something dignified, you know, like some of Tennyson's stuff—like the Charge of the White Crusade, or something of that sort?"

The brow of the ex-convict grew dark.

"Take this poem, and take it now!" he hissed. "If you recite it to-morrow night in some theatre in the city section, you will probably get at least a hundred case note from Doc Dingbat by sunset the next day."

"But supposing he should send me pills instead of money?" queried our hero. "That would be beastly embarrassing. I shouldn't like to send them back."

"Then write your own ads!" sneered Conway.

"I think I shall!" declared our hero.

Tribes of North America

"The Kill Joys"

Copyright, 1912, by American Journal-Examiner. Great Britain Rights Reserved.

By Lewis Allen

THE chief characteristics of the members of the infamous "Kill-Joy" tribe is their unalloyed happiness when making someone else miserable, their sheer delight when making trouble for others and their delirium of joy when in the midst of a combination of curses, sighs, tears and frowns.

It is impossible to give a detailed account of a fraction of the varieties of "Kill-Joys," but here are a few of them:

Husband takes wife (his own) out to dinner, spends good money for theatre and taxi and the spread. "Good feed, wasn't it?" he says to her. "Oh, well, I suppose so, but there was too much paprika in the omelette, and the wine was three degrees too cold, and a woman across the way had twice as big a diamond as I, and I didn't like the color of the waiter's hair and the"—

But that's enough. She has certainly killed all the joy he had started out with in entertaining her. Chances are she has also killed some mighty fine opportunities for stellar spreads. Next time it won't be his own wife and SHE will not kill the joy.

Then there is the sweet young thing who has more hair than brains, and would have if she were bald. Her lover brings her some splendid roses for which he separated himself from enough coin to pay a year's laundry bill. "Oh, how lovely," this little "Kill-Joy" chatters, "how lovely! Next to violets and orchids and jonquils, I like roses." Get it?

Then there's the unintentional "Kill-Joy." Just as his wife is having a delightful time knocking him to her servant girl, he happens to step into the room and she has to stop talking for a moment.

Mrs. Blinder Mac-Swash starts out in great delight with a brand new mink coat and muff, with a brand new diamond tiara and a brand new ball gown, and she sallies forth to the theatre just bubbling over with happiness. Along comes Mrs. Flasher Mac-Double-Swash. She has on a sable coat and muff, and she wears two diamond tiaras and a stomacher and she has a dress that cost eight times as much as Mrs. Mac-Swashes. Therefore Mrs. Mac-Double-Swash is a "Kill Joy." She has absolutely annihilated all the joy that only a moment before possessed Mrs. Mac-Swash.

Poor husband. Worked hard all day. Really worked hard. After the day's work he plays a few games of billiards, and goes to a banquet, and brushes all the cobwebs of toil and care and worry from his mind and gets fairly well irrigated with bubble water and then goes home without a care in the world. He is so overburdened with joy that he actually staggers, and up the steps he creeps, softly humming some little ditty to himself. Suddenly he is confronted by a ghostly sort of form with dishevelled hair and glaring eyes. For a moment the awful thing is silent. It points tragically to the clock, which just then cuckoos three times. "You brute," screams the thing, "stewed again and coming home to me. Whose coronet braids are those stuck in the band of your hat? What do you mean? You big brute, you"—

But what's the use? Pity the poor innocent man. His wife is a "Kill-Joy." With just those few well chosen phrases, so ably rendered, she puts all his happiness to flight, the trifolet or chanty or love ballad, or whatever it was, dies on his lips. His wife is a thoughtless "Kill-Joy."

Happily the little housewife goes out to market. She is planning to have some ham and eggs and some egg salad and such tangs for dinner. Merrily she trips up to the clerk in the great provision store and says sweetly, "How much are eggs today?"

The clerk answers. Instantly her color leaves her. Her peach blow cheeks are ashen, her lips colorless, [illegible] transformed to a frowning [illegible] and woe is hers. The clerk [illegible] is a "Kill-Joy." His reply to her simple and cheerful question was "Two dollars and eighty-seven each, ma'am!"

It was a great party. The Blones had enjoyed it immensely. Chattering gaily, they [illegible] Bismitha' suburban home and hasten to the little railroad station. She is shrieking with laughter at his comments on the party. He is guffawing heartily at her little mimicry of her hostess's freaks and foibles. Down into the station they go. "When is the next

By DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX:

Will you kindly tell me how to propose to a timid man who has been coming to see me for years and never came to the point? I am a widow with a tidy little fortune and amply able to support a husband in good style. SUSAN B.

Answer. Many a time a woman works for weeks and months luring a timid man up to proposing point, only to have him shy away from it at the critical moment, just when she is preparing to say: "Really, Mr. Smithers, this is so sudden. I never dreamed that you thought of me in that way," and thus to have love's

It takes so much patience and industry and subtlety and finesse to catch a shy man that it is scarcely worth the trouble, except that the man who makes love as if he were having his teeth pulled, and enduring grinding tortures therefrom, makes the kind of a husband that a wife can trust out of her sight.

In dealing with a bashful man the first thing to remember is that he is a totally undomesticated animal, and [illegible] take fright and flee away, hence your first move must be to quiet his suspicions that you have any designs upon him. If you will observe, you will see that a timid man is always in mortal terror of young girls who are frankly out on the husband [illegible]

So begin by adopting a motherly attitude—which generally covers a multitude of designs—and announce, in season, that nothing in the world will ever induce you to marry again. Play up your happiness in being free, and at liberty to do whatever you like, to go and come as you please—wear that insignia of the emancipated woman—the latch key—upon your forehead, as it were.

Be careful, however, not to overplay the [illegible] part. Harp lightly on that string, for no bashful [illegible] would ever have the nerve to [illegible] one who is represented as a paragon of [illegible] It were better, indeed, to insinuate, with [illegible] of melancholy, that while No. 1 was an ornament [illegible] sex and a good provider, he didn't Quite [illegible] You as does the gentleman to whom [illegible] confide your troubles.

Having thus allayed the [illegible] man and tamed him so that [illegible] your hand, seize some psychological moment [illegible] a good-looking word [illegible] and burst into tears in his presence. [illegible] can behold a woman [illegible] gard weeping with [illegible] shoulder with [illegible]

Anyway it makes a man feel about ten feet high, and that he is as big and strong as Jack Johnson, to have a woman hanging to him and crying, and if you will only keep out between [illegible]

"I know it's a—boo-hoo—[illegible] womanly thing to do—boo-hoo, boo-hoo—to tell you that I l-o-o-v-e you—boo-hoo—but I can't help it. Will you—boo-hoo, boo-hoo—marry [illegible]

"He'll be too frightened [illegible] too pleased at this tribute to his charm [illegible] could never, never summon up the courage [illegible] weep for him in vain, you've got him [illegible] and all is over but sending out the wedding cards.

SAVED BY SHERLOCK HOLMES!

ANOTHER OF CONAN DOYLE'S THRILLING DETECTIVE MYSTERIES

DURING my long and intimate acquaintance with Mr. Sherlock Holmes I had never heard him refer to his relations, and hardly ever to his own early life. This reticence upon his part had increased the somewhat inhuman effect which he produced upon me, until sometimes I found myself regarding him as an isolated phenomenon, a brain without a heart, as deficient in human sympathy as he was pre-eminent in intelligence. His aversion to women and his disinclination to form new friendships were both typical of his unemotional character, but not more so than his complete suppression of every reference to his own people. I had come to believe that he was an orphan with no relatives living; but one day, to my very great surprise, he began to talk to me about his brother.

It was after tea on a Summer evening, and the conversation, which had roamed in a desultory, spasmodic fashion from golf clubs to the causes of the change in the obliquity of the elliptic, came round at last to the question of atavism and hereditary aptitudes. The point under discussion was, how far any singular gift in an individual was due to his ancestry and how far to his own early training.

"In your own case," said I, "from all that you have told me, it seems obvious that your faculty of observation and your peculiar facility for deduction are due to your own systematic training."

"To some extent," he answered, thoughtfully. "My ancestors were country squires, who appear to have led much the same life as is natural to their class. But, none the less, my turn that way is in my veins, and may have come with my grandmother, who was the sister of Vernet, the French artist. Art in the blood is liable to take the strangest forms."

"But how do you know that it is hereditary?"

"Because my brother Mycroft possesses it in a larger degree than I do."

This was news to me indeed. If there were another man with such angular powers in England, how was it that neither police nor public had heard of him? I put the question, with a hint that it was my companion's modesty which made him acknowledge his brother as his superior. Holmes laughed at my suggestion.

"My dear Watson," said he, "I cannot agree with those who rank modesty among the virtues. To the logician all things should be seen exactly as they are, and to underestimate one's self is as much a departure from the truth as to exaggerate one's own powers. When I say, therefore, that Mycroft has better powers of observation than I, you may take it that I am speaking the exact and literal truth."

"Is he your junior?"

"Seven years my senior."

"How comes it that he is unknown?"

"Oh, he is very well known in his own circle."

"Where, then?"

"Well, in the Diogenes Club, for example."

I had never heard of the institution, and my face must have proclaimed as much, for Sherlock Holmes pulled out his watch.

"The Diogenes Club is the queerest club in London, and Mycroft one of the queerest men. He's always there from quarter to five to twenty to eight. It's six now, so if you care for a stroll this beautiful evening I shall be very happy to introduce you to two curiosities."

Five minutes later we were in the street, walking toward Regent's Circus.

Mycroft Holmes was a much larger and stouter man than Sherlock. His body was absolutely corpulent, but his face, though massive, had preserved something of the sharpness of expression which was so remarkable in that of his brother. His eyes, which were of a peculiarly light, watery gray, seemed to always retain that far-away, introspective look which I had only observed in Sherlock's when he was exerting his full powers.

"I am glad to meet you, sir," said he, putting out a broad, fat hand like the flipper of a seal. "I hear of Sherlock everywhere since you became his chronicler. By the way, Sherlock, I expected to see you round last week, to consult me over that Manor House case. I thought you might be a little out of your depth."

"No, I solved it," said my friend, smiling.

"It was Adams, of course."

"Yes, it was Adams."

"By the way, Sherlock," said Mycroft, "I have had something quite after your own heart—a most singular problem—submitted to my judgment. I really had not the energy to follow it up save in a very complete fashion, but it gave me a basis for some pleasing speculation. If you would care to hear the facts"——

"My dear Mycroft, I should be delighted."

The brother scribbled a note upon a leaf of his pocketbook, and, ringing the bell, he handed it to the waiter.

"I have asked Mr. Melas to step across," said he. "He lodges on the floor above me, and I have some slight acquaintance with him, which led him to come to me in his perplexity. Mr. Melas is a Greek by extraction, as I understand, and he is a remarkable linguist. He earns his living partly as interpreter in the law courts and partly by acting as guide to any wealthy Orientals who may visit the Northumberland avenue hotels. I think I will leave him to tell his very remarkable experience in his own fashion."

A few minutes later we were joined by a short, stout man whose olive face and coal black hair proclaimed his Southern origin, though his speech was that of an educated Englishman. He shook hands eagerly with Sherlock Holmes, and his dark eyes sparkled with pleasure when he understood that the specialist was anxious to hear his story.

"I do not believe that the police credit me—on my word, I do not," said he in a wailing voice. "Just because they have never heard of it before, they think that such a thing cannot be. But I know that I shall never be easy in my mind until I know what has become of my poor man with the stocking plaster upon his face."

"I am all attention," said Sherlock Holmes.

"This is Wednesday evening," said Mr. Melas. "Well, then, it was Monday night—only two days ago, you understand—that all this happened. I am an interpreter, as perhaps my neighbor there has told you. I interpret all languages—or nearly all—but as I am a Greek by birth and with a Grecian name, it is with that particular tongue that I am principally associated. For many years I have been the chief Greek interpreter in London, and my name is very well known in the hotels.

"It happens not unfrequently that I am sent for at strange hours by foreigners who get into difficulties, or by travelers who arrive late and wish my services. I was not surprised, therefore, on Monday night when a Mr. Latimer, a very fashionably dressed young man, came up to my rooms and asked me to accompany him in a cab which was waiting at the door. A Greek friend had come to see him upon business, he said, and as he could speak nothing but his own tongue, the services of an interpreter were indispensable. He gave me to understand that his house was some little distance off, in Kensington, and he seemed to be in a great hurry, bustling me rapidly into the cab when we had descended to the street.

"I say into the cab, but I soon became doubtful as to whether it was not a carriage in which I found myself. It was certainly more roomy than the ordinary four-wheeled disgrace to London, and the fittings, though frayed, were of rich quality. Mr. Latimer seated himself opposite to me and we started off through Charing Cross and up the Shaftesbury avenue. We had come out upon Oxford street and I had ventured some remark as to this being a roundabout way to Kensington, when my words were arrested by the extraordinary conduct of my companion.

"He began by drawing a most formidable-looking bludgeon loaded with lead from his pocket, and switching it backward and forward several times, as if to test its weight and strength. Then he placed it without a word upon the seat beside him. Having done this, he drew up the windows on each side, and I found to my astonishment that they were covered with paper so as to prevent my seeing through them.

"'I am sorry to cut off your view, Mr. Melas,' said he. 'The fact is that I have no intention that you should see what the place is to which we are driving. It might possibly be inconvenient to me if you could find your way there again.'

"As you can imagine, I was utterly taken aback by such an address. My companion was a powerful, broad-shouldered young fellow, and, apart from the weapon, I should not have had the slightest chance in a struggle with him.

"'This is very extraordinary conduct, Mr. Latimer,' I stammered. 'You must be aware that what you are doing is quite illegal.'

"'It is somewhat of a liberty, no doubt,' said he, 'but we'll make it up to you. I must warn you, however, Mr. Melas, that if at any time to-night you attempt to raise an alarm or do anything which is against my interests, you will find it a very serious thing. I beg you to remember that no one knows where you are, and that, whether you are in this carriage or in my house, you are equally in my power.'

"His words were quiet, but he had a rasping way of saying them which was very menacing. I sat in silence wondering what on earth could be his reason for kidnapping me in this extraordinary fashion. Whatever it might be, it was perfectly clear that there was no possible use in my resisting, and that I could only wait to see what might befall.

"For nearly two hours we drove without my having the least clue as to where we were going. Sometimes the rattle of the stones told of a paved causeway, and at others our smooth, silent course suggested asphalt; but save by this variation in sound, there was nothing at all which could in the remotest way help me to form a guess as to where we were. The paper over each window was impenetrable to light, and a blue curtain was drawn across the glass work in front. It was a quarter-past seven when we left Pall Mall, and my watch showed me that it was ten minutes to nine when we at last came to a standstill. My companion let down the window, and I caught a glimpse of a low, arched doorway with a lamp burning above it. As I was hurried from the carriage it swung open, and I found myself inside the house, with a vague impression of a lawn and trees on each side of me as I entered. Whether these were private grounds, however, or bona-fide country was more than I could possibly venture to say.

"There was a colored gas lamp inside which was turned so low that I could see little save that the hall was of some size and hung with pictures. In the dim light I could make out that the person who had opened the door was a small, mean-looking, middle-aged man, with rounded shoulders. As he turned toward us the glint of the light showed me that he was wearing glasses.

"'Is this Mr. Melas, Harold?' said he.

"'Yes.'

"'Well done, well done! No ill-will, Mr. Melas, I hope, but we could not get on without you. If you deal fair with us you'll not regret it, but if you try any tricks, God help you!' He spoke in a nervous, jerky fashion, and with little giggling laughs between, but somehow he impressed me with fear more than the other.

"'What do you want with me?' I asked.

"'Only to ask a few questions of a Greek gentleman who is visiting us, and to let us have the answers. But say no more than you are told to say, or'— here came the nervous giggle again—'you had better never have been born.'

"As he spoke he opened a door and showed the way into a room which appeared to be very richly furnished, but again the only light was afforded by a single lamp half-turned down. The chamber was certainly large, and the way in which my feet sank into the carpet as I stepped across it told me of its richness. I caught glimpses of velvet chairs, a high white marble mantelpiece and what seemed to be a suit of Japanese armor at one side of it. There was a chair just under the lamp, and the elderly man motioned that I should sit in it. The younger had left us, but he suddenly returned through another door, leading with him a gentleman clad in some sort of loose dressing down, who moved slowly toward us. As he came into the circle of dim light which enabled me to see him more clearly I was thrilled with horror at his appearance. He was deadly pale and terribly emaciated, with the protruding, brilliant eyes of a man whose spirit was greater than his strength. But what shocked me more than any signs of physical weakness was that his face was grotesquely criss-crossed with sticking plaster, and that one large pad of it was fastened over his mouth.

"'Have you the slate, Harold?' cried the older man, as this stranger being fell rather than sat down into a chair. 'Are his hands loose? Now, then, give him the pencil. You are to ask the questions, Mr. Melas, and he will write the answers. Ask him first of all whether he is prepared to sign the papers?'

"The man's eyes flashed fire.

"'Never!' he wrote in Greek upon the slate.

"'On no conditions?' I asked, at the bidding of our tyrant.

"'Only if I see her married in my presence by a Greek priest whom I know.'

"The man giggled in his venomous way.

"'You know what awaits you then?'

"'I care nothing for myself.'

"These are samples of the questions and answers which made up our strange half-spoken, half-written conversation. Again and again I had to ask him whether he would give in and sign the documents. Again and again I had the same indignant reply. But soon a happy thought came to me. I took to adding on little sentences of my own to each question, innocent ones at first, to test whether either of our companions knew anything of the matter, and then, as I found that they showed no sign, I played a more dangerous game. Our conversation ran something like this:

"'You can do no good by this obstinacy. Who are you?

"'I care not. I am a stranger in London.'

"'Your fate will be on your own head. How long have you been here?'

"'Let it be so. Three weeks.'

"'The property can never be yours. What ails you?'

"'It shall not go to villains. They are starving me.'

"'You shall go free if you sign. What house is this?'

"'I will never sign. I do not know.'

"'You are not doing her any service. What is your name?'

"'Let me hear her say so. Kratides.'

"'You shall see her if you sign. Where are you from?'

"'Then I shall never see her. Athens.'

"Another five minutes, Mr. Holmes, and I should have wormed out the whole story under their very noses. My very next question might have cleared the matter up, but at that instant the door opened and a woman stepped into the room. I could not see her clearly enough to know more than that she was tall and graceful, with black hair and clad in some sort of loose, white gown.

"'Harold,' said she, speaking English with a broken accent, 'I could not stay away longer. It is so lonely up there with only—Oh, it is Paul!'

"These last words were in Greek, and at the same instant the man, with a convulsive effort, tore the plaster from his lips, and screaming out 'Sophy! Sophy!' rushed into the woman's arms. Their embrace was but for an instant, however, for the younger man seized the woman and pushed her out of the room, while the elder easily overpowered his emaciated victim, and dragged him away through the other door. For a moment I was left alone in the room, and I sprang to my feet with some vague idea that I might in some way get a clue to what this house was in which I found myself. Fortunately, however, I took no steps, for looking up I saw that the older man was standing in the doorway, with his eyes fixed upon me.

"'That will do,' Mr. Melas,' said he. 'You perceive that we have taken you into our confidence over some very private business. We should not have troubled you, only that our friend who speaks Greek and who began these negotiations has been forced to return to the East. It was quite necessary for us to find some one to take his place, and we were fortunate in hearing of your powers.'

"I bowed.

"'There are five sovereigns here,' said he, walking up to me, 'which will, I hope, be a sufficient fee. But, remember, he added, tapping me lightly on the chest and giggling, 'if you speak to a human soul about this—one human soul, mind—well, may God have mercy upon your soul!'

"I cannot tell you the loathing and horror with which this insignificant-looking man inspired me. I could see him better now as the lamp-light shone upon him. His features were peaky and sallow, and his little pointed beard was thready and ill-nourished. He pushed his face forward as he spoke and his lips and eyelids were continually twitching, as a man with St. Vitus's dance. I could not help thinking that his strange, catchy little laugh was also a symptom of some nervous malady. The terror of his face lay in his eyes, however, steel gray, and glistening coldly with a malignant, inexorable cruelty in their depths.

"'We shall know if you speak of this,' said he. 'We have our own means of information. Now you will find the carriage waiting, and my friend will see you on your way.'

"I was hurried through the hall and into the vehicle, again obtaining that momentary glimpse of trees and a garden. Mr. Latimer followed closely at my heels and took his place opposite to me without a word. In silence we again drove for an interminable distance with the windows raised, until at last, just after midnight, the carriage pulled up.

"'You will get down here, Mr. Melas,' said my companion. 'I'm sorry to leave you so far from your house, but there is no alternative. Any attempt upon your part to follow the carriage can only end in injury to yourself.'

"He opened the door as he spoke, and I had hardly time to spring out when the coachman lashed the horse and the carriage rattled away. I looked around me in astonishment. I was on some sort of a heathy common mottled over with dark clumps of furze-bushes. Far away stretched a line of houses, with a hint here and there in the upper windows. On the other side I saw the red signal-lamps of a railway.

"The carriage which had brought me was already out of sight. I stood gazing round and wondering where on earth I might be, when I saw some one coming toward me in the darkness. As he came up to me I made out that he was a railway porter.

"'Can you tell me what place this is?' I asked.

"'Wandsworth Common,' said he.

"'Can I get a train into town?'

"'If you walk on a mile or so to Clapham Junction,' said he, 'you'll just be in time for the last to Victoria.'

"So that was the end of my adventure, Mr. Holmes. I do not know where I was, nor whom I spoke with, nor anything save what I have told you. But I know that there is foul paly going on, and I want to help that unhappy man if I can. I told the whole story to Mr. Mycroft Holmes next morning, and subsequently to the police."

We all sat in silence for some little time after listening to this extraordinary narrative. Then Sherlock looked across at his brother.

"Any steps?" he asked.

Mycroft picked up the Daily News, which was lying on the side-table.

"'Anybody supplying any information as to the whereabouts of a Greek gentleman named Paul Kratides, from Athens, who is unable to speak English, will be rewarded. A similar reward paid to any one giving information about a Greek lady whose first name is Sophy. X 2473.' That was in all the dailies. No answer."

"How about the Greek Legation?"

"I have inquired. They know nothing."

"A wire to the head of the Athens police, then?"

"Sherlock was all the energy of the family," said Mycroft, turning to me. "Well, you take the case up by all means, and let me know if you do any good."

"Certainly," answered my friend, rising from his chair. "I'll let you know, and Mr. Melas also. In the meantime, Mr. Melas, I should certainly be on my guard if I were you, for of course they must know through these advertisements that you have betrayed them."

As we walked home together, Holmes stopped at a telegraph office and sent off several wires.

"You see, Watson," he remarked, "our evening has been by no means wasted. Some of my most interesting cases have come to me in this way through Mycroft. The problem which we have just listened to, although it can admit of but one explanation, has still some distinguishing features."

"You have hopes of solving it?"

"Well, knowing as much as we do, it will be singular indeed if we fail to discover the rest. You must yourself have formed some theory which will explain the facts to which we have listened."

We had reached our house in Baker street while we had been talking. Holmes ascended the stair first, and as he opened the door of our room he gave a start of surprise. Looking over his shoulder, I was equally astonished. His brother Mycroft was sitting smoking in the arm chair.

"Come in, Sherlock! Come in, sir," said he, blandly, smiling at our surprised faces. "You don't expect such energy from me, do you, Sherlock? But somehow this case attracts me."

"There has been some new development?"

"I had an answer to my advertisement."

"Ah!"

"Yes, it came within a few minutes of your leaving."

"And to what effect?"

Mycroft Holmes took out a sheet of paper.

"Here it is," said he, "written with a J pen on royal cream paper by a middle-aged man with a weak constitution. 'Sir,' he says, 'in answer to your advertisement of to-day's date, I beg to inform you that I know the young lady in question very well. If you should care to call upon me I could give you some particulars as to her painful history. She is living at present at The Myrtles, Beckenham. Yours faithfully, J. Davenport.'

"He writes from Lower Brixton," said Mycroft Holmes. "Do you not think that we might drive to him now, Sherlock, and learn these particulars?"

"My dear Mycroft, the brother's life is more valuable than the sister's story. I think we should call at Scotland Yard for Inspector Gregson, and go straight out to Beckenham. We know that a man is being done to death, and every hour may be vital."

"Better pick up Mr. Melas on our way," I suggested. "We may need an interpreter."

"Excellent," said Sherlock Holmes. "Send the boy for a four-wheeler, and we shall be off at once." He opened the table-drawer as he spoke, and I noticed that he slipped his revolver into his pocket. "Yes," said he, in answer to my glance, "I should say, from what we have heard, that we are dealing with a particularly dangerous gang."

It was almost dark before we found ourselves in Pall Mall at the rooms of Mr. Melas. A gentleman had just called for him, and he was gone.

"Can you tell me where?" asked Mycroft Holmes.

"I don't know, sir," answered the woman who had opened the door; "I only know that he drove away with the gentleman in a carriage."

"Did the gentleman give a name?"

"No, sir."

"He wasn't a tall, handsome, dark young man?"

"Oh, no, sir. He was a little gentleman, with glasses, thin in the face, but very pleasant in his ways, for he was laughing all the time that he was talking."

"Come along!" cried Sherlock Holmes abruptly. "This grows serious," he observed, as we drove to Scotland Yard. "These men have got hold of Melas again. He is a man of no physical courage, as they are well aware from their experience the other night. This villain was able to terrorize him the instant that he got into his presence. No doubt they want his professional services, but, having used him, they may be inclined to punish him for what they will regard as his treachery."

Our hope was that, by taking train, we might get to Beckenham as soon as or sooner than the carriage. On reaching Scotland Yard, however, it was more than an hour before we could get Inspector Gregson and comply with the legal formalities which would enable us to enter the house. It was a quarter to ten before we reached London Bridge, and half past before the four of us alighted on the Beckenham platform. A drive of half a mile brought us to The Myrtles—a large, dark house standing back from the road in its own grounds. Here we dismissed our cab, and made our way up the drive together.

"The windows are all dark," remarked the inspector. "The house seems deserted."

"Our birds are flown and the nest empty," said Holmes.

"Why do you say so?"

"A carriage heavily loaded with luggage has passed out during the last hour."

The Dangerous Risk a Desperate Wife Took

By James Montgomery Flagg

From "A Romance at Random," by H. B. Marriott Watson, charmingly illustrated by Mr. James Montgomery Flagg in a recent number of the Cosmopolitan Magazine. Reprinted by permission of the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

"On her white face the white moon shone ghostly. 'What is it you want?' she asked, holding by the rails."

DIVORCE, despite the cynics and the statistics from Reno, is not an easy step to take. To a nice woman it is, perhaps, the most distressing of ordeals. To what dangerous risks would a nice woman be driven if, in desperation, she should decide to provide apparent cause for divorce that her brutal husband might take advantage of the situation and give her freedom even at the price of shameful notoriety.

Here Mr. Flagg strikingly illustrates the tragic moment of a desperate wife. Runs the story:

Why did a fashionably dressed woman behave like that at such an hour within the precincts of Mayfair? He had followed her distantly down two streets, which, as a matter of fact, was his legitimate course, his feet clanging regularly on the pavement, and now, as she drew within the circle of an electric light, he hastened closer. He had indulged his curiosity, and now he felt ashamed, ashamed perhaps more by the flash of her eyes as she wheeled them about on him, her open cloak betraying the low-cut dress beneath, her handsome face pallid in the white light.

"What is it you want?" she asked, holding by the rails.

"I—I beg your pardon," said de Lys with some diffidence. "I thought I saw you—I feared you were ill."

Her unknown eyes seemed to be fixed on him for a moment ere she replied.

"Oh, dear, no," said she at last. "Your magnificent eyesight deceives you. It runs far ahead." She paused. "Do you know the number of this house?" she asked, "or this street?"

"No," he confessed. "I was not noticing."

"If you give me your word of honor as a gentleman not to [illegible] offer you a glass of [illegible]. This was the [illegible] door, turned it, and [illegible] beckoning him in [illegible].

What happened [illegible] told in the story, a fascinating [illegible] can find only in the [illegible].

ANOTHER OF CONAN DOYLE'S THRILLING DETECTIVE MYSTERIES

The inspector laughed. "I saw the wheel-tracks in the light of the gate-lamp, but where does the luggage come in?"

"You may have observed the same wheel-tracks going the other way. But the outward-bound ones were very much deeper—so much so that we can say for a certainty that there was a very considerable weight on the carriage."

"You get a trifle beyond me there," said the inspector, shrugging his shoulders. "It will not be an easy door to force, but we will try if we cannot make some one hear us."

He hammered loudly at the knocker and pulled at the bell, but without any success. Holmes had slipped away, but he came back in a few minutes.

"I have a window open," said he.

One after the other we made our way into a large apartment, which was evidently that in which Mr. Melas had found himself.

"What is that?" asked Holmes, suddenly.

We all stood still and listened. A low moaning sound was coming from somewhere over our heads. Holmes rushed to the door and out into the hall. The dismal noise came from upstairs. He dashed up, the inspector and I at his heels, while his brother Mycroft followed as quickly as his great bulk would permit.

Three doors faced us upon the second floor, and it was from the central of these that the sinister sounds were issuing, sinking sometimes into a dull mumble and rising again into a shrill whine. It was locked, but the key had been left on the outside. Holmes flung open the door and rushed in, but he was out again in an instant, with his hand to his throat.

"It's charcoal," he cried. "Give it time. It will clear."

Peering in, we could see that the only light in the room came from a dull blue flame which flickered from a small brass tripod in the centre. It threw a livid, unnatural circle upon the floor, while in the shadows beyond we saw the vague loom of two figures which crouched against the wall. From the open door there reeked a horrible poisonous exhalation which set us gasping and coughing. Holmes rushed to the top of the stairs to draw in the fresh air, and then, dashing into the room, he threw up the window and hurled the brazen tripod out into the garden.

"We can enter in a minute," he gasped, darting out again. "Where is a candle? I doubt if we could strike a match in that atmosphere. Hold the light at the door and we shall get them out, Mycroft, now!"

With a rush we got to the poisoned men and dragged them out into the well-lit hall. Both of them were blue-lipped and snoring, with swollen, congested faces and protruding eyes. Indeed, so distorted were their features that, save for his black beard and stout figure, we might have failed to recognize in one of them the Greek interpreter who had parted from us only a few hours before at the Diogenes Club. His hands and feet were secured with cord together, and he bore over one eye the marks of a severe blow. The other, who was secured in a similar fashion, was a tall man in the last stage of emaciation, with several strips of sticking plaster arranged in a grotesque pattern over his face. He had ceased to moan as we laid him down, and a glance showed me that for him at least our aid had come too late. Mr. Melas, however, revived, and in less than an hour, with the aid of ammonia and brandy, I had the satisfaction of seeing him open his eyes, and of knowing that my hand had drawn him back from that dark valley in which all paths meet.

It was a simple story which he had to tell, and one which did but confirm our own deductions. His visitor, on entering his rooms, had drawn a life-preserver from his sleeve, and had so impressed him with the fear of instant and inevitable death that he had kidnapped him for the second time. Indeed, it was almost mesmeric, the effect which this giggling ruffian had produced upon the unfortunate linguist, for he could not speak of him save with trembling hands and a blanched cheek. He had been taken swiftly to Beckenham, and had acted as interpreter in a second interview, even more dramatic than the first, in which the two Englishmen had menaced their prisoner with instant death if he did not comply with their demands. Finally, finding him proof against every threat, they had hurled him back into his prison, and after reproaching Melas with his treachery, which appeared from the newspaper advertisement, they had stunned him with a blow from a stick, and he remembered nothing more until he found us bending over him.

And this was the singular case of the Grecian Interpreter, the explanation of which is still involved in some mystery. We were able to find out, by communicating with the gentleman who had answered the advertisement, that the unfortunate young lady [illegible] of a wealthy Grecian family, and that she had been on a visit to some friends in England. While there she had met a young man named Harold Latimer, who had acquired an ascendancy over her and had eventually persuaded her to fly with him. Her friends, shocked at the event, had contented themselves with informing her brother at Athens, and had then washed their hands of the matter.

The brother, on his arrival in England, had imprudently placed himself in the power of Latimer and of his associate, whose name was Wilson Kemp, a man of the foulest antecedents. These two, finding out through his ignorance of the language he was helpless in their hands, had kept him a prisoner, and had endeavored by cruelty and starvation to make him sign away his own and his sister's property. They had kept him in the house without the girl's knowledge, and the plaster over the face had been for the purpose of making recognition difficult in case she should ever catch a glimpse of him. Her feminine perceptions, however, had instantly seen through the disguise when, on the occasion of the interpreter's visit, she had seen him for the first time. The poor girl, however, was herself a prisoner, for there was no one about the house except the man who acted as coachman, and his wife, both of whom were tools of the conspirators. Finding that their secret was out, and that their prisoner was not to be coerced, the two villains with the girl had fled away, at a few hours' notice from the furnished house [illegible] had fled, having first, as they thought, taken vengeance upon the man who had defied and the one who had betrayed him.

Months afterward, a [illegible] newspaper cutting reached us from Buda-Pesth. It [illegible] Englishmen who had been traveling [illegible] and [illegible]. They had each been [illegible] were of opinion that they [illegible] inflicted mortal injuries upon each other. [illegible] I fancy, of a different way of thinking, and [illegible] that, if one could find the Grecian girl, one might [illegible] the wrongs of herself and her brother came to be avenged.

Again, one of the largest items of expense in every production's exploitation is the advertising. The advertising of a play when the play is done is a loss—the advertising of a star is progressive and cumulative. It is for these two reasons—a guarantee in the star and economy to the producer, that I think the system will continue." By [illegible] the starring system [illegible]

SEVERE business moralists will tell you that there are no short cuts to fortune—that the road is rough and filled with pitfalls—which is doubtless true in the ordinary manner of reckoning. And yet a few ambitious young men, with nothing more be[illegible] to promote ideas, [illegible] sometimes hover pretty close to the ground when the ambition for fame concerns the drama. To a man with sound dramatic [illegible] and a big idea riches may be [illegible] ously [illegible] Eugene Walter found [illegible] "[illegible] ll" upon the world. [illegible] complaining because his latest [illegible] and Oscar Straus and his a[illegible] of "The Chocolate Soldier," wh[illegible] the Majestic tomorrow, are not feeling a[illegible] over the $500,000 they have collected in r[illegible] during the last three years. These things must all be charged up to ea[illegible] money. Probably no musical play of recent years has enjoyed a more positive vogue than "The Chocolate Soldier," from the receipts of which 10 per cent. is divided among the composer, librettist and adapter. It is another [illegible] an idea and the ability to develop it making [illegible] the public. Not since the first performance of "The Chocolate Soldier" have the weekly receipts fallen below $10,000. Figures are always interesting when they [illegible] a big story. The first year of the production was confined solely to New York, where nearly $500,000 was paid by play-goers to see the piece. That meant $50,000 for the composer and his aides for the first season. Last year three companies toured the country and wound up the season with receipts aggregating $1,000,000. The 10 per cent. royalty was still operative. Since September 9, 1910, "The Chocolate Soldier" has played to [illegible] business at the Lyric Theatre in London, the average receipts in pounds sterling being 2,170, or about a half million dollars for fifty-two weeks. Two companies also played the provinces and brought home to Fred C. Whitney, the producer, about $400,000 more. In the second season, you will see, about $200,000 was distributed in royalties. And things have been moving smoothly this year, with three companies in the English provinces, three companies in this country, and companies in Australia and South Africa, which should add enough to the royalties already paid out to make the total for three seasons about $500,000. Mr. Straus, too, receives a percentage on all music sales, which Remick, the publisher in this country, says excels that of any other opera in the history of the trade. No, indeed, it has not been a hard Winter for a certain composer, librettist and adapter.

IN a season that has wavered, so far as Boston is concerned, between positive and just ordinary success, it is encouraging to hear Manager George Bachelor of the Gaiety Theatre declare that burlesque has never been in better shape. Mr. Bachelor ventured the opinion the other day that burlesque is more substantially established than any other form of amusement, and that the present season at the Gaiety, which has been entirely free from the foul weather that has hit other theatrical interests, is proof of his contention. "Our books show that business is in an agreeably healthy state," said Mr. Bachelor. "Of course, I cannot tell whether our increases are due to a generally sound condition of affairs or whether play-goers are turning to burlesque because of our popular scale of prices, but the fact remains that the situation at the Gaiety does not correspond at all with the doubtful reports from theatres in other large cities.

THERE was a time, not many years ago, when James K. Hackett would not have ventured upon the stage in any but the lovely costume of a swashbuckling hero. Probably no matinee idol of the past decade has enjoyed a more loyally following of giggling school girls, and Mr. Hackett, wise in his time, took them at their word. He was ever the champion of some ladye faire. Now it is different, for in "The Grain of Dust" we find him a hard-headed modern lawyer—but, still true to tradition, exceedingly tender in his regard for the ladies. Mr. Hackett is not only a good actor, but a man with high dramatic ideals. It is almost forgotten now, but it may be recalled that he was perhaps the first, and certainly the most vigorous, of the early enemies of the theatrical trust. With no support whatever, Mr. Hackett endeavored, single-handed, to put away the octopus. Naturally he carried on a losing fight, but he must be given credit for making it interesting while it lasted. Mr. Hackett's performance in "The Grain of Dust" deserves the support of playgoers.

DANGERS OF FAT

HOW FAT AFFECTS THE HEART

Fatty Degeneration of the Heart may well be a bugbear to all fat people. An excess of fat around the heart not only impedes its movements, but gradually changes the substance of the organ. The pulse becomes weaker; excitement or extra exertion causes throbbing in throat and temples; the breath is short and gaspy. When these symptoms come to the man or woman who is too fat, steps should be taken to remove the excess fat, not only from the suffocated heart, but from other parts of the body where it makes its unwelcome appearance. Many so-called fat reducers are dangerous to the fatty heart, placing upon it an added burden by stimulating its action. There is but one sure, harmless fat reducer known, the now famous Marmola Prescription of a Detroit physician, and its more convenient form, Marmola Prescription Tablets. By means of these harmless little tablets, thousands of overfat people have surely and safely reduced their weight at the rate of 10 to 16 oz. a day without exercise or dieting.

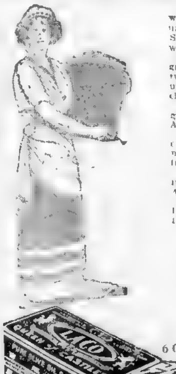
You know castile soap is best— LACO is the best castile



You know that castile soap is the world's standard of purity. But unless you have used LACO Genuine Spanish Castile, you do not know what high grade castile really is.

Most castiles are yellow or pearly gray, flaky, turn brown with age and twist, shrivel or crack. These are unmistakable evidences of impure or cheap ingredients.

LACO is pure white, hard, close-grained. Does not change with age. Always dainty and sweet.

Guaranteed absolutely pure, olive oil soap of highest grade. Contains no animal fats, no free alkali, no perfume, no adulterants.

Comes in a royal blue box, insuring cleanliness and perfect ageing. A generous cake that fits the hand.

Get it at your druggist's or grocer's. If he hasn't it, send us 10 cents for full-size cake.

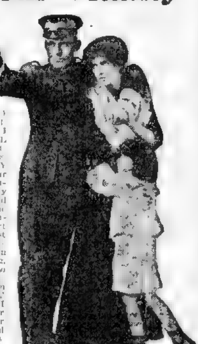
You Yourself Can Restore Your Vitality



VITALITY is the greatest power in the world. If I renew your VITAL VIGOR I restore you to full and complete manhood. No matter what your age, whether you are young or elderly, no matter what early indiscretion may have sapped your courage, if I resupply you with new VITALITY I give you the strength that all healthy, vigorous men possess. I know the source of this VITAL SUPPLY. My HEALTH BELT with suspensory attachments pours a great stream of VITALITY into your system hour after hour all night while you sleep. Thousands have said it immediately benefits and takes the pain and weakness out of the back from one night's use. No drugs, no medicines, no restrictions of any sort excepting that all dissipation must cease. The man who indulges excesses and unnatural practices can never be other than a weakling, but if you promise me as man to man that you will be decent, take ordinary care of your health and then use my HEALTH BELT every night for 60 to 90 days I should then be able to do in your case exactly what all these other thousands of men have said I did for them. Please write for my booklet today. Never mind about purchasing a Health Belt now, first get into communication with me, read what my book says, then later, if we decide between us that you should have a Belt, and if you decide that you want to use it, I will arrange for you to have one to wear until you are cured. My Health Belt is the greatest vitalizer the world has ever known. With special attachments it is a remedy for kidney, liver, stomach, bladder disorders, rheumatism, etc.

Let Me Send You THIS BOOK Free

Fill in the coupon; let me send you at once my free booklet in plain sealed envelope, it is profusely illustrated with half-tone photos, keep it in your pocket for easy reference, read the chapter on Vitality; read the chapter on Debility, read the chapter on those subjects which interest every man, young or old, who would be strong in manly vigor. It is a word of hope, a carefully written, interesting booklet which should be in every one's possession. Therefore, send today, if in or near the city, call at my office. Hours, 9 to 6.

By PAUL PIERRE RIGNAUX.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

PARIS, March 2.—During the past few days the leading hotels of Paris have all been ransacked assiduously by thieves who steal jewelry, furs and other valuables, American guests being the chief losers. The Elysee Palace Hotel in the Champs Elysee has suffered so much from these "hotel rats," as they are called, that the manager has resigned in despair.

The Grand Hotel on the Boulevard des Capucines is such a happy hunting ground for the thieves that Manager Regley waxes rude when any American visitor makes complaint of his losses.

[illegible] stolen the other day from the Metropolitan Hotel, where Mrs. Smith Hollins McKin Vanderbilt stops when she wishes solitude in Paris. Then Irving Addison Lyon of New York has not been able to recover any damages from the Continental Hotel, where valuable watches, pins and jewelry were stolen from him.

The biggest thefts of all were committed at the Hotel Meurice, where the "bogus Vanderbilt" stops [illegible] in Paris. The thieves are not supposed to be any of the domestics [illegible] people who [illegible] commit the thefts and move on to the next hotel. In suing the hotel there is always the danger of being accused of trying to get money under false pretences. Since the passage of the law that hotel keepers are not responsible beyond an amount of $200 their employees [illegible] so culpable that thefts have in creased [illegible].

A [illegible] present that the persistent and dextrous thief is Joe Novack of St. Louis, who is under sentence and jumped his bail. Novack was condemned for having attempted to rob the athletic Dr. Neville in the American Hotel, St. Louis. He has the reputation of being the smartest hotel sneak in America. His system is to use duplicate keys, and he has been seen in Paris, now smooth-faced, again with mustache and again wearing a Van Dyke beard.

Who Is a "Chaperon"?

An innocent legend printed on the invitations to a Leap Year ball given at Nice last Thursday by Mr. and Mrs. William Bradford of New York is causing no end of discussion among society word experts. The Bradfords, who are stopping at their villa, Sans Souci, in order to give more eclat to their ball sent over to New York for their only daughter, Miss Margaret Cameron. The disturbing legend reads:

"No gentleman admitted unless chaperoned by a lady."

Now the pedants point out that the latest Oxford dictionary says a chaperon means "a married or elderly woman in charge of a girl on social occasions." [illegible]

KAISER TO START PAPER OF HIS OWN

He Will Be the Editor-in-Chief and Combat Socialist Influence.

By COUNT VON ELPHBERG.

Special Cable to Sunday American.

BERLIN, March 2.—The Kaiser is considering a plan to start a new daily newspaper in Berlin. According to a well authenticated report his idea is to model it after the London Times but with a dash of American methods to make it popular.

It is said the scheme originated with him after the recent elections when the Socialists party had such victory, and to counteract this Socialist influence the new paper will preach the doctrine of Imperialism.

Kaiser As Editor.

The Kaiser would act as Editor in Chief, exercising in this capacity a general supervision and inspiring its policy. The Emperor would also dictate some of the political editorials and make inspired announcements.

The managing editor would be some German with experience in both England and America.

An alternative scheme is the purchase of an existing daily paper and remodeling it as the Kaiser saw fit.

Among those who knew what is formed [illegible] to the United States if [illegible] [illegible] hardly have the Kaiser would leave the American field to the British monarch uncontested.

American Hostesses Entertain the German Prince.

LONDON, March 2.—The Landgrave of Hesse, a German Anglophile of the rarest variety, has just arrived in London for a long stay. Hold Fast That Which Is Good

St. Paul Would Have Written This About Boston Were He Living Today—There's a Suggestion in What Is Written Below

When Eben D. Jordan conceived the idea of a Boston opera house and a Boston opera company he had faith in the music lovers of Boston and the rest of New England. His faith was that this section, particularly this city, would SUPPORT grand opera.

The faith of Mr. Jordan in the people whom he knows so well has been justified. A few weeks ago a new plan for carrying on the opera was announced. A new plan was necessary because at the end of the first and the second years there were deficits and Mr. Jordan made them good.

Of course, should there be a deficit next year Mr. Jordan could go on footing the bills, but this would not be a square deal to Mr. Jordan, neither would it, he feels, be a square deal to Boston.

So it was proposed to raise the price of the boxes and put up a guarantee fund of $150,000 a year, for a term of three years, to start with. That would make Boston opera a certainty for at least three years and, in all probability, make it permanent.

As his contribution to the new plan Mr. Jordan gave the opera house free of rent—a handsome gift. Boston responded with alacrity. The boxes were SNAPPED UP at the increased price and there were NOT ENOUGH to satisfy the demands.

Of the $150,000 a year guarantee already more than $60,000 has been subscribed. The full amount should be subscribed AT ONCE. Boston can not afford to lose her opera house and her opera company. They are one of the most precious possessions of this city.

Mr. Jordan builded well when he made them possible. Do not let his noble work prove IN VAIN. The real value of opera in Boston is TO COME, in the education of the coming generation. BOOST the guarantee fund. If you feel in this spirit communicate with the firm of Hayden, Stone & Co., No. 87 Milk street, Boston.

Looking For the "Tired Business Man"?

Gus Thomas Says He Has Quit The Showhouse and Gone Into the Library

And Also He Has Taken to Such Organizations as the Drama League, Which, Mr. Thomas Says, Is an Excellent Idea.

When the Second Syndicate Came Along There Began to Be More Theatres Than There Were Good Plays, So We Began to Have "Shows" Instead.

And There's a Difference! A Play Is Addressed to the Intellect and a Show Is Addressed to the Eye.

Judicious People, Frequently Disappointed, Began to Stay Away from the Theatre. And So That's Why the T. B. M. Is in His Library, and Why There Are Drama Leagues and So On

By NICHOLAS YOUNG.

THE Drama League is out of danger—the crisis has passed

It has found a new champion to urge it onward and upward in the magnificent task of injecting purity and good taste into the product of the theatres.

Permit me, ladies and gentlemen, to present Mr. Augustus Thomas, who writes plays with a strong right hand, always keeping his weather eye directed toward public taste. Mr Thomas is emphatic in his opinion that the Drama League is not as black as it is painted—that it isn't black at all, but a lovely violet, and deliciously scented

"There is reason for all things," Mr. Thomas confided the other day after he had displayed himself to a thousand or more drama leaguers at the Shubert Theatre, "therefore we have the Drama League"

Also, in fair exchange, the Drama League takes to Mr. Thomas and his plays, which was, perhaps, the chief reason for his becoming its star performer at the Thursday afternoon meeting. The league was there to boost "As a Man Thinks," and Mr. Thomas was present to hear the glad tidings and join in the chorus. It was a big afternoon for everybody. The league wants the best and always draws an ace at its own private functions. Which explains Mr. Thomas' appearance in freshly pressed trousers and a long coat

So the Drama League takes hope under the distinguished endorsement that falls from Mr. Thomas' smiling lips. He proves a friend in critical times. Besides, the league recommends "As a Man Thinks," a point that is well taken.

"The Drama League," said Mr. Thomas, "if I understand it rightly, so far as its evidences itself in Boston, and in Chicago, where it is still stronger, and in New York, where it affiliates with the Drama Section of the MacDowell Club, is a symptom of dissatisfaction among the better element of theatregoers that had inevitably to come to the surface

"The history of the theatre in the last generation is the history of the organization of the two syndicates. Twenty years ago theatrical enterprises on the road were in a fairly chaotic condition owing to the lack of agreement and often a lack of communication between local managers Companies that should have made it possible for their promoters to continue successfully in the work of giving most of their earnings to the railroads over which they traveled back and forth somewhat aimlessly over routes unwisely chosen because of this lack of agreement and communication

"The effort to remedy this led to the organization of what was called the Klaw & Erlanger Syndicate This syndicate placed the business department of the theatrical profession upon something like a safe base. To do this it was necessary to make discriminations which took on the quality and character of all discriminations, that is to say, the persons who were discriminated against were offended

"It is too late now and altogether unprofitable, also impossible, to discuss the rights and wrongs of the many complaints The question has been thoroughly discussed for years by the papers, and it has sometimes been in the courts—it would now be old straw It is worth considering only because some of the more ambitious men, who felt themselves aggrieved by the discrimination of the syndicate, organized what came to be practically a second syndicate

This led Mr. Thomas right up to the theatrical conflict that has kept the nincographs busy, and which many have said has brought ruin and disorder to the business of play producing. It has been great for the playwright, but the going has been hard for [illegible]

The whole American system of theatres became double-tracked," Mr Thomas went on. "Where a town capable of supporting one theatre had one theatre a second one was built and began bidding for the local patronage. These theatres of the [illegible] competed not only for the patronage of the public but began actively to compete for material

[illegible] not enough dramatists of proper equipment and knowledge and skill to supply even one side's theatre with new material. The demand was consequently supplied by material that was inept and not always worthy As plays are chosen by individual producing managers with these respective syndicates, it came about that the inferior dramatic material was not the exclusive production of either side

"Even with this added volume of plays theatres were without attractions [illegible] a show than it is to make a play. It is easier to get together a number of people with eccentric personality than it is to get together a number of ideas logically expressed. Play production declined, the show business increased from the theatre; and as they did so and turned to their libraries or other fields for relaxation, they realized that they were missing from their lives an element that had been distinctly pleasureable

Confusing the public with gorgeous proclamations of the producers' big signboards

There was, first, an unexpressed resentment of conditions, then here and there a protest through the columns of the newspapers, and, finally, as now, a rather general revolt with a fairly fixed determination to remedy matters

"It is significant that the various societies for the encouragement of proper material in the theatre and for the emphasizing of the distinction between the show and a play have sprung into existence spontaneously and in various and widely separated parts of the country. They are known as drama leagues, comedy clubs, playgoers' associations, ministers' alliances, and the like."

And here we are at the front door of the Drama League. And we find Mr. Thomas exchanging greetings with the friends of his own play, "As a Man Thinks." One good turn deserves another, and it is Mr. Thomas' turn

"The most interesting question now before the public is the probable influence of these organizations," he explained. "They have done some good—they have sustained more [illegible] which, without their assistance, would have gone to the storehouse. They are stimulating a discriminating interest in the theatres, and men engaged in the theatre are wondering if the various associations will have the courage of their convictions—that is, if they will persist long enough to bring about the reform which seems to be needed."

Ten minutes with Mr. Thomas convinces you that he is a high-powered machine If he were a pugilist instead of a play there would be no further need of hunting for a white discriminating censors of the theatre as the [illegible] always on the job" I suggested, "what chance [illegible] youthful young playwright have to earn a fair hearing [illegible]? Has he any chance?"

"I bet he has a chance," was the more expressive than [illegible] answer. Both feet were clinched

Twenty years ago there were no books of any value on [illegible] he declared. "there were no colleges which attempted to teach it—there was little communication between [illegible] who wrote for the theatre; the beginner had to dis cover for himself such laws as existed and work out and apply his own theories. The opportunity to produce was limited because there are ten productions made today where one was made twenty years ago

"The number of producing managers has greatly multiplied, and while a majority of these gentlemen have come into the business with purely speculative intentions and at the time of their entrance with very little knowledge of the drama, they have acquired a certain amount of skill, and some of them are very competent advisers. All of them are anxious to get material and the difficulty of a young man with a valuable manuscript is more imaginary than real

"Also, the imported material, for one reason and another, is not so frequently successful as it formerly was, and these producing managers are preferring the native-made play."

"Then the American play is better than the imported?" I asked. Again the force behind the man carried the argument into the enemy's territory

"The theatre is an institution, not a museum. The vital quality in the theatre is the presentation of things of common knowledge which the auditor wishes to see realized. Naturally his common knowledge is of the things of his own country—that element of an audience which is informed about things in another country is relatively small The profitable things to realize in the theatre are the native things"

And there you are'

Mr. Thomas turned his broad shoulders to the wall. I knew he was getting himself for a plunge. "What did you ask me about stock companies?" he began

"Nothing." I answered, "absolutely nothing. But let's not stand on ceremony—what about the stock company?"

We had reached his hobby—if you can call it that—and he was prepared to be revolutionary At least that is how he declared himself in advance.

I am not an enthusiastic admirer of the stock company in America as it is at present constituted," he said, "by which I mean that a new play which has only four or five rehearsals by a company wearied with at least eight performances in the week and the necessity of finding their costumes, cannot be well presented Its final performances in the week may take on a satisfactory smoothness and the stock actor may develop a skill that will disguise the departures in the earlier performance so far as the layman's perception is concerned; but the play as constructed by the author cannot have a proper interpretation on the Monday night.

"This, of course, applies only to the stock company where a weekly change of bill is made Where a play is run for two weeks or more opportunity is given for the preparation of its successor; and where a management is sufficiently strong to have a double company, this objection does not apply

"It would seem, however, that conditions all over the country are making for the restoration of the stock company and such a company as would meet and overcome the objections indicated Men who are informed believe that another year will see such a stock company in New York founded, not so much for the intention of making a frequent change of bill, but of changing it often enough to give the actors a sufficient variety of parts to take them out of the monotony of the present work and to cultivate in them the highest degree of histrionic ability."

You will observe that Mr. Thomas was only politely revolutionary. He does not believe in violence, although I am willing to submit the opinion that he could amply take care of himself in an emergency.

"At present," he continued, "when a new production is made the manager of a theatre looks about for types that fit the respective characters. There are many reasons for this, but on the other hand the regular theatre-goer loses a pleasure that he formerly found in seeing a favorite essay several different roles, and the actor loses the highest quality of impersonation which is demanded of him when he is to be the actor characterizing a part and not the mere type that plays it.

"Some men who have watched the theatre rather closely and have a constructive influence in it believe that the highest efficiency will be reached by the establishment and the encouragement in various cities of amateur societies. They believe that these amateur societies would give opportunity to young men and women of ability—would demonstrate the fitness of these young people for the theatre, and would bring to the professional rank a class of recruit that is now sadly lacking.

"The value to such young persons as would graduate from the amateur to the professional ranks is evident, at least to persons who do not disapprove of the theatre in toto There is an equal benefit also that would come to the members of any amateur organization who played, let us say, three or four times a year and remained only amateur.

"Most any man in any business will find upon reasonable self-examination that one of his chief needs is that of self-expression, and persons are happy, and happy only, when they have fully expressed themselves. The theatre is for people of the proper temperament a very complete and satisfactory avenue of expression, and persons of even amateur training gain a facility that might otherwise be lacking'

By which it will be seen that the Drama League must share Augustus Thomas' affection with the budding amateur and the rejuvenated stock company.

Mr. Thomas is a booster worth having

Have Built Six-Cylinders Since 1905

OUR SIX LONG YEARS of experience and practical use means more to the owner than does six months of experiments. The Stevens-Duryea Company knows more about SIX-CYLINDER CARS than the one to six months' manufacturers.

Square and taper square drive, dry multiple disc clutch.
Full floating rear axle, I-beam front.
Aluminum alloy—stronger than U. S. Government bronze used continually by us for 12 years.
Three point support.
Bodies and equipment unequalled.
Prices consistent with experience in manufacturing a 6-Cylinder.
Experiments all paid for. Clear sailing.

The 6-cylinder principle—which reaches its highest development in the Stevens-Duryea for 1912—was established by the same engineers who in 1905 made the Stevens-Duryea "The wonder of the age."

Four Distinct Chassis Are Included in the Completed Line for 1912.

Four distinct chasses are included in the complete Rambler line for 1912 and, with optional bodies, there are provided eleven styles from which to choose. The Rambler Cross Country is the leader among the the cars exhibited by the Thomas B. Jeffery Company. It possesses the same quality in material and workmanship which characterized the higher priced Ramblers of the past few years. It is long, with front axle set forward and [illegible] torpedo body, low, with [illegible] new spring suspension, roomy, with [illegible] ty-seven inches from seat to dash and thirty inches from seat to seat in the tonneau.

There are no outside door latches. The enclosed front is ventilated. A new feature is the drop forged I beam axle with adjustable taper rollers. The equipment includes gas headlights with gas tank, side and tail lamps, Bosch magneto, [illegible] hinged robe rail, adjustable foot rest and complete tool equipment. It is a 38 horsepower five-passenger touring car with 120-inch wheel base, 34x4 inch wheels and tires and sells at $1,650.

Pages could be written about Buick popularity, Buick power, Buick efficiency and about the greatest automobile plant in the world where the Buick is made—but come and see the car and you'll understand why nine per cent. of all the cars in use in Massachusetts are Buicks.

At the New York Show Buick occupied the position of honor, awarded because the value of yearly output exceeded all other cars. At Chicago the Buick was the busiest booth in the Coliseum. For Boston a surprise has been prepared—look for the "Art Corner" in the Buick booth, spaces 36 to 40.

Ford

Henry Ford wrote a great prescription for the removal of dead weight in automobiles when he prescribed Vanadium Steel. It is the most expensive—and the toughest steel. Scientifically heat treated, this steel defies shock and vibration. It doesn't crystalize.

By the use of Vanadium Steel the weight of Ford Model T has been reduced to the minimum—60 pounds to the horse-power. At the same time it is a car that has no equal in the world for qualities of durability and cheap maintenance.

Ford branches and dealers in all cities, towns and villages are at your elbow with Ford Service for Ford Owners.

WHITE Self-Starting SIX

The White Self-Starting Six-Cylinder Sixty, with motor cast in block, presents a striking contrast to the conventional types of six-cylinder cars.

This car has been produced to meet the heretofore unfilled demand for a powerful six-cylinder car that is both economical in operation and simple in construction and control.

Absolutely the latest in every detail of body design, with graceful lines unbroken by hinges and handles, the White Sixty is the only car to incorporate the entirely new but extremely convenient combination of the left-hand drive with a thoroughly practical and efficient electric starting and lighting system, MAKING IT POSSIBLE, FOR THE FIRST TIME IN MOTOR CAR CONSTRUCTION, TO REACH THE DRIVING SEAT, START AND LIGHT THE CAR WITHOUT THE NECESSITY OF STEPPING INTO THE STREET.

The extreme simplicity of the White Six, embodying the principles which have made White Cars world-famous for economy and durability, commands the admiration of all, and the owner of a White Car rests secure in the knowledge that it is absolutely the best and most advanced car produced anywhere.

You Can Pay $2000—But What More Will You Get?

Read those equipment details—read the specifications given below search the shows from end to end. No such car has ever been offered at anywhere near this price and many of the R-C-H features have hitherto been confined to cars costing from $3,000 to $5,000.

And remember that no car at any price could be more staunchly or more sturdily built. $5,000 would buy you no greater satisfaction—$2,000 will not buy you as great value anywhere else.

Strong statements? Yes but remember that the car itself is on exhibition at the Boston Automobile Show and at our Boston branch. See them all make any comparisons, any tests you like—we're satisfied to take your judgment.

More drop-forgings are used in the R-C-H than in any other car in the world, irrespective of price. That means greater durability. Drop-forgings vary a great deal less than castings and can therefore be machined much more accurately. That means more perfect interchangeability of parts.

The motor is the first adaptation to American cars of the long stroke idea so successful abroad. And it is ... long stroke 3¼x5. This is the proportion ... the best engineering practice ... demonstrated to be most powerful, most efficient and most economical.

The English type body is recognized as the most beautiful and ... known. Heretofore it has been an exclusive feature of a few of the highest priced American cars.

There are a hundred good features—but see the car for yourself. It's easily the star of the show this year.

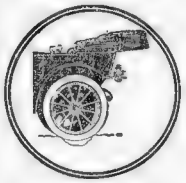
That Rambler Cross Country Is a Great Car

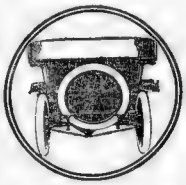
Read This and You Will Think So Too

$1650

A cushion soft and pleasing even to an invalid. Eight inch upholstery of finest leather and selected long hair—45 double acting steel spring coils. Rich in comfort, finished like club furniture



Big wheels and tires help to carry you lightly over depressions in the road. It's the bumps that cause fatigue. You don't have to brace yourself and hang on in the Rambler.



Spare Tire on demountable wheel carried in rear, eliminates worry about tire trouble. This demountable wheel can be changed in five minutes.

It's a 38 h. p. five passenger touring car with 120 inch wheel base, 36x4 inch tires and demountable wheels a rare combination of power, comfort and appearance

It's long it's low—it's roomy. Low with drop frame and new spring suspension. Long with front axle set forward and straight line torpedo body Roomy with tonneau seat four feet wide—31 inches of leg room—enough for the tallest man—27 inches from front seat to dash and wide elbow room at the wheel. The most comfortable car in America selling below $2500.

Ride 200 Miles Without Fatigue

Step into this car and you are dominated by a feeling of spacious ease and gratifying comfort. In a ten minute ride you grin in spite of yourself through rare delight. You may tour all day with pleasure and return without fatigue.

The upholstering is of such pleasing softness that even the invalid may ride without discomfort—cushions 8 inches deep made from finest selected long hair. Rear cushion has 45 double acting steel spring coils.

Front springs 39 inches long— rear 52 inches long—axle of I-beam type set forward under radiator—road clearance 10 inches—front edge of tonneau seat 9 inches ahead of rear axle—front seat 45 inches wide 120 inch wheel base and 36 inch wheels.

Now, do you wonder that it's the easiest riding—easiest to drive and easiest to turn around—no other make at $2,500 can touch it.

Delight to Drivers

You must experience the feel of that Cross Country wheel. It's a delight. Think of the unconscious ease with which you guide a bicycle. It's just that. Your arms don't tire. Your legs don't cramp. Both levers are inside and the sound of the motor just the sweetest hum that turns instantly in a snappy roar when the cut-out is open.

Silent, long and lean, with swift moving lines, the Cross Country has grace, suggestion of speed and beauty of contour

Snap! Ginger! Power!

To drive this car is exhilarating. It runs like a spirited horse. You touch the throttle and it's away. In the traffic of Fifth Avenue it will creep along at 4 miles per hour—on the open road it tops it off at fifty. It took Abbey Hill, New York, on high gear with five people, starting at 22 miles per hour and going 30 miles at top. It took Viaduct Hill on high, starting at 25, dropping to 12 at the crest and going at 18 at the top, passing two high priced cars going up in the gears.

It took City Line Hill, Philadelphia, on high, Rondout Hill at Kingston, N. Y., with 6 passengers and climbed State Street Hill, Albany, from river to Capitol on high with six passengers

It starts quickly and stops quickly—a motor car virtue that has saved many an accident. The braking surface is 490 square inches

Looks Like $2500

A big car of exceeding beauty; few people have guessed its price on sight at below $2500. Finished in English Purple Lake—a rare shade of deep maroon—trimmed in nickel, with bonnet, fenders and fillers in black enamel, with 9¾-inch lamps in black enamel and nickel. You'll find the same equipment on cars selling at $2500

Fenders of sweeping grace, radiator of new and distinctive design—doors 20 inches wide and open fully with no outside latches

Rakish, low and balanced perfectly, you can put it around a corner in a jiffy and the rear end will hug the road.

Why the $1650 Price?

"Why such a car at this price?"

Here's the reason: For years we have built high priced cars, educated our mechanics to greater skill, developed our factory until we now are able to produce the Cross Country

The Rambler was first to offer a real bicycle for less than $100. The Rambler is now first to offer a real car below $2,000. The public is ready. The Cross Country is here—it's the flag bearer for 1912—sure to be a Rambler year. To see this car is to want it—write for the name of the nearest dealer—ask for the Rambler Catalogue

Overland

OUR efforts to prove the value of the Overland have always been based on definite facts. First of all we have the largest factory of its kind in the business; which makes possible a method of economical production that no other maker can approach. That is why we can make a fine five-passenger thirty horse-power touring car to sell for $900, while the average car of this size and workmanship costs you about $1,250. The two placed side by side would show but little difference.

¶ Facts and figures go much further in proving the value of an automobile than a lot of miscellaneous and fanciful fiction.

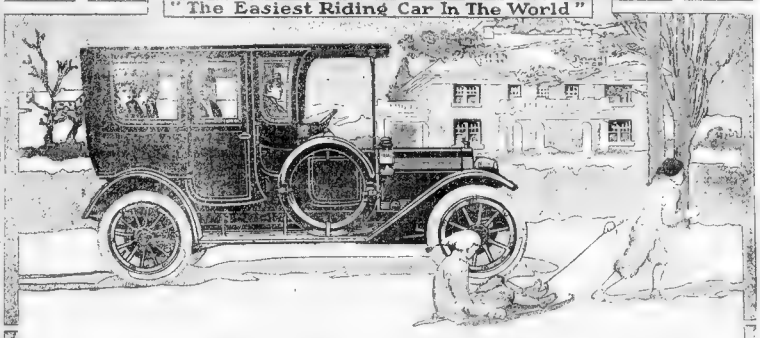
MARMON

"The Easiest Riding Car In The World"



The Heart of Value Is Quality, the Marmon Possesses It

MEASURE its worth from the standpoint of reliable, unfailing daily service in all seasons, or measure it by the luxury of its delightful, quiet smoothness of operation, the Marmon offers you more value for your investment than any other car in the world.

It is manufactured complete in this great factory. Could you see the completeness of this organization—could you watch each step of its making—the designing, the pattern making, the moulding of iron, aluminum, brass and bronze castings, the forging, the making of special tools, jigs and fixtures for making the parts interchangeable and accurate, the machining, the building of motors, axles, chassis and bodies, the finishing, the painstaking care and thoroughness with which every part is tested and inspected—then you would realize what stands back of Marmon superiority.

MARMON cars are made in five and seven passenger Touring Car, four passenger Suburban, Roadster for two or three passengers, $2750; seven passenger Limousine $4000; Landaulet, $4100.

Manufactured Exclusively by Nordyke & Marmon Co. Indianapolis, Ind. Established 1851.

SIXTY YEARS OF SUCCESSFUL MANUFACTURING

The World's Greatest Victories

The Marmon won The International Sweepstakes Race—the greatest contest the world has ever known—on May 30th, 1911, covering 500 miles in 402 minutes, 8 seconds, at the record-breaking speed of 74.61 miles per hour, and defeating such cars as three Italian Fiats, two German Benz, the German Mercedes, the Alco, two Loziers and others, in all a field of 44, the greatest gathering of representative cars of Europe and America ever entered in one event.

The records of the Marmon during its entire career make a wonderfully consistent showing as the winner of the majority of all the greatest, longest and most important speedway events, most of them without a stop.

A booklet "International Sweepstakes" containing a stirring, illustrated narrative of the 500-mile Race and accounts of the winning of the Marmon's Great List of Victories, will be sent on request.

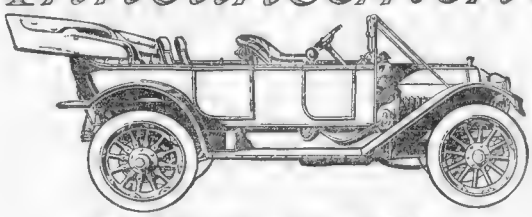
Announcement



THE Marquette

Although for some months most favorably known in trade circles, the Marquette Motor Car makes with this announcement its first formal bow to the general public. It is not in any sense a "new comer"—except in name. Nor is it "just another car." It is a car produced with a well-defined purpose of measuring up to the highest standards thus far set in automobile construction and performance. It is a car with a real place in the motor field—and that a place of distinction, for the Marquette is the outgrowth of two well established and highly regarded cars, one the Rainier and the other the Welch-Detroit.

Being a blending of the distinguished characteristics of these two cars, it is obvious that the Marquette is not an untried product which must go before the public and or fall as an experiment, but, inherently, is already a car of known worth. Today the public very wisely thinks of the factory, the men, the organization, the ideals, back of a car. In these the Marquette acknowledges supremacy to none. It is the output of the combined facilities which have reached so high a standard in the production of the Rainier and the Welch-Detroit.

Moreover, the Marquette has back of it the facilities of the General Motors Company organization, a fact which in itself is a guarantee of quality and an assurance of performance, accompanied by a deep sense of responsibility to the purchaser. We are fully equipped to render, locally, this service at its maximum.

In every point of design and construction, the Marquette is what might be expected from an organization of the character of that which backs it. Its engine deserves special comment—a wonderfully smooth, quiet, flexible power plant which fascinates you at its first revolution.

We urge you by all means to

Again a Trebled Demand

Men who know, used last year 409,521 Goodyear tires. That's more than were used in the previous 12 years put together.

This year's demand is three times last year's so far. That shows the result of experience.

No other tire compares in sales with the Goodyear No-Rim-Cut tire.

127 Makers Adopt Them

FEDERAL RUGGED TREAD

A real non-skid tire

Service and durability are two points considered in the building of the FEDERAL RUGGED TREAD NON-SKID TIRE.

Its rugged build and exceptionally heavy tread make it unusually serviceable and lasting.

The heavy base knobs, built in parallel lines, firmly grip the road, giving full power traction under all conditions and saving excessive wear on the tires.

The formation of these knobs offers many skid-resisting angles the full width of tread at point of road contact, eliminating danger of side slip and ensuring perfect safety against skidding.

It is a real non-skid tire.

GREATER CASE 40

"The Car With the Famous Engine"

This car we regard as the crowning achievement of a company which for seventy years has stood at the head of manufacturers of the highest type of machinery. It is a quality product from first to last and, by all standards of comparison, the greatest value in an automobile on the market today.

The Greater Case is great in size and magnificent in appearance. It has all the elegance and style and luxurious comfort of the most expensive cars. But the dominant factor in its supremacy is under the hood.

—IT'S THE CASE ENGINE.

Our Mighty Engine

We rate as a 40 horsepower, an engine that shows 52 horsepower on the brake test. It took 16 years to perfect it. This is the same type of engine that carried the Case "30" to victory and fame on race tracks, durability runs and hill-climbing contests galore.

The Handsomest Car

The Greater Case is long and roomy, with a straight line body and sweeping lines that give symmetry and grace. It is exquisitely finished and upholstered, handsomely trimmed, luxuriously appointed, and up-to-the-minute in style.

Its splendid lines and stunning style command universal admiration. No modern car at any price surpasses it in appearance or easy-riding qualities.

Self-Starting Motor

The Greater Case is a high-grade car at a medium price. Four-door ventilating 36x4-inch tires—120-inch wheel base—11-inch clearance—40 x 5½ inch motors—Kingston carburetor—Bosch-Lipert magneto—Timken full-floating axles—cellular-type radiator—Spanish fiber trimmings—demountable rims—English mohair top with side curtain and dust hood—self starter—high grade windshield—12-inch acetylene gas head lamps—special design combination side tire and tool box and tail lamps—storage battery for the electric lighting side and tail lamps—Prest-O-Lite tank for head lamps—one extra demountable rim—complete set of tools, jack and tire-repair kit—pump. These are some of the special features that belong to the Greater Case.

The Case Eagle On Your Car

This emblem of quality, which is the same as the big SILVER SIGN MARK on every Case Car, is your guarantee that you are getting the best power plant that can be built.

Nation-Wide Case Service

We have 10,000 Case Agents and 65 big Branch Houses scattered throughout the United States and Canada. All of our vast army of agents are equipped to promptly take care of Case Cars.

Wherever you carry the Case Eagle you may be assured of a welcome and of prompt and efficient service. The Case Eagle is known the world over as the sign of Case Service.

The Safe Way to buy a car is to deal with a concern in whom you have absolute confidence.

You know this company.

We want you to know the Greater Case. Send for the catalog. See the car at the nearest Case Agency.

Ride in it—at our expense—as fast and as far as you wish. The car is waiting—may not accept our invitation for a "show me" test of its greatness? If you want a lighter, less powerful car, investigate the well-known Case 30.

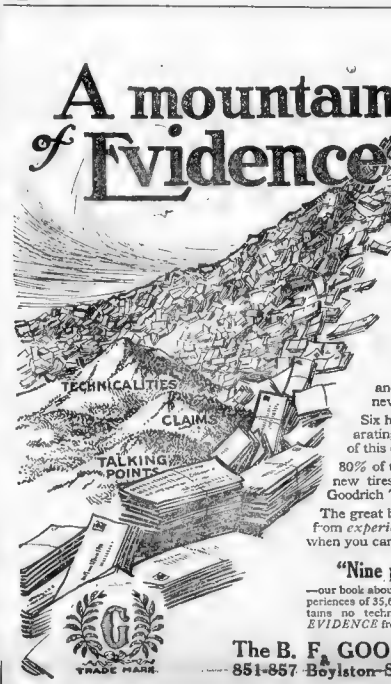
A mountain of Evidence



35,600 Replies!

We sent out cards to an ordinary mailing list. We wanted to get from motorists generally—irrespective of what tire any one of them might be using—their frank, uninfluenced opinion of tires, based on their personal experiences. We received 35,600 replies. 15,300 reported Goodrich Tires used. Balance divided among users of eleven other makes.

These reports proved conclusively that users average 51½% more mileage than is guaranteed from and that an average of one-fifth of Goodrich Tire users never have a puncture or blowout in a full season's run.

Six hundred users of other tires complained about tread separating from body of tire—not a single Goodrich complaint of this order.

80% of these 35,600 reported that they specify "Goodrich" when new tires are needed. A frequent statement was "I am using Goodrich Tires to replace tires which came on car."

The great bulk of Goodrich Tires are sold to fill a personal demand from experienced tire users. It is needless for you to experiment when you can profit by what other motorists have learned.

"Nine prophets and a host of truly wise ones"

—our book about these reports—puts in your hands the comparative tire experiences of 35,600 car owners; users of twelve different makes of tires. It contains no technical claims, no talking points, no "rhetorical bonfires"; but EVIDENCE from those alone entitled to give it—tire users themselves.

LEADS In Tire Construction

Firestone Non-Skids were the first all-rubber heavy tread non-skid tires made.

Four years ago they set a pace that the whole tire industry has been trying to follow ever since. They have displaced the old-style anti-skid treads everywhere.

They were first because the only foundation strong enough to withstand the stress of stopping a skid, without weakening the tire, was the regular Firestone construction under the tread.

They Are Just As Far In Advance Now

MAGNITUDE OF THE MOTOR INDUSTRY

No Other Line of Industry Ever Showed Such Great Progress.

By PRESIDENT JOHN N. WILLYS, The Willys-Overland Company.

JOHN N. WILLYS

It seems to be almost impossible to find a word that will adequately express the magnitude of the automobile business and its unparalleled and meteoric growth.

Students of industrial development a few years ago would have scoffed at the idea of an industry attaining its full growth in a decade, as the past twelve years has seen the automobile industry grow from an infant to a giant with untold possibilities before it. Nor can it be said that it is, at its zenith, for those who have watched motor car building declare the surface has only been scratched and that still greater expansion must come to meet the demand for both so-called pleasure and commercial vehicles.

The present carnival is a fitting celebration of what may be termed a twelfth anniversary. It will do more than any one thing to convince the public that the automobile is one of the greatest factors in the pleasure and commercial life of this country and that its present enviable position, in the soundness of its companies, the perfection of its mechanism and the enthusiasm of its patrons is only the beginning.

There are some interesting figures supplied during the past twelve years that are worth the attention of the public at large. Speed has been a mania in the automobile business and among motor car owners since its inception in this country.

Twelve years ago America had yet to see its first automobile show, and the man who seriously talked of the automobile as a practical thing was laughed at. Twelve years ago no one could be made to believe that from the frankly boxing, lady designed cars could be created the beautiful creations of today with their luxuriousness, speed, power and easy and safe control.

Twelve years ago fifteen miles an hour was considered a wonderful performance, but today we have cars that have averaged about 140 miles an hour on the waterwashed Daytona beach course. Twelve years ago one hardly dared to expect that an automobile would cover a mile in a minute, but two miles a minute has been accomplished.

So far as incomplete records show there were only twenty-four makers of motor cars in America, including those inventors who had only turned out one model. Yet today there are something like 300 makers—some good, some bad.

Twelve years ago the invested capital in the motor car industry did not exceed $2,000,000, while today that amount has been increased so many million that it would make one gasp if the total was readily obtainable. About $1,000,000 would cover the total sales twelve years ago. During 1912 the total sales will probably reach $250,000,000. Overland sales will reach at least $25,000,000 during the 1912 season.

The number of people employed in the industry, including allied accessory and tire concerns, amounts to a huge figure, to say nothing about the thousands of additional men employed in garages, as chauffeurs and in other positions. History shows no such industrial records, as no other industry—not even the making of bicycles—can be compared to the motor car industry.

More important than all is the stability of the industry. While it may be a craze with a few hair-brained maniacs to travel at mile-a-minute speed all the time, the automobile is a staple product, with a steady and continuous demand, as proven by the extraordinary number of sales during the past few months.

If the automobile had been considered a luxury there would have been little or no business. The public knows what it wants, and if the automobile was not a necessity, a time and money saving device, its career would have been of short duration and the demand would have ceased long ago.

A REVISED RECORD LIST.

Several Changes Are on the New List.

The American Automobile Association's Contest Board has promulgated a revised list of records which will probably be final until the opening of 1912 competition. The most noteworthy changes on the list are Ralph De Palma's fifty miles at Syracuse in 47:21.05 and the wholesale revision of the records of the 160 and under class, accomplished at the Indianapolis Speedway by the Flanders "20" cars driven by Witt and Evans.

Although the Studebaker Corporation drivers went to the speedway, equipped only for an assault on the stock chassis records, technically known as Class B, the chance to secure at practically no effort as Class C records, in which piston displacement alone is a requisite of eligibility, proved too strong, and one of the reserve cars which Chairman Edwards of the technical committee had stamped strictly stock was started after the new Class B marks had been set.

The new Class C car was a bit behind its companion at 4:22.98 for the five miles, but Bob Burman, its driver, seemed to stand the cold better than Witt, his Georgia team mate, and, from then on, went slightly faster, doing the ten miles in 8:55.95; the fifteen in 13:24, and the twenty in 17:54.80.

When Evans had finished, Chairman Edwards gave Contest Manager Bruske, who was in charge of the expedition, his choice for stock and "C" marks—a condition probably unique in the annals of racing.

Left-hand drive is only proper for town cars, runabouts and taxicabs, in the opinion of one of the newer commercial vehicle producers; the reason being that they are constantly passing slower-moving traffic, in doing which the driver must be able to see ahead of the preceding vehicles and discern opposing traffic at a good distance. The heavier commercial vehicle, on the other hand, seldom is called upon to pass other vehicles, but ordinarily keeps to the right of the road. In stopping it is drawn up to the right curb; in manoeuvring to load or unload it is the right side which must be watched. Therefore, there is good reason for right-hand drive for that type of machine.

New Exhibit of Speedwell Cars

Two Cars Not Seen Elsewhere Are to Be Found in the Boston Motor Show.

Boston will get a glimpse of two new Speedwell cars that even Cadogan and New York did not see at their shows. These new body designs—the Speed Roadster and the four-passenger Tourist, were added to the Speedwell line late in the season—of all the large cities Boston alone is exhibiting these remarkably pleasing styles.

One chassis serves for the entire line of Speedwell cars. This has a wheelbase of 123 inches, and is powered with a motor rated at 50 horsepower, of the L head type.

An unusual feature of the Speedwell front axle is that the tops of the steering pivots are provided with large roller bearings. These carry the weight of the car, not only making steering remarkably easy, but practically eliminating wear at a very important point. To protect the steering arrangement from damage by obstructions in the road, the connecting rod between the wheels is placed directly behind the axle, while the rear end that connects the wheels to the steering gear is above the axle.

The housing of the full floating rear axle is one piece of pressed steel, instead of following the usual practice of being made in halves and bolted or riveted together in the centre. The result is greatly increased strength; while access to the differential gear is gained through a removable plate.

The Speedwell Company, for 1912, has made all its bodies of metal because metal is somewhat lighter and vastly more desirable than wood, in addition to lending itself to more attractive design. One of the main objects aimed at in Speedwell bodies is unusual roominess, in the driver's seat as well as in the tonneau.

INDIAN MOTORCYCLES.

Fine Line Is Displayed by George N. Holden.

George N. Holden, at No. 141 Massachusetts avenue, is showing the Indian motorcycle for 1912 in seven models and two sizes—the four horse-power single and seven horse-power twin cylinder. Of these the T. T. models, the racing machines of high revolutionary innovations, attract immediate attention.

These machines are duplicates of those which took first, second and third places in the most important motorcycle event of the year—the Tourist Trophy race, about the Isle of Man, England, and that of stripped stock machines of this type that hold every speed and endurance record in this country.

The most startling feature is the method of cranking the engine, which is done by a thrust of the foot on a lever connected, through a safety ratchet, directly to the engine shaft. This permits of the complete abandonment of the pedals. They are replaced by broad, comfortable foot boards which, by their low and central position, add great stability to the machine on treacherous roads.

Other new features are the two-speed selective transmission, larger bearings and valves in the engine, large clutch, a new rear hub incorporating roller bearings, a knock-out axle and internal and external band brakes. Heavier rims and spokes are used; the gasoline tank capacity is increased to ten quarts and a number of smaller improvements are to be noted.

Chain drive is used with the option of belt on the four horse-power regular model only. Tandem riding, so popular in England and throughout the West, is fast getting a foothold here and will no doubt become very popular this Summer.

THE STAR OF THE MEET.

Waterman in a Reo Wins Great Honors.

One of the most unique series of sporting events, including automobile and aeroplanes, on the Pacific Coast within many months was the air and land race meet pulled off at Fresno, Calif., recently, and R. M. Ellsworth. Valuable trophies brought out stiff competition in free-for-all races, and an unusually attractive program provided thrills aplenty for the large crowd and the throughout the entire meet. Eddie Waterman, still in his teens, of Fresno, with his Reo, proved the star and captured all the automobile honors of the big meet. This included the beautiful Coliseum Cup for the fifty-mile matched race with standing start, which Waterman won by a handsome margin of 1m. 16 4-5s. In the five-mile, free-for-all, from a flying start, Waterman in his Reo came in first in 5m. 29 2-3s. This gave him the beautiful Mc-Cue trophy. In the 25-mile, free-for-all, Waterman in his Reo led the spirited chase to the finish in 27m. 34s., defeating three higher-priced cars by wide margins. This is the best record ever made on the Fresno track.

Buick Exports.

The government exports statistics show a great increase in the number of American-made cars used in other countries. A recent month's exportation by the Buick Motor Company, Flint, Michigan, included shipment of 1912 cars to San Juan, Philippine Islands, Dunedin, New Zealand; Kobe and Yokahama, Japan; Cardenas and Ponce, Cuba; Brisbane, Australia; Durban, South Africa; Stockholm, Sweden; Kingston, Jamaica; London, England, and Trinidad, British Guinea.

Non-Skids Help, Prevent Accidents

Injuries or Fatalities Avoided by Their Use, Says Ajax Tire Man.

By J. C. MATLACK.

Secretary Ajax-Grieb Rubber Co.

The increasing number of automobile accidents due to cars skidding on wet pavements calls attention strongly to the need for some tire that will help to prevent such slipping if indeed it does not eliminate it entirely. The accidents in big cities where there is a great deal of smooth asphalt pavement have been fatal or harmful to pedestrians and to those in the cars.

The Ajax tire was one of the first tires to be put on the market with a non-skid trend thoroughly reasoned out on scientific principles. The tire is so simple in appearance that its effectiveness surprises a great many persons. This tread is marked by deep cross hatching which leaves diamond-shaped projections, the edges of these diamonds are very sharp and remain so until the tire is worn down to the very fabric.

The sharp edges cut into the film of moisture or grease on the pavement, tending it up so that it is pushed out of the way and the flat part of the diamond rides, not on the coat of slippery surface, but on the dry asphalt below this moisture, which has been pushed aside by encountering the sharp edge of the non-skid.

Chains are not good for tires, because they help to shorten the life of the casing. The non-skid trend operates to attain the same results as a tire with chains without the chains. It does not take expert knowledge or any trick of driving to hold a car on a line when a good form of non-skid is employed. Inasmuch as the safety of many may depend on keeping an automobile from skidding, the driver of a car owner is to the general good to employ an effective non-skid tire. Our casing of this type was first put out some years ago. It has done the work right along as hundreds of users of Ajax tires have informed us.

DRIVERS IMMUNE TO FRIGHT

Railroad Accident Has No Terror for Them.

History records at least one time when even the most timid of people wished they had the nerve and hardihood of automobile race drivers. It all happened in sleeping cars en route over the Mohon from Chicago to Indianapolis. The occasion was a meeting with automobile trade people returning from the Chicago automobile show. All at once, and without warning, two or three of the cars went off the rails. There was a general shake-up, confusion and a wild scramble for safety. Nothing more happened, but the shock was just as great as if it had been a fatal accident.

Two and only two people in the cars remained cool. One was Johnnie Aitken and the other Harvey Herrick. Both are National 40 race pilots. They were in lower berths opposite each other in the same car and both were almost asleep when the shock came.

"What's the matter, Johnnie. Blow a tire?" is what Herrick called out.

"No, go back to sleep, nothin' doing, just a little skid on the track," Aitken called back.

Even in the face of what was thought a serious accident, many of the escaping passengers who knew the drivers had to laugh.

"It only goes to show that race driving makes one immune to danger," said one man after the excitement was over and Aitken and Herrick had once more left their berths.

Herrick, who holds the world's road-race record, made at Santa Monica with a National 40, came to Indianapolis to be the first time saw the Speedway where he will drive one of the National cars in the 500-mile race May 30. He proved a fast time.

NOW SELLS MOTORS.

Famous Horseman in Firm to Handle Hupmobile in Denver.

George H. Estabrook of Denver, one of the most noted of American horsemen, has entered the automobile game as the financial backer of a firm recently launched in Denver to handle the Hupmobile in that territory.

This new concern bears the name of the Estabrook Sales Company, Estabrook being the name of Mr. Estabrook's great yearling, by Colorado Kid, 2:04¾, the world's champion three-year-old, out of Dorothy Axworthy. Estabrook is a royally bred colt, one whose remarkable speed for his age was characteristic of that filly mated to the Hupmobile. It is evident that Mr. Estabrook is not going to let his automobile cars show below the standard of his equine bluebloods.

To Start a Campaign.

At a recent meeting of the directors of the Massachusetts State Automobile Association it was decided to discuss with a view of engaging in a campaign to largely increase the membership strength of the association. It was felt that every motorist in this State should be a member of this association in order to forward the cause of legislation and the securing of good roads.

Mr. W. H. Chase, chairman of the good roads board, appointed the following committees of the good roads committee:

Messrs. Rockport of Webster, A. E. Bliss, Malden; W. M. Stevenson, Springfield; A. D. Cozzens, Winchendon; C. Fred Emery, Fitchburg; T. L. Harlow, Gardner; W. W. Appleton, Haverhill; F. O. Hardy, Fitchburg; E. A. Gilmore, Boston; Joseph Wilcox, Athol; A. H. Bell, Leominster; J. W. Barrington, Worcester; Dr. Crandall, Taunton.

American Automobiles Are Rapidly Becoming the Standard of the World

Five years ago every millionaire went to Europe to buy his car. Now Europeans come here to buy cars.

Following is an expert computation of the giant growth of our auto export trade:

	1910.	1911.
Total number of cars exported	8,110	18,500
Average price	$1,550	$1,080
Total value of cars	12,290,500	20,000,000
Exports of accessories	1,500,000	3,000,000
Exports of tires	1,800,000	2,500,000
Total value of cars exported in 1911		1,500,000

Biggest foreign market for American cars, Canada.

TESTED BEFORE REPAIRS ARE MADE

A unique plan which bids fair to better the system of garage management in this country has been received and put into practice by the owner of a large garage in San Francisco. The original plan, as advocated by the Regal Motor Car Company and at present practiced by this representative, is said to reduce the upkeep and running expense of automobiles to at least one-half of the present cost.

The Full Line at the Automobile Show

THE full line of self-starting cars is ready for your inspection at the automobile show. The models are listed below.

¶ The "Thirty-Seven"—our famous $1,350 car—is worth your most careful consideration. This car has a powerful, long stroke, 40 horse-power motor, the size of which is 4 in. x 5 in. The wheel base measures one hundred and twelve inches. It is a fore-door, five-passenger car—flush sides. Tires 34 x 4. No-rim-cut type. The frame is of pressed steel with a double drop. It has the most practical self-starting system on the market.

¶ The "Thirty-Seven" is a car that will appeal to your own good judgment. It is a common-sense car—thoroughly up-to-date—handsomely finished and made by the most skilled men in the industry. See it by all means. It will be time well spent.

¶ Our other models are as follows:

Model "Thirty-Three," $1,150

30 horse-power, two passenger Roadster; wheel base 111 inches; tires 32 x 3½.

Model "Thirty-Five," $1,285

Five-passenger, fore-door Touring; wheel base 112 inches; 30 horse-power; tires 32 x 4.

Model "Forty-Eight," $1,750

Five-passenger, fore-door Touring; 45 horse-power; long stroke motor 4½ x 5½; wheel base 120 inches; front axle I beam drop-forged Timken bearings; rear axle full floating Timken bearings; tires 36 x 4. All bright parts enameled and nickel plated.

Model "Forty-Six," $1,750

Two-passenger Roadster, same as "Forty-Eight."

Model "Forty-Seven," $1,850

Four-passenger Torpedo, same as "Forty-Eight."

¶ Here you can see a polished chassis of the "48."

A LOW-PRICED CAR OF MERIT

Little Metz "22" Has Everything Desirable and at a Minimum Price.

One of the lowest priced cars in the entire exhibit is the Metz "22" shown by the Holander Motor Company at Boylston street. This is the latest car which holds such an enviable membership for itself on the recent climbing tour, when it plugged through the mud and negotiated obstacles and hills grades and bad roads that proved to rack of greater horsepower and much higher selling price.

The Metz is a powerful little machine and is constructed along scientific lines, the keynote being simplicity. It is a car that is economical on gasoline and lubricating oil, and there is no waste of weight in it or on tires. For those who do not care to take on the burden of keeping a number some touring car, the car affords the best means of locomotion. It will appeal particularly to the business man, who, regardless of his route, finds it necessary to be transported quickly and comfortably.

This little car will also commend itself to doctors, being ready for service at all times and enabling him to make his calls with the greatest possible facility.

It has a water-cooling system of four cylinders, cast en bloc, the water jackets being jacketed cylinder head, permitting free access to the combustion chamber, cylinders and valves for scraping, lapping, etc., compactness and ease of installation. Water jacketed.

A spiral system of ventilation is used and has proved the most effective and simplest ever installed in a motor. Ignition is of the high tension type and the motor is equipped with the highest grade magneto obtainable, thus eliminating coil, buzzer and trembler parts which are usually a source of trouble and annoyance to the operator.

Friction drive transmission is used and has proven to be very efficient and most easily cared for, thus known. It is efficient in every way, performing all the work required of it. By the use of this device, troublesome features, which go to make up what is known as the shaft drive, are eliminated.

The left-hand side is now considered the safest, most practical and most convenient side for the driver's seat. With these are many advantages in driving on the left-hand side of the car, the driver's right one is perhaps the fact that under the regulations pedestrians and horse riders and many smaller ones, the operator is obliged to keep with his right hand to the curb, and with the left-hand drive, the passenger alights on the sidewalk in the most convenient manner.

The multiple disc brakes, which are an exclusive Metz feature, are constructed on the principle of the multiple disc clutch. One-half of the brake members are attached to the axle while the other half are attached to the inside shell of the rear hubs. These are properly protected from dust and are quick acting and effective.

These are paramount features of this popular little car. The sum, everything up in one phrase, however, it is to make a complete, the selling price of the car, including everything necessary for automobile service.

Keeps Accurate Record.

The City of Minneapolis garage, a municipal institution, keeps a very accurate record of the cost of operating the various city autos.

This record has been averaged up for the past six months and the cost per mile of operating each car determined. In this cost figures are included first cost of the car, gasoline, tires and repairs.

Of the ten cars used by city department three are Buicks, and the work done by these cars, as well as the low cost per mile, is worthy of note. Number 2 Buick, a five-passenger car in the sewer department service, averages 7.76 miles per day at a cost of four cents per mile. Number 3 Buick, the five-passenger car in the fuel department, has a monthly average of 800 miles at a cost of six cents per mile, and the number 10 Buick police department "patrol" averages 500 miles a month at a cost of four cents per mile. The other seven cars average about this same.

These statistics should interest other cities and towns whose officials have not kept as accurate records as have the Minneapolis authorities.

ONE GREAT AID IN AUTOMOBILE RACES

Dorian Rims Do Away With Many Discomforts and Delays That Beset Motor Users.

The day of experiments in demountable rims has long since passed, and this remarkable time-saving device has now become one of the most important factors in car construction. Manufacturers have unhesitatingly proclaimed its fit for, especially since it has made good. They are recognized as a necessary integral part of the car necessary to the motor car service as the tires themselves, that remarkable time and here because their convenience simplifies the comfort of the users of a car, because they do away with the inconvenient and unpleasant delays, oftentimes dangerous to health or life, due to being held up on hour or more in a snowstorm, a driving rain or on a rainy, hot day.

The demountable rim has become an absolute necessity, and one of its principal recommendations is the ease with which it is operated. This is demonstrated in the Dorian rim, with which it is necessary to turn but two nuts and push the rim off. Any man, woman or child can do it. Turning the nuts draws the wedges out from under the rim with the greatest ease, substitute the rim with the newly inflated tire, tighten up the nuts a few times, giving the wedges time to work home, and the rim seemingly does not only need removing every glance, or in the dark, when the tire is deflated and when low, the change is made as quickly and easily as by the old method.

The demountable rim is available consists of a number of different sizes, which are made interchangeable, and this is one place and time where economy at this point is of the greatest importance, with the result of reducing the maintenance sufficiently to more than pay for the cost of a rim in the first season of the greatest ease and convenience.

To change the rim in the manner described no special tool is provided, which is claimed to be the case with other sizes of the split-ring design perfectoability with which the rim is properly seated by means of notches of different sizes, which make proper adjustment impossible. This tool is of such strength and design as to positively stand up under the easy removal of the tire therefrom under the most adverse conditions.

A pull on the handle in one direction will enlarge the rim to the proper shoulder preparatory to applying the tire, while a push in the opposite direction will close the rim and the tire is in place. When the rim is closed the tool automatically locks by the cross position, as shown in the cut. No particular qualities are necessary to unlock the natural motion of pushing the tool handle close to the rim will do it.

The Fake Constable Stunt.

The fact that a great many buyers of automobiles who are not very well versed in the technical points of the motor game is manifested by the fact that a dealer has devised a new trick for the promotion of gasoline sales. In front of a garage on Columbus avenue there has been taking place for the past month or more, time and again, a constable who would state that he had timed the car of motorists who were supposed to be going slightly over the speed limit, and after much wrangling, would generally fine the driver. He would probably fail for the trick, according to the dealer, who purchases the machine.

Taxies for Isthmus.

Taxis is to be good automobile service on the Panama Canal. Convention has been granted Francisco Artis, Sr., for establishing a taxicab service on a regular schedule for the cities of Panama and Colon, and neighborhood, where the highways permit. The vehicles must carry mail matter from the government postoffices along the route and give free transportation to policemen. At least six cars must be in operation within a year and the number later be augmented so that within three years there will be at least twenty-five.

OAKLAND COMPANY EXPLOITS 1912 LINE

Most Complete and Best Line That Has Come From This Factory.

In exposing its most attractive line of 1912 cars, the Oakland Motor Car Company, of Pontiac, Mich., which is represented in this territory by the Boston Motor Company is displaying an interesting exhibit of finished cars and chassis, highly representative of a company of this standing.

The exhibit includes a model "45" limousine, finished in blue; a model "45" 7-passenger touring car, also finished in blue with black striping; a model "40" Victoria touring car, finished in green; a model "40" roadster, finished in gray; a model "40" coupe, finished in black and gray; a model "30" roadster, finished in blue; and a model "30" touring car, finished in gray, covering their complete line. In addition, chassis of the models "45" and "40," white enameled and red, are on hand, displayed to great advantage and well displayed.

George E. Daniels, general manager of the Oakland Company, in discussing the Oakland line, said:

"This is distinctly the most complete and best line that has come from the Oakland factory and takes rank with the first-class moderate priced cars, and well up toward even much higher priced cars.

"The changes in adding the Oakland line and trend of public demand for cars of this type, the Oakland's aim to meet this demand, continued.

"The Oakland for 1912 will see more cars than ever before during the next months. I do not anticipate any increased selling prices, which have always been in favor, but touring cars and roadster models as well. One of the reasons for this statement is the fact that more cars are being built and will now be immediate delivery than ever before. The first of the year, the early parts of the country materials have been shipped in, and cars are made for several months past, and manufacturers have been unable to fill the orders. Of course coupes and limousines are being used much more than ever before, and I am convinced that, in the near future, very few touring cars will be sold in Winter.

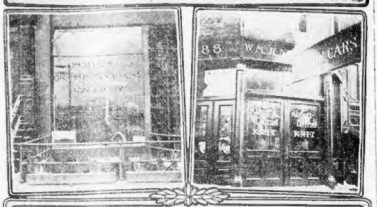
"Another feature of the trend of the times is making open cars more in demand this Winter is the policy of business houses to use runabouts and small touring cars for their salesmen, in city and country use, as the saver, money saver and time getter. One concern will have over fifty cars ordered ready for delivery in the first week in March, which are being used throughout Cleveland and vicinity for pleasing the dealers' open car seems to be more in vogue than heretofore, as open cars require the installation of fresh coat of paint.

"The Oakland for 1912 line we have given consideration to all of these factors and feel that we have succeeded in what that will be hard to surpass. In the touring line we are putting out what we call our "Sociable" roadster, with an extra wide single seat, enabling it to accommodate three persons, in preference to the two passenger affair, which is certainly going out of favor. Then we have our "Victoria," which is a very handsome model, lines and its low setting top, affording a protecting, but elegant, finish to the rear of the car. Our coupe also is a perfect a model as can be built. That 1912 of Oakland's have never been and this is a long run words. Altogether I think we have reason to be proud of our 1912 line in its perfection of mechanical detail and its comprehensive scope."

Mexico Buys Autos.

Central American and Mexican cities are spending more money each year for automobiles, as shown by exports through New Orleans. Mexico City is the greatest buyer of motor cars, and parts and supplies and accessories here been consigned to Mexican ports, practically all of the shipments going to Mexico city, although Puebla and Guadalajara also were large buyers.

The laying of asphalt and cement streets in Guatemala City, Tegucigalpa, Honduras and San Jose, Costa Rica, is given as the reason for the increased number of cars going to the latter country. While South America has been interested only in pleasure cars, the tendency in the commercial vehicle is testified to be scattered orders coming from the larger cities.



SEAL UP MOTORS AGAINST FOOLS

Manufacturers of the Power Trucks Shown Guard Against Tampering by Drivers.

One of the most interesting things about the development of the motor truck as shown by the vehicles exhibited is the care taken to safeguard the trucks from the recklessness and ignorance of fool drivers. In some instances provision has been made to seal up certain parts of the trucks in an effort to make certain that the trucks will be run only at a conservative rate of speed.

A fixed ignition is being adopted for the truck use and many makers of business motor vehicles are putting governors on the engines in order to prevent the drivers sending the vehicles along at a rate that would soon send the trucks to the junk heap or the repair shop. In the case of one company they openly state that their light delivery wagon has been so designed that even a 16-year-old boy of sixteen cannot easily harm its mechanism. Because it is the general practice to pay cheaply paid men on motor trucks the makers of this class of vehicles must make them as near foolproof as possible.

Another tendency of motor truck design is to so construct the chassis that it is possible to remove the transmission or the clutch and engine more than a few minutes and has natural wood wheels. The motor is of the L head type, of 4½ inch bore and 5-inch stroke. For 1912 the valve stems, springs and push rods have been completely housed by an extension on the cylinders and a removable aluminum cover.

An adjustable magneto coupling allows the magneto to be timed independently of the timing gears. Two separate ignitions are used, the two systems being provided, the current for one being supplied by a four-cell coil and battery and the other by a Bosch magneto. The multiple disc clutch is of the dry plate type and is provided with a brake. The rear axle is of the full floating type. A cover on the housing permits the differential mechanism to be readily removed or adjusted. The axle shafts carry large flanges, to which the wheels are bolted. The frame is heavy, raised over the rear axle and necked in front. The wheel base of 125 inches and long three-quarter elliptic rear springs, give the car every appearance of being extremely comfortable and easy riding.

SELDON CAR HAS BUT ONE CHASSIS

Many Body Designs, However, Are Within the Reach of the Purchaser.

The Whitney-Barney Company, which is one of the latest of the local companies, is displaying the Seldon car, which is shown in one model chassis of forty horsepower, with five regular body styles.

The five and seven-passenger touring car models are similar in design, the only difference being the heavier springs and longer tonneau in the seven to accommodate the two extra seats. Like all the Seldon models, they are equipped with foredoors. A cowl of aluminum covers the dash and forms a rigid support for the windshield. The doors are wide.

Besides the centre dome light in the closed cars, there are two corner lights for reading. There is a complete toilet box, besides a memorandum and card case. For the men of the family are provided such conveniences as clothes brush, cigar case and match box. Provision is made for wet umbrellas in a simple arrangement, which carries off the drip underneath the floor of the car.

The Seldon chassis is painted white, with vermilion in the frame channels, and has natural wood wheels. The motor is of the L head type, of 4½ inch bore and 5-inch stroke. For 1912 the valve stems, springs and push rods have been completely housed by an extension on the cylinders and a removable aluminum cover.

An adjustable magneto coupling allows the magneto to be timed independently of the timing gears. Two separate ignitions are used, the two systems being provided, the current for one being supplied by a four-cell coil and battery and the other by a Bosch magneto. The multiple disc clutch is of the dry plate type and is provided with a brake. The rear axle is of the full floating type. A cover on the housing permits the differential mechanism to be readily removed or adjusted. The axle shafts carry large flanges, to which the wheels are bolted. The frame is heavy, raised over the rear axle and necked in front. The wheel base of 125 inches and long three-quarter elliptic rear springs, give the car every appearance of being extremely comfortable and easy riding.

The Car That Marks My Limit

By R. E. Olds, Designer

Reo the Fifth—My Farewell Car—is one of the sights of the Show. After 25 years spent in motor car building, here's the best I can do. I regard the car as close to finality.

Forget the Price

I built this car as my final achievement without any thought of the price. We fixed the price when the car was completed.

The car was built to embody the best I have learned through 25 years of experience. It marks the limit of my capabilities, after building tens of thousands of cars.

All my prestige is at stake on it.

Forget when you see it, the price of $1,055. Judge it only as a car which, in my estimation, can never at any price be materially excelled.

The Best Men Know

Some makers, of course—to justify prices—will claim to make better cars.

I shall not dispute them. I have only to say that, after 25 years, here's the best I can do. After searching the world for ideas and devices, here is the best that I have discovered.

If any man knows a better material for any part, he knows more than I. If he has found a device better than I here employ, he has found out what I haven't.

Better workmanship I know is impossible.

Nothing Too Good

Nothing at any cost has been considered too good to employ in this car—my finest creation.

The steel for each part has been made to a formula. And all steel is analyzed, so I know its exact composition.

I use Nickel Steel in the axles—Vanadium Steel in the connections. For the gears I use a special alloy which makes the best gears I have ever tried out.

I test these gears with a crushing machine—not a hammer. So I know to exactness what each gear will stand.

The magneto is put to a radical test. The carburetor is doubly heated, for low-grade gasoline.

For my bearings I use the Timken Roller and the Hyatt High Duty—the costliest and best that are made.

In every part I insist on big margin of safety. At every step in my factory there are countless tests and inspections. Those 25 years have taught me well the folly of taking chances. I go to the other extreme.

To build a better chassis in any particular I regard as entirely impossible.

A Beautiful Car

If I slighted at all it would be in the finish. To you that is merely a matter of pride.

But here, too, you will find the last touch of perfection. The body has 17 coats. The upholstering is deep, and of genuine leather. Curling is hair. The lamps are enameled. Even the engine is nickel trimmed.

Note the long wheel base, the roomy tonneau. Note the big wheels and big tires. Nothing is lacking in Reo the Fifth which you can desire in a car.

Center Control Clear Front—No Levers

To this car I have added my new center control. Gear shifting is done by a sort of cane handle, between the two front seats. It is done by moving this handle not more than three inches in each of four directions.

The clutch and both brakes are operated by foot pedals. So there are no side levers in the way of the driver. The entrance in front is as clear as it is in the tonneau.

These features make possible the left-hand drive, the same as in electrics. The driver no longer sits on the wrong side of his car.

Initial Price, $1,055

This car for the present is sold at $1,055, but this price is not guaranteed. This price is based on present cost of materials—the lowest they have been in years.

We shall keep the price at $1,055 just as long as it is possible. But our contracts with dealers all provide for advance, and any higher cost for materials must put a higher price on the car.

This initial price is the minimum. It means the paring of every cost down to the quick. It is based on enormous production of a single type. We have left no margin for advance in materials, so the price must be fixed month by month.

But today's price is $1,055. And you will find no car among all at the Show which offers nearly so much for the money.

See This Car

Most motor car lovers will regard this car as one of the sights of the Show.

The future will bring minor changes in cars. But no Show of the future, in my estimation, will show a car better in any essential than this, My Farewell Car.

J. W. MAGUIRE WELL KNOWN IN BOSTON

Has Handled Pierce Cars in This City for Many Years.

No man is better known to the local motor trade than is J. W. Maguire, a man who for ten years past has handled the Pierce product here in Boston. Mr. Maguire is a pioneer of the motor industry in all that the term implies, having years ago started with the one-cylinder Pierce Stanhope, which was the predecessor of the present high-grade six-cylinder, the car that has done such excellent work in the Glidden contests of the past few years, and which make of cars has the distinction of having won this trophy a greater number of times than any other one car.

Mr. Maguire's thorough confidence in the Pierce car is shown by the fact that he was the first to bring it to Boston and has since remained faithful to it, the agency having remained with him from the very first.

In speaking of the Pierce product, Mr. Maguire said: "The line this year is fully the equal of what it was in previous seasons. It comprises everything that one can desire in a six-cylinder, from the runabout to the limousine, and in the latter we are showing some of the very finest of bodies, as well as chassis. The Pierce plant has always been noted for the excellent quality of its body work, and the present models are entirely in keeping with that reputation, there being nothing whatsoever lacking in the finish, style or appointments. In fact, the enclosed Pierce car of today is as neat in appearance, finish and appointments as the home of the wealthiest of our residents."

SHAWMUT TIRES NEW ENGLAND QUALITY

In few other products are quality and materials and perfect construction shown so prominently as in tires. Shawmut tires are made near Boston by skilled men trained in New England conscientious labor.

Shawmut tires are made of the best rubber and the best fabric. Their business is conducted along lines of broad-minded business policy. Shawmut Wrapped Tread Quick Detachable Clincher Tires and Shawmut Wrapped Tread Quick Detachable Tires give the user greater mileage than any other tires.

The Shawmut Tires are exhibited at space 452 at the show. We advise automobile owners to call and examine into the merits of this New England product.

Improvements Facilitate.

Much effort has been expended in introducing time saving factors in different trucks. This idea was launched several seasons ago when the rapidly demountable motor was introduced. This is still with us but has gained only a very few adherents within the last couple of seasons. The way in which time has been saved is in the use of the demountable dual solid rubber tire. One can readily see that when it is necessary to send a truck wheel to the factory simply because a tire has come off. With the demountable idea much time and also money has been saved. ular equipment.

FINE DISPLAY OF JACKSON CARS

A New and Successful Departure Is the Latest Product of the Jackson.

In the Jackson line the leader is the fifty-horsepower Model 52. The exhibit includes the 52, Models 42 and 32, five-passenger touring cars of forty and thirty horsepower respectively, and a thirty-horsepower roadster model, four different chassies being represented.

The 1912 line is a departure from anything the Jackson company has produced in its ten years. The Model 52 body is low, with ample room in front and in the tonneau for comfort in touring, and is of a true torpedo type, with control levers, door handles, etc., inside. In these respects the other two Jackson touring cars are identical with the Model 52, the only difference being in size of motor and length of wheelbase.

A marked change in the Jackson construction begins and ends with the new body, for other features which have been characteristic of these cars for some years are retained. The motor remains the same type that was evolved in 1908 and has not undergone, since that time, any change involving its basic principles. The characteristic feature of the motor is the seating of the valves on an angle of 45 degrees in the opposite sides of aluminum cylinder heads. Instead of being operated by long push rods from a camshaft in the base of the motor, the Jackson valves are actuated by an overhead camshaft driven from the crankshaft by a vertical shaft and bevel gears.

For this construction is claimed freer and quicker admission and explosion of the gases and a more complete scavenging of the burnt gases. Another feature is the equipment of the ends of the rocker arms with rollers.

Motor, clutch and transmission are a unit inclosed in a dust-proof case and flexibly suspended in the frame. Another feature which is continued on all models is the full floating rear axle equipment of full elliptic springs.

Model 52 has 56-inch wheels and tires. Demountable rims are supplied as regular equipment.

A SPECIAL CLAIM FOR DISTINCTION

Studebaker Company Is Making a Most Interesting Display of Its Product.

"The oldest car in the show."

This is the unique distinction which the Studebaker corporation claims for the E-M-F "30," different body types of which will form interesting parts of the firm's exhibit at the big automobile show.

Of course, the claim of age is not made for the individual models on exhibition. These are obviously bright and gleaming, and embody the very latest features of manufacturing progress. The cougar does apply, however, to the Model 30 car itself which, in all essential features, remains identical with the earliest E-M-F "30" produced.

The E-M-F "30" was the first car of its manufacturer, and bore the factory designation of "Model A." As such it was marketed in 1908. And the Studebaker corporation is still building the "Model A" E-M-F "30."

Of course, the car has changed considerably with the passing of years. Yet, with the exception of a few minor refinements, these changes have been almost entirely in body type and detail. The remarkable story of this evolution forms the basis of a booklet, from the pen of E. LeRoy Pelletier, the Studebaker Corporation's advertising director. This booklet, "Model A to Show," Mr. Pelletier has entitled the booklet, which was distributed for the first time during the exhibition at Grand Central Palace.

The E-M-F "30" has changed considerably since the last show. The wheel base has been lengthened four inches and affords considerable more comfort—a result further enhanced by long semi-elliptic rear drop frame has resulted in a marked lowering of the body and the car. Another worthy improvement has been the placing of the control levers, which are the latest thing, on top of the steering wheel, instead of on the cross frame, below the wheel, as formerly. The gear-shift and emergency brake levers have been placed inside the body of the car and brake rods are now concealed. All models are now equipped with four doors.

A radical innovation on a car of this price is the left-hand drive, placing the driver in a convenience which will appeal with especial force to the experienced motorist.

Several improvements in finish add to the distinctive nature of the E-M-F "30." Blue-black is the standard color, with gray wheels and wood wheels.

On account of the lack of space to exhibit the entire line of E-M-F "30" body types, the Studebakers are showing but two cars of this popular line, a five-passenger touring car and a four-door roadster.

The Studebaker-Flanders "20" the Studebakers are marketing as a companion car to the E-M-F "30," has a similar chassis model from the one that was shown at the Garden last year. Material advancement was been the addition of three-speed transmission and a three-point drive on both the touring car and roadster models. The wheel diameters have decreased from thirty-two to thirty inches, the Wire Special speed type being the only model to retain the larger size.

Without changing the bore or stroke of the cylinders, the power has been greatly increased by enlarged valves, lengthened pistons and other refinements. The engine is now cast of aluminum. This is also true of the transmission case.

The changes in the Flanders "20" were so sweeping this season as to make it of most a new car. To properly introduce it to the public, the Studebaker Corporation entered it freely in practically all the big reliability runs of the season. It was universally successful and developed into one of the most popular cars of the year, from the standpoint of sales.

All of the four E-M-F "30" and Flanders "20" types, on exhibition, are familiar to motorists all over the world. The cars involve no changes more recent than mid-season.

An interesting feature of the Studebaker exhibit is the fact that, in every respect, the show cars have been built of regular stock materials and differ in no feature from those regularly on sale at the various Studebaker Corporation retail stores and branches. This statement applies even to finish. Every endeavor has been made to make the exhibit a representative one, rather than an endeavor to attract attention by the use of unusual finish of a special nature.

Before the show the Studebakers announced their intention to build 50,000 cars during 1912. This is a figure away in excess of anything in the world's automobile history, for cars of this size and type, and, if attained, will represent by far the largest value ever produced by a year's product of an automobile factory.

Physicians Are the Largest Users of Automobiles

Wherever an attempt is made to classify automobile users according to their vocations it will be found that the medical profession not only appears at the head of the list, but leaves a comfortable margin between its own figures and those of the nearest competitor. No other calling has availed itself of the advantages of the automobile with greater fullness.

Its wasting a habit the automobile has taken on the doctors' appreciation may be gathered from a statement of the Matheis Briscoe Motor Company that of 51,000 Maxwells in use at the present time 16,342 are in the hands of physicians. This gives the medical profession a lead that is not likely to be overcome for some time.

In calling the motor car into his important service, the doctor does not pay tribute to fashion, but he adopts the modern method of individual transportation in the same spirit in which he utilizes the wireless telegraph or the telephone, as the acceptance of improved apparatus.

It is essential, especially to the country practitioner, that he possess facilities for independent transportation. The familiar picture of the doctor's horse and buggy, like the graceful curve of the antique in the living room, has not its significance, the sentiment of which feels and loves, but it is appreciated and in its stead we see the automobile, which is certainly adapted to the professional man's needs, since it saves him many longhours' fatigue, besides doing it better, cheaper and quicker than by any method predecessor.

In recounting the many allurements of the motor car for use by the doctor, the greater speed obtained naturally is an important consideration—though it is well to bear in mind that the main factor is not the capability of the automobile to travel a certain number of miles per hour but that of maintaining a high speed for an indefinite length of time.

First of all, the automobile has greater speed, and thus it saves time. It possesses greater endurance, since it is not subject to fatigue and may be driven fifty or one hundred miles without detriment to its life or its readiness to respond to its every turn and stroke. In short, in other words it requires no rest after coming in from one call, a simple turn of the starting handle being sufficient to send the car on another errand.

The automobile is more sanitary than horses, because, unlike the animal, it is cleanly, and does not feel responsible for odors that are inseparable from places where horses are kept. It does more than horses even when used to the fullest limit. It requires feeding only when running, while causing no expense whatever during periods of nonuse.

It doubles the usefulness of the physician because he can call upon his patients in one-third the time, or he can call on three times the number of patients, increasing in either case his value to the community, and last, but not least, his income—not to forget the increased opportunity for study and research, things which in our modern life are of equal importance.

Poss Light Delivery Wagon.

The Poss Motor Company of Detroit, Mich., has recently opened a New England connection, under the name of the Poss Motor Company of New England, at 121 Massachusetts avenue, Boston, in order to give better service to their many agents and customers.

Arrangements are also being made for a first-class service depot, where a full line of parts will be carried.

The Poss Company has had a great deal of experience in building light delivery wagons, and at present is devoting its exclusive time to the production of a 1,000-pound carrying capacity city wagon for grocers, provision dealers, laundries, florists, dry goods, etc.

It is a twenty-five-horsepower, four-cylinder, four-cycle, water-cooled wagon and will sell for $850 complete.

A full line will be on exhibition at the store and at Exhibit 21 of the Commercial Motor Vehicle Show.

Foot Warmer Matches Upholstery

A foot warmer, covered with cloth like the lining of the car and lined with lambs' wool is a great comfort and is really more pliable than the leather covered ones.

CARS OF MANY TYPES ARE SHOWN

Frank E. Wing Has a Most Comprehensive Exhibit of Marmon Cars.

The F. E. Wing Motor Car Company's exhibit of Marmon cars is more than usually attractive this year, which is saying a great deal when the excellence of their exhibits in past years is considered. The 1912 models of this well known car are attracting much attention and exciting favorable comment, which is well deserved and a testimonial to its sterling worth. The Marmon has made for itself, under the able handling of the Wing Company during the last seven years, a reputation for reliability, power, efficiency, economy and comfort which it well merits, and is recognized today as one of the truly great cars.

A full line of the regular stock models is shown, including five-passenger touring car, four-passenger suburban roadster and two-passenger roadster. In addition is shown a regular stock chassis which is a marvel of strength and simplicity. A working model of the selling system of the Marmon, which has been a very popular one in the truly wonderful sales system of the Marmon on the American tracks and speedways, as well as in the hands of the factory agents, it is absolutely and simple in its operation through the medium of a gear and pinion located by the intake cam shaft, and perfectly lubricated at every moving part of the motor, regardless of the speed at which it is driven. It is well worth an examination. The rear axle construction is also exhibited, together with the steering gear, bearings, gears, etc., of the Marmon worm drive.

Many of the Marmon cars will be attracted by an enclosed drive "Sociable" body, a type "out of the ordinary" in design. It is built on the same chassis as the touring car, and is one of the most attractive features in its light weight, weighing as it does approximately the same as the five-passenger touring car with full equipment. It is a body of six passenger comfortably fit on the rear seat which may be removed if desired, the chauffeur occupying a separate compartment within the front. The interior arrangement of this compartment can be readily removed, converting the interior into a roomy receptacle, making it an ideal outfit for the business man who drives his own car. On the rear of the car, and accessible from the inside, are compartments carrying space for tube and cowmudcons carrying space for tube and cowmudcons. The interior trimmings are in a gray of whipcord and leather, and soft. It seems the upholstering is deep and soft. It seems the upholstering is deep and soft, a fish is a harmonious blending of soft gray and brown, with the body in a shade of red that blends perfectly and gives life to the whole scheme.

Mayor Starts Motor Bus Service.

Mayor Joseph Versailles of East Montreal has instituted motor bus service between his municipality and Montreal proper. He has an Alco chassis equipped with a body that accommodates thirty passengers and a considerable amount of baggage.

The bus used for this service has proven an innovation. It makes trips daily on schedule time.

GOODRICH CO. SHOWS LATEST IN TIRES

Every Style of Tire for Both Trucks and Pleasure Cars is Shown.

One of the most complete exhibits of motor tires is that made by the B. F. Goodrich Co., which embraces almost every known style of tire. From the pneumatic used on the pleasure car to the solids for the heavy trucks.

The Goodrich tire is so well known in the auto great work that it needs no introduction whatsoever. Its record in the races of the past few years have placed it in a high position in the motor world. The smooth tread and the non-skids are shown, as well as the dual, which latter, in the way it has come into general use, is hence as the full benefits and value of which are being realized by the motor truck owners.

The Goodrich company is not only producing a line of excellent quality, but is likewise carrying on an educational campaign of value to the owner, inasmuch as it points out ways and means of caring for the tires to better advantage than is generally followed out. The company has made strong efforts to give the users every information and advice that will lead to better tire service, which is more than the mere selling of tires. In a series of booklets the company explains the difficulties that the motorist is exposed to, as well as the economies as a result of careless and inconsiderate usage are set forth in text and picture, the whole making an object lesson which is worthy of study.

Among the tires shown by the Goodrich Company are the Fabric and Goodrich clincher, the Goodrich quick-detachable, the Goodrich Safety Tread and the Palmer-Wells for electric vehicles. In addition to these, the company will feature the Goodrich wireless type, especially designed for motor trucks. This tire is composed of two parts a steel base, a hard rubber sub-base and a soft tread, all of which are united by a special manufacturing process, which eliminates the necessity for the use of metal or wire fastening devices. The tire is attached to its steel base by means of dove-tail grooves into which the hard rubber sub-base is keyed, so that the entire surface of the base is covered. A section of this type shows wave outlines forming the surfaces of the steel base, which are engaged in corresponding wave lines of the soft rubber tread.

Flentje Absorbers Shown.

"The Best in the World" is the appellation applied to the Flentje Shock Absorber by its makers, in stating this, they are not looking for any loopholes to escape standing behind their claim, but are willing to post $5,000 a side of any time with their shock absorber manufacturer that can show something better.

A full line of this shock absorber will be on exhibit at the show by the Flentje Company of Cambridge. So successful has the principle of this shock absorber proven that the United States Government is being somewhat similar on its army trains and trains temporarily staked for Winter use 650 miles. From the report of the road commissioners it appears that during the season of 1911 there were built forty-one miles of wagon roads, twenty-seven miles of Winter dirt roads, and 445 miles of trails, and in addition many miles of trails were staked temporarily for Winter use.

LONGEVITY AND DURABILITY HERE

Method of Construction of the Garford Is a Most Interesting One.

By F. F. WENTWORTH.

Longevity, durability and luxuriousness are the three predominating requisites employed in building Garford cars; in fact, they are the watchwords of the Garford plant at Elyria, Ohio.

Since my career as a manufacturer, first of bicycle parts, then of finished automobile parts and then automobiles, my one aim has been to limit the best regardless of expenditures used.

The history of the Garford plant has been so closely identified with the advance of the automobile industry that those causes which have led up to the present magnificent position being possessed by the public can be readily seen, and it be of very great interest to any one contemplating the purchase of automobiles of this type.

The engineers have always been men of exceptional ability, and it is very interesting that a comparison between the 1905 Garford and the present products of what are acknowledged as two of the highest grade car plants of this country, will reveal the fact that the same principles incorporated in our cars principles of design and construction which were then employed as being the maximum of engineering skill in this country.

A comparison of the Garford 40 with any other high grade car in the class will reveal the fact that it is probably the only car of its type and class in the country which is specifically designed for a particular purpose, that is, for the distinctly a family car, built for that purpose and no other. It is designed to meet the requirements of the man of family who desires the best that can be had at any consideration for his wife and children. We believe it represents to the individual world what the Steinway piano does to the parlors of the homes of this country.

Our methods of construction I believe are correctly expressed when in vogue in a watch factory that any parallel with which the writer is familiar. A recent investigation of the equipment by outside experts developed the startling fact that the manufacture of typewriters and other machines of like delicate character could be carried on without any difficulty with the tools and machinery now in use.

The Garford company is not only producing a line of excellent quality, but is likewise carrying on an educational campaign of value to the owner, inasmuch as it points out ways and means of caring for the tires to better advantage than is generally followed out. The company has made strong efforts to give the users every information and advice that will lead to better tire service, which is more than the mere selling of tires. Here is a New Model! The Best Utility Car You Ever Saw and the Latest Thing in Automobiles

For a long time many owners have begged us to build a car for both work and pleasure. "We want," you have told us, "a car which is both comfortable and good looking, whether as a touring car or runabout."

Yes, there was the rub. To get a car which as a touring car had comfort and style and as a utility car real usefulness.

Other manufacturers had tried the problem, but without success at any reasonable price. Either their creations were clumsy and not much use for work, or as a touring car they had the riding qualities of a springless buckboard.

To solve this problem, we brought the brains and experience of the best engineers and factories in the automobile industry. The Flanders "20" Demi-Tonneau is the result. It is a winner. Judge for yourself. Look over the car and criticize it. Test it by any standard you choose. It will convince you that in its touring car features and in its extraordinary adaptability it is the perfect utility car.

Studebaker is the Name

This new Flanders "20" Demi-Tonneau is a Studebaker product. Let us make that plain, because the name Studebaker is your conclusive guarantee that the car is the best of its kind.

When we designed this car we called upon the experience of sixty years of Studebaker leadership in vehicle manufacture and upon the command of the best brains and factories in the automobile industry.

We studied the demand from every angle. We digested the letters which reached us from all parts of the country and so made certain of your needs. Thus armed, we built the Flanders "20" Demi-Tonneau. We retained all the elegant appearance and comfort which have made the Flanders "20" Touring Car so popular that 30,000 cars will not supply this year's demand. The chassis is the standard Flanders "20." Then we deftly adapted the Demi-Tonneau for a wide scope of utility purposes. The Tonneau is detachable. We provide two extra bodies, either or both of which may be purchased with the car.

These wonderful pleasure car qualities and unapproached utility advantages make the Flanders "20" Demi-Tonneau the Best Utility Car You Ever Saw.

And the name "Studebaker" guarantees it.

A Car for Work or Play

As a Touring Car, the illustration speaks for itself. The Flanders "20" has a great reputation for giving satisfaction. The Demi-Tonneau will give you satisfaction. It is finished as carefully as if it were always to be a Touring Car. Your own eye will tell you it is exceptionally good looking and a demonstration will prove that it rides most comfortably.

But in three or four minutes, by loosening four bolts, you can remove the tonneau entirely.

Then you can have your choice of three equipments. Either a flat deck or a low box body with fly boards, or a roomy, closed delivery body finished like a coach for delivery purposes among discriminating people. Either body can be instantly fastened tightly into place and each body is interchangeable.

How often you have wondered why a good utility car wasn't for sale at a low price! You need a car in your work and yet you would like to use it to take your family or friends for a drive in the evening or on Sunday.

The Flanders "20" Demi-Tonneau is just the car for you. It will work like a Trojan all day and in five minutes in the evening be ready for a pleasant drive into the open country.

Doesn't that feature get your interest?

The Car Will Be Very Popular

Mr. Contractor, you need it. All week long the Flanders "20" Demi-Tonneau will carry you and your tools from one job to another, and on Sunday be ready to take the family wherever you choose to go.

For You who have Country Places this Flanders "20" Demi-Tonneau will prove a Bonanza. As a Touring Car it is always at your service, and when you need it, it will do your work.

You need this car, too, Mr. Florist.

So do you, Mr. Druggist.

In fact, the usefulness of Flanders "20" Demi-Tonneau is almost unlimited. It is the perfect utility car. Traveling Men, who carry heavy samples, Merchants, Gas Fitters, Electricians, Confectioners, Butchers, and every man who can profitably use a light utility car and who can enjoy the Touring Car equipment, needs this Flanders "20."

If you have rather heavy loads to carry or ungainly bundles, get the fly board body. If you want something very swell and protecting your goods perfectly, get the closed delivery body. Best of all, get them both. You can change them in an instant and thus are ready for anything.

Flanders "20" is Reliable

Of the power of the car and its unequalled records for endurance and speed, no need to speak here. The world knows the Flanders "20's" extraordinary success, and today many thousands of Flanders "20's" are being sold all over the globe. Last year stock Flanders "20's" won the most important reliability runs held in the country, the severest hill climbs, and set world's speedway records for from 1 to 20 miles. No other car ever did as much.

Suffice it that this car is built by the great Studebaker organization and is worthy the standing which that name carries.

The price is within your means:

With Extra Fly Board Body.....$850
With Extra Closed Delivery Body.....$875
With Both Extra Bodies.....$900

The car is fitted for both single seat and touring car tops. Top and windshield extra.

We can promise deliveries by April 1st, but the demand for these cars is certain to be heavy. You must get your order in at once if you want prompt delivery.

And all the other things we want to tell you about this car we will explain at the Show, where the car will be on exhibition. To see it is to be convinced that it's a wonder and even better than we say.

Incidentally, you will see in our exhibit a Flanders split chassis, cut as though a giant buzz saw had split straight down its center. It will show you graphically how our car is made.
